THOSE who have bought or those who are about to buy a Grey Parrot, should get "Nutsell No. 17," it only costs 25d. post free, but the tips it gives are priceless; from: "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. (2d. from agents, a list of whom is published frequently).

FOR sale, several young White Java Doves, 1 cock Bleeding Heart pigeon, perfect condition, 1 pink and grey Parrot, paired with White Java Cockatoo, yellow and white; these last have been three years in outdoor aviary, are in perfect condition. (See Hartwell, Aylesbury. (1769)

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutsell No. 14," from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 25d. From agents (see list frequently published).

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-checked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased 9/- from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutsell No. 20," 25d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published)

Messrs. Forse and Son, secs. Leyton C.B.A., write that their show fixed for Nov. 13 will be for members only.

In the review of the schedule of the Bristol F.A., published last week, the date of the show was stated as Oct. 1. This should be Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, as in the advt.

I am pleased to say, writes Mr. W. J. Norman, hon. sec. Bristol East C.B.S., that Mr. Davis, of Bedminster, Bristol, is recovering from a very severe operation, and we hope to see him present with us again shortly.

Would secretaries who have written, or intend writing me lectures, etc., writes Mr. J. Steel, Dalkeith, please understand that my duties as Quartermaster of D.A.D. Red Cross and teacher to a large company in ambulance work are too manifold to permit of my undertaking any further engagements this season.

The dates of the four old bird shows of the Bradford East O.S., are Sept. 26; judge, Mr. S. Wilcock; Oct. 20, Mr. A. Cooper; Nov. 17, Mr. L. C. Casey; and Dec. 15, Mr. L. Dykes. At each show there are eight classes in champion section, and eight in novices, together with two selling classes.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Jas. Keir, Perth.

It is with deepest sympathy, writes Mr. J. L. Smith, that I have to announce the death of Mr. Jas. Keir, the late secretary of the City and County of Perth O.A., who passed away very suddenly on Sept. 8. He leaves a widow and family of seven. I offer, in the name of his brother fanciers, our sincere sympathy to his sorrowing wife and family. He was a well-known fancier and lover of Norwich Plainheads and British Birds, and at all times wrought hard for the society.

Mr. T. F. Cook, Bristol.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Wm. J. Norman, Sec. Bristol East C.B.S., that I have to announce the death of our respected member, Thomas F. Cook, who died at his residence on Sept. 2, after a serious operation. He was a very keen fancier, his favourite being the Yorkshire Canary, and had won many prizes in the past eight years. A wife and two children who are left to mourn his loss have the sympathy of all the members of the Bristol East C.B.S., many of whom attended the funeral.

We have received information that the following societies have decided to abandon their annual show for this season:—Nottingham and Notts. P.S., Hartlepool's C.B.S., Barnstaple and N. Devon C.B.S., Cheltenham C.B.S., Leyton C.B.A., Rotherham C.B.S., West Bromwich C.B.S., City of Dundee C.B.S., Irvine C.B.S., Bo'ness F.A. The show of the Grantham C.B.S., fixed for Nov. 26, is postponed.

We have received the year book of the Yorkshire Union of C.B. Societies. This well got up annual contains the names and addresses of the officials of and delegates to the Union, portraits of the President, Mr. Wm. Cruise, and the Sec., Mr. H. Hill, the general rules, the show rules, list of societies affiliated to the Union, with names and addresses of their members and schedules of some of their shows, together with much other useful information. The secretary to the Union is Mr. Horatio Hill, 15, Settle Terrace, Thornton Lane, Little Horton, Bradford.

A Belated Cuckoo.

A Full-grown young Cuckoo has been seen flying about St. Fagans (near Cardiff) as late as August 29. This, it is said, is the latest date in the year a Cuckoo has been recorded to have been seen in this country. Afraid to go abroad, possibly, owing to the war!

Post Your Promise To-day.

We Want More Singing Canaries for the War Hospitals.

GENEROUS though the response from readers has already been, we are asking for further promises of singing Canaries to cheer the period of convalescence of our gallant fighting men in the numerous war hospitals which have been established throughout the country.

We are sure bird-lovers will not desire that the demand should exceed the supply. May we ask you, kindly reader, to send YOUR promise to-day? You have only to fill in and post the appended form.

Bird-keepers of all classes have promised singing birds: in to-day's post we are glad to note a form from Lord Poltimore (Poltimore Park, Exeter). Follow this generous lead in so good a cause. Post your promise at once.

By the kindness of Messrs. Capern (Bristol) the birds will be fed free for at least three months on their noted seeds.

Canaries for the Hospitals

I am willing, if called on any time during the next twelve months, to supply free of cost one singing cock Canary and small travelling cage, to be presented as a gift to any Hospital or Convalescent Home applying for same.

 To the Editor, CAGE BIRDS,
 151, Fleet Street, London.

Fanciers in the Glasgow district should remember that the show of the Scotch Fancy National Derby O.A. is on to-day (Sept. 19), and assist the officials by visiting the hall (note advert. on this page).

The year book of the Southern Yorkshire C.C. is to hand. It contains a list of officers and committee, rules of the association, scale of points with description of desirable qualities, bye-laws, members' names and addresses, details of cups and other specials, and the balance sheet for 1913-14. The latter shows an income of £30 7s. 6d., and an expenditure of £29 9s. 1d. The cash in hand, which was £4 5s. 9d. in 1913, is now £5 4s. 2d., and the association has, besides, a challenge cup valued at £10 10s. The hon. sec is Mr. J. W. Rennie, Junction Hotel, Andover.

Grey Wagtail's Eggs in August.

A farmer in the Manchester district recently found a nest containing eggs of a Grey Wagtail on the thatch of a hay rick. As the stack was only thatched about the third week in July the birds had unaccountably built since that time. The eggs, however, were cold, and had been deserted.

Over 300 B.F.C.C. Members.

I have now completed the Border Fancy C.C. list for publication, writes Mr. Walter B. Smart, the sec., so I may say that there is a slight falling off in membership from last year, owing no doubt to the terrible crisis the country is passing through. Still, we have turned the 300 mark. I hope to be able to send out the lists to members by the end of next week.

Protests Against Cancelling Shows.

Cancelling shows on account of the war has not met with approval in very many quarters, unless the venue for the show is required for military purposes. Mr. W. Watmough, writing in "Pigeons," says many show committees have been hasty and unwise in the action they have taken, and thinks that those who have not cancelled their fixtures should run their events as usual, and reap the reward which will be theirs. Other correspondents in the same journal also offer protests against cancellations.

Now, Exhibitors, Rally Round.

It becomes the duty of all fanciers to support to the full extent of their powers whatever shows are now being held. Remember that they are being gone through with solely out of a desire on the part of the various executives to assist the cage bird Fancy to maintain a live, healthy condition. Evidence your appreciation, exhibitors, by entering all the birds you possibly can; do your best to ensure that deserving societies shall not be faced with a loss. At Bristol show (see advert. this week) entries are extended until Sept. 23rd. There is a good classification, two excellent judges, and all profits go to the Red Cross Society.

PARS FROM THE POST-BAG.

I quite agree with you in calling to arms all bird fanciers. I have a Goldfinch-Canary Male you can have as soon as it is through the moult. Nothing would please me more than to hear one of my pet birds singing if I was lying in a hospital wounded.

WM. GLADWIN.

Darlington.

I shall be very pleased to give one or two cock Norwich Canaries for the hospitals, as I think your scheme a good one, and hope it will get all the support it so rightly deserves. Birds are on colour feed and will be ready in a fortnight if required.

G. A. DOWELL.

Yeovil.

Congratulations on your noble scheme for supplying hospitals with singing birds. I am sure they will bring a ray of pleasure to those who are called upon to suffer in the Empire's cause. I shall be delighted to supply one of my singing Rollers at any time you call upon me for same, one of my own breeding, Randall's strain.

G. H. DONALD.

Ashton-u-Lyne.

Nothing could give me greater pleasure than to respond to your thoughtful appeal to supply a songster to help cheer the hearts of our unfortunate heroes. I think the scheme an admirable one, and worthy of a hearty response.

A. C. BROTHWOOD.

Newport, Salop.

In answer to your call, I am more than pleased to offer you one of my birds to help cheer and comfort our brave soldiers who have had to fight for our rights. I think it is only the duty of every fancier to do the same, and hope you will get a good response.

W. H. PHIPPS.

Isleworth.

I shall be pleased to send two singing Canaries in support of your effort to cheer our brave wounded soldiers in our hospitals. I think your idea splendid and worthy of every breeder's support. Birds will be ready in about three weeks.

J. H. GARRETT.

Stockport.

It is a very nice idea to give a singing bird to the hospitals, etc., and I shall be pleased to send a Green Crested Canary. It sings very prettily now, and being this year's bird will prove to be a good singer.

GERTRUDE E. MEAD.

Torquay.

It gives me the greatest pleasure to offer you a singing Canary. I think it is as little as we can do for our brave countrymen.

ALBERT WHITEBY.

Bradford.

Nothing will give me more pleasure than to give a good singing cock Canary for any wounded soldiers' hospital in England. I will forward carriage paid to the nearest station one that will be no disgrace to the sender. I think your scheme of trying to find something to cheer up the wounded soldiers who have answered to their country's call a splendid one.

R. HUSBAND.

Cleveland.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

A Ringed Siskin-Canary Mule Caught.

SIR,—A friend having caught a bird of the above breed has sent it to me. If the loser will send the correct number on the ring he will have the bird restored to him.

WM. JEFFREY.

A Slander Repudiated.

SIR,—Whoever issued the invention as to Mr. James Vealland being of German nationality must be either extremely spiteful or very ignorant; probably the individual is both one and the other! There is nothing about the name that has a German sound in it, and most certainly nothing in the owner of the name that savours of the Teuton in any way whatever. Anybody more distinctly English I never met, being moreover an Englishman of a quiet unassuming type, besides being absolutely honest and just in all his dealings. Those who know him will not be influenced by any mischief-making. Straightforward and well-mannered is James Vealland, of Binstead.

Notes on the Fancy in New Zealand.

SIR,—The shows out in New Zealand, I think, are making headway. I have been out in New Zealand twice; have been two years there this time, and have come home for a trip, returning on September 25. My friends and myself have formed a cage bird association, and it is named after the bay on which I live, that is the Poverty Bay Caged Bird Association, Gisborne (300 miles from Auckland). Gisborne is a very nice place. We breed our Canaries out of doors and keep them out all the year round, so you will see it is a warm place. I may say our members are taking CAGE BIRDS to read, though it is not easy to get in New Zealand. I know that some, including Mr. F. Redfern, late of Huddersfield, send to your office direct for CAGE BIRDS. We pay 10s. a year for our membership. List of officers:—President, Mr. A. F. Gardner; vice-pres., Messrs. Jas. Johnstone (late of Glasgow), W. H. Lindley (of Yorkshire), and F. Redfern (late of Yorkshire); treas., Mr. L. T. Moore (of Australia); committee, Messrs. A. Warren, G. H. Ansell (of London), D. Blackburn, J. Alexander, A. Fraser, and L. T. Moore. Auckland Show was held on July 24-25. Mr. Tom Brown, their Yorkshire judge, is late of Halifax, and Mr. C. R. Duncan, the Norwich judge, is of New Zealand. Mr. J. G. McFarland won the silver cup and gold medal for the North Island championship for Yorkshires, and Mr. C. Robinson in Norwich. Gisborne Show was held on July 18, judge Mr. W. Bailey (late of Birmingham). This is the first show that Gisborne has had.

W. H. LINDLEY.

Late of Wombwell, Nr. Barnsley.

Tips on Soldering.

SIR,—I should be very glad if any fancier would kindly furnish a few tips on soldering punch bar cage fronts and holding the wires in position.

STANLEY L. TETRIE.

Cages and Birds on Warships.

SIR,—One of the profitable pastimes of many a naval man is making bird cages, and in the naval seaports there is a ready sale for them. These cages are made of wicker. Birds are not allowed on war ships except when the ship is leaving a foreign station, when they may be carried. The rule is that no man may have more than one bird. If this rule were ever to be followed literally it is safe to say that this unwritten permission would be speedily withdrawn, for the number of birds would be too much for the easiest first "luff" (lieutenant) possible to put up with. But there is no danger of this happening. The men who make the cages purchase the birds, and, with the assistance of their pals arrange matters satisfactorily. A man has half a dozen cages. He hands the cages round, and six men each take over one.

In many foreign ports the smallest and meanest of cages are used for selling birds, and the sailor gets the birds at a slight reduction by not having the cages. Very great ingenuity is shown by the men in the cages they make; some are really works of art. Very many more cages would no doubt be made were it not for the difficulty of not having anywhere to keep them. The sailor is moderate in his demands, and is satisfied to accept 7s. 6d. or so for a cage that has taken several days to make, and a bird that cost 3s. or 4s. Petty officers and, at times, officers purchase them to make presents, whilst residents in the ports are frequently glad to obtain them. The cages when occupied are sometimes kept covered over with a light cloth or handkerchief, whilst on board, to prevent the singing of the birds interfering with the sleep of the night duty men.

D. J. RICKARD.

The Passing of "Towd Mule."

SIR,—We, the members of the Leigh Linnet Club, have lost one of the best bird friends we ever had, in Mr. T. Statham's Linnet Mule, commonly called "Towd Mule." He would have been 14 years old next May, and he has been all over the North of England, both catching and singing, for friends of ours in Yorkshire, Westmorland, and Lancashire. I think that all our friends from the singing clubs will be sorry to hear that this bird is dead. I think it is not "self praise" (because Mr. Statham is a member of our club) when I say that he was one of the best birds in this country on quality song. Mr. Sissons, from Leeds, and Mr. Topping and Mr. Dobson, of Blackburn, will say the same. We (the Leigh Club) will send you a photo of "Towd Mule" singing in full vigour.

R. DISLEY, Sec.

The London and Provincial O.S. Autumn Show.

SIR,—I should like to mention that the entrance fee will be 1s. per entry, and that all entrance fees, without any deduction for expenses whatever, will be paid out as prize money. As our country members will be unable to show, owing to railway difficulties, our cups cannot be offered for competition, nor can special prizes be given from the funds of the Society. But donations towards the special prize fund will be gratefully accepted and acknowledged by me.

The sole object of this show is to try and help the Fancy and trade generally, therefore I trust the London fanciers will support us and by so doing help to minimise the loss which must naturally occur under the circumstances. The name of half and full particulars will appear in your next issue.

Paying Prize Money Promptly.

SIR,—Now that the show season is near at hand may I suggest, for the benefit of the Fancy in general, something that in our society has occurred to us as very simple, and yet far reaching. The idea came to me last year, and arose out of the way in which we pay our money on the sliding scale at the evening shows; no sooner are the cards on the cages than we have it reckoned up how much each exhibitor has won. Last year, while secretary of the Ornithological Society, I paid one man his money before four o'clock, he having satisfied me that he was the winner; he had motored down from Luton to the show. The rest was paid out to the members at eight o'clock the same evening, leaving me with only one exhibitor to post money on to, and he had his next day. What relief I found afterwards! No running round to catch members in, and worrying whether everybody was satisfied. I hardly knew we had had a show, except when I met a member as pleased as could be at the idea of not having had to wait for his money, as is the case with a great many shows. It hits this way, too. We'll say a man has little cash to spare, and is certain he can win. If he has to lay out his money on entrance fees, and cannot expect it back again for some weeks, it dampens his ardour. Whereas if he gets it back in the same week he will fill every cage he has. I have recently heard of a man whose exhibit was claimed for £2, and who didn't receive his money for some months, and had to buy another in the meantime. This is scandalous and with a working man too.

Forfar Gives Scotch Exhibitors a Chance.

SIR,—Kindly let the readers of CAGE BIRDS know that our Forfar Show is going to be held on October 31st, the same as usual, and being about the first show in Scotland this year we hope to have a good entry from fanciers.

Oxford Will NOT Cancel.

SIR,—The Oxford and District C.B.S. have decided NOT to cancel their open show. It will therefore take place as previously arranged on Thursday, October 22nd. It was decided to issue a number of tickets, half the proceeds of which are to be handed over to the local Relief Fund. As this will mean a loss to the society it is hoped fanciers will rally round us with entries, and so help to make the show a success.

Halifax Decides to Hold Its Open Show.

SIR,—The Halifax C.B.S. has decided to hold its open show, under Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. Rules, on October 3rd, as arranged. I have no doubt that you will have some correspondence from Mr. H. Hill (the Union Secretary) re prize money and paying same. Full prize money will be paid in all classes with 15 or more entries; five entries and under 15 will be paid on the sliding scale. No money specials will be given, but sectional specials in goods will be given throughout the show. We ask for the support of the Fancy. Our show room will be very comfortable, and any fancier sending exhibits can rest assured that they will have every attention at the hands of capable fanciers so as to ensure them a safe return. Schedules are now ready, and will be sent on application to me.

Abertillery Will Hold On.

SIR,—At the meeting of the Abertillery C.B.S. held September 12th, at the Prince of Wales's Hotel, Mr. Probert presiding, a discussion took place whether we should run our open show or not; and it was decided to hold the show on our old date, October 21st. Mr. Newell was selected as show manager, Mr. Cooper as judging steward, and Mr. Terrett and Mr. Russell as chief stewards. Will members please turn up at our next meeting, to-day, Saturday, September 19th, to make final arrangements.

Rosendale's Good News for Roller Fanciers.

SIR,—At the monthly meeting of the Rosendale Roller Canary Club held September 1st, the society decided to hold their annual Roller Contest on November 20 and 21, 1914. So as to give ample time for judging and full credit to every exhibit we have decided to have three judges, namely: Mr. J. B. Hesling (Wakefield), Mr. J. Tomlinson (Newcastle), and Mr. G. Wareing (Bury). We hope that Roller fanciers will give us a hearty response.

SIR,—At the Bradford East O.S. meeting, held September 1, it was decided that we go on with our open show, as previously arranged on October 10. Will fanciers please keep this date in mind, and help as much as possible, as we shall need all the support we can get to make it a splendid show, and keep the flag flying.

SIR,—May I trespass upon your valuable space to announce the fact that the seventh annual show of the above association, fixed for November 7th, at Llandudno, WILL take place as arranged. I hope to have the schedules ready in about a week, and shall be glad to send a copy to North Wales Fanciers, if they will kindly apply. My committee met to consider whether it was advisable to cancel the fixture in consequence of the war, but unanimously decided to proceed with the arrangements of the show, as they considered it the duty of all fanciers to carry on.

Brechin's Enterprise Deserves Its Reward.

SIR,—At a meeting of Brechin C.B.S. held September 9th it was unanimously agreed to go on with the annual show as usual, and it was also decided not to ask for subscriptions this year in view of the many calls on every class in consequence of the war. This means that unless fanciers rally round us with their entries we shall be faced with a considerable financial obligation. If others would take a leaf out of the Brechin fanciers' book there would be fewer cries of poor entries, for it is a well-known fact that at any show in Scotland Brechin fanciers' birds are well represented. We are sorry to have to state, however, that many fanciers do not support Brechin show in the way it deserves, but we trust that this year will prove an exception, and that Brechin members will be rewarded with a bumper entry for their enterprise.

SIR,—At the meeting held in the Station Hotel on September 9th, with Mr. Heslop in the chair, before a grand attendance, the most important item on the agenda was our annual show, November 7. It was decided unanimously to hold the show; so please, members, pull together and let us have a grand show. Anyone wishing to join our society can do so by sending name to me, or by coming to our meeting on October 14. Subs. must be paid a month before show to enable members to compete at same; subs. are now due.

A Chance for Bedfordshire Bird Lovers.

SIR,—You will be glad to know that we are not cancelling our show on October 15. We are giving all our gate and ticket money to the Prince of Wales's National Distress Fund (the local Mayor's list). The Mayor has kindly consented to present the prize money and specials at 8 o'clock the same evening (October 15th). Owing to Bedford being made a base for Territorials and the lincs being often taken up by the military, it was not thought advisable to hold an open show to all England for this season, but to make an extension of our local classes, and open them to Bedfordshire. Our motto is "Business as Usual."

Yorkshire Fanciers Have the Best of it at Southampton.

Sir,—The majority of the members of the Southampton C.B.S. have no cause to grumble at their luck during the 1914 breeding season, as the following results show:—

W. L. PAGE, Hon. Sec.

How Did Birds Originate?

Sir,—I see in CAGE BIRDS the question is still asked: How did Birds Originate? I spent some time in looking up the Scriptures, but it was time wasted; I gave you many passages of Scripture, both of birds, beasts, creeping things and man, but it was time thrown away.

J. I. HARGREAVES.

[We are sorry that our correspondent should apparently think that other readers of CAGE BIRDS have not a sufficient acquaintance with the Bible to be familiar with the account of Creation given therein. We ourselves thought it unnecessary to print columns of extracts therefrom; further, we considered that any discussion as to whether the Bible account of the Creation was final or otherwise to be outside the scope of our journal.—EDITOR.]

Sir,—Readers who have been interested in this correspondence and would like to learn what the evolution theory really is, might read a book (quite small and easy to understand) called "Evidences of Organic Evolution," by Romanes. It is probably in many Free Libraries. Anyone who reads it carefully will, I think, feel that the theory is practically proved. If there is any small, sensible book that tries to prove that there was a separate creation of each species I should be glad to know the name of it, as I should like to see any arguments in its favour. Perhaps Messrs. Johnson, Craig and Co. will tell us? Would they at the same time say if they believe that the different varieties of Canaries were separately created or have they been evolved from one kind?

(Rev.) H. A. SOAMES.

Sir,—In answer to the Rev. H. A. Soames, the late Rev. Dr. Talmage, of America, says: "I place the Bible account of how the brute creation was started opposite to the evolutionist's account. You know the Bible tells how the birds were made at one time, and the cattle made at another time, and the fish made at another time, and that each brought forth after its kind. A species never develops into anything but its own species. In all the ages and in all the world there has never been an exception to it." I agree with the above, which confirms Mr. J. I. Hargreaves's interpretation of the Bible account of the creation.

Mr. R. Maxwell Savage says: "The evolution of the bird from the reptile is obvious to anyone who knows anything of the subject. Mr. Wells demonstrates this beyond doubt." If it is to be the resemblance of one species to another that is to be decisive, let Mr. Savage try to produce a Carrion Crow from a pair of Rooks. If he can manage that it will favour his argument. Mr. Savage's account of the origin of man is quite different from that of the Bible, which is the highest authority on the subject. Dr. J. Bell Pettigrew, Chandos professor of anatomy and medicine at St. Andrew's University, is of the belief that man need not claim kinship with the ape. In his new work "Design and Nature," which was issued about six years ago, Dr. Pettigrew, in dealing with the "Origin and Career of Man," says:—

"If the authority and teaching of the Old Testament, and the possession by man of an extraordinary nervous system and brain be set aside, the preponderance of evidence, many are inclined to believe, is in favour of a lowly origin—that is, a savage or semi-savage origin. I am not of this way of thinking. There is, it appears to me, no proof that man is directly descended from the ape, and indirectly from the mollusc or the monad. The unchanged condition of physical man for the last nine, or more, thousand years is wholly opposed to such a conclusion."

"The brain of man in volume, complexity, and quality," continues Dr. Pettigrew, "transcends that of every other living form,

THE DANGER OF CANCELLED SHOWS.

A Well-known Exhibitor Suggests a Method of Avoiding It.

Sir,—I have been very much struck the last few weeks at the number of open fixtures that have been abandoned for this season on account of the present crisis. This is very much to be regretted, as I feel sure in my own mind that the Fancy will suffer, and not only at the present moment, but after the war is over, inasmuch as many fanciers will drop out of our ranks, especially the novices, by having so few opportunities to exhibit their pets. Personally, I believe that so far as the railway companies are concerned, the worst is over as regards the traffic, which means that we shall be able to trust our exhibits in the hands of the railway companies with little more than the ordinary amount of risk.

There are some important towns which no doubt will be handicapped by irregular railway service for some little time, and to which places it would be risky to send exhibits from a distance; and no doubt some of these places will also experience great difficulty in finding suitable rooms in which to hold shows. Under those conditions an open show would doubtless be out of the question. But to my way of thinking we can keep the ball a-rolling by organising district, or confined shows, that is several adjoining counties, as for instance Staffordshire, Cheshire, Shropshire, Warwickshire, and Derbyshire. I don't see why a good show or even more than one could not be run with success, confined to exhibitors resident in these counties (of course the same idea applies to other groups of counties throughout the country). There are many good Cage Bird Societies in these five counties with a fairly strong membership, likewise there are many exhibitors who belong to no society, and exhibiting members of societies that do not join hands with the others; are they to run no risk? I fancy I can hear this question being asked. My answer to this is, levy each exhibitor who does not belong to any of the societies which have combined to run the show, to the extent of say twopenny or threepenny (or something like that) for each class that he enters in—not so much on each entry that he makes in any one class, because if that were done I fancy in some cases an exhibitor might only make one entry in a class on account of having to pay extra for each entry, whereas if the levy was for each class he would enter more, when after his first entry he could enter as many more in that class as he choose at the usual fee.

I would suggest that any profits made on the show go to one of the many deserving war funds, such as the Red Cross Society, the Prince of Wales's Fund, etc.; let this fact be well known and advertised in the district where the show is held, and I have no doubt that there would result a nice little subscription towards the worthy object, and no necessity to fall back on the guarantee of the societies that are running the show.

I don't see why at least two good shows could not be held by those counties I have mentioned. They are all in close proximity and well served with railways. As Staffordshire is the most central of these five counties, is it not possible for one show to be held say at Stoke, which is in the midst of many fanciers, and another say at Wolverhampton or Birmingham? Any of these towns are within easy distance of all the above-mentioned counties. Well, there you are, brother fanciers, I have given you a few broad ideas which you may take for what they are worth, but which, I think, are quite workable. It would, at any rate, be better than having to keep our exhibits at home, and gaze moodily at them behind closed doors, because there are but few shows.

and establishes an impossible gulf between him and the apes, and everything below the apes."

Another distinguished scientist has recently stated that "the latest discoveries in geology contradict Darwinian evolution, and show that the most ancient man whose remains have been discovered in the records of geology was not descended from the ape, but if there be any relationship between the ape and man it is entirely of the opposite kind, and the former is an offshoot of some lower type of humanity rather than the progenitor." According to the above Mr. Savage is wrong and Mr. Hargreaves is right.

ARTHUR C. BROTHERHOOD.

A FEW FACTS ON CRESTS AND CREST BREEDING.

A lecture given before the London C.B.A. on September 8th. By ARTHUR J. WATCHAM.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies, and Gentlemen, I don't know what possessed our president to ask me to give a paper on the Crest; still less do I know whatever possessed me to accept the task of doing so. However, having given my promise I have endeavoured to put together a few facts as I have met them in the course of my somewhat extended breeding of the bird in question. It is quite likely that some of the views I here express may not quite coincide with the experience of yourselves, in which case I crave your indulgence and would ask you to please let me down as lightly as possible.

The Crest, as you obviously all know, is a conceived variety of the Canary—that is to say, it has been evolved from the ordinary little green bird we know as the original wild Canary, the same as the Norwich and various other kinds have been, but I think you will grant that the variety has necessitated a great deal more study and selection in its producing than other varieties, more especially when you consider the formation of the head feather of the Crest.

It is possible—in fact, probable, that the first Crest was nothing less than a sport, and in itself was without doubt something of a shocker, but it evidently occurred to someone that here was material for a new variety, and I would ask you just to consider for a moment the amount of persistent plodding that has been required to bring the Crest to the perfection in which we see it to-day.

I use the word perfection only in a figurative sense, as many of you would contend that perfection has not been reached, and for argument sake we will say that you adopt the beautiful drawings of an "ideal" Crest which we have sometimes had presented to us, then I say you are right in your contention, and I will further say that I am glad of it, for we are thereby left with the necessity of still devoting our energies and gaining further pleasure in our hobby in the endeavour to produce such perfection. I would like to suggest that once a perfect ideal is produced with any certain frequency, the hobby will die a natural death, or if you like, from senile decay.

The Price of Crests.

Speaking of the value of the crests, the exalted prices sometimes asked for them are frequently quoted as a deterrent to their being more generally taken up by fanciers. Well now, if one requires a really first-class Crest or Crest-bred one must be prepared to pay the price. But then, isn't it better for the novice or the beginner to purchase a pair or two at a reasonable price from a known breeder and endeavour to breed his own exhibition specimens? How much more pleasure will he derive when he takes honours with a bird of his own breeding than with one he has purchased. I feel somewhat convinced that the time is near at hand when all birds competing for club cups or specials will have to wear a ring, and be bred by the exhibitor. Then the gentleman who, loving a good Crest, cannot resist buying it (and it will be an ill day for the fancy when this gentleman ceases to exist) must be content with taking the 1st prize and the specials other than those offered by the club.

Touching the clear body Dark Crest and the even wing-marked Dark Crest, it would appear to me that if the breeder devotes sufficient attention to constantly producing these, the Crest itself must as a natural consequence suffer in some way or other; I do not think so much in formation as in length of feather. My own personal experience convinced me of this when I used to think the clear body Darks, or the wing-marked, to be the only ideal birds, and consequently devoted the majority of my pairs to produce these. I found the Crests began to diminish in size and the birds generally to get a little smaller.

I suggest this as being the reason:—We will say you breed a pretty little Dark Crest, clear bodied, hen that greatly strikes your fancy. You pair this to a Dark-cap Crest marked [this description is as given in the typed copy sent.—Editor] cock, which has been bred from an even-marked Dark Crest. You could be pretty sure what the progeny from this pair would be; but have you not in the meantime forgotten that the pair of birds lacked size, if even to only a small extent? And it is more than likely others from the same parents as these were much larger, but being green or variegated birds you have been willing to dispose of them in preference to your even-marked birds.

The Effect of the Ancestry.

I may mention that I still succeed in breeding a certain number of them, not from any set purpose, but simply because my strain of birds is likely to produce them; but, for fear you may consider I am contradicting myself, please let me repeat I do not pair with this object. Perhaps it may be that young of this class are more generally produced than a few years since, and I think we have to look to the grey or grizzle Crest for the reason. When I come to run my birds over in my mind I can trace the greys for some years back.

In breeding the Crest, as with other varieties, you will agree that it is not sufficient to use only selection or pedigree, or both; they must be used in conjunction with brains. That is to say, it does not suffice only to pair a young hen from someone's famous Crest hen to a two-year-old cock bred from another fancier's winning cock, and imagine the trick is done and that fame is won. I think you would be more likely to meet with disappointment than success, not that I wish to be understood to convey that it is not possible to so breed a show bird, but I do think you will more likely have to control your impatience and await the results of your future pairings, hence my contention of "brains."

Just here I should like to be forgiven for saying that as a body I think we fanciers are a little prone to consider our own views and opinions to be the only right ones—we forget that each meets with different experiences and is apt to place different construction on the same point.

The Advantages of Yellow Blood.

Now let us just pass a word on yellow Crests and the advantages to be gained from the use of them—apart from treating them as a sub-variety. First and foremost we obtain a great improvement in quality of feather from their occasional use, that is to say they are invaluable for refining the feather of birds that have become coarse from continual double-buffing. Further than this, if your birds are lacking in vein—that essential feature which we all so much admire, the judicious introduction of the yellow will greatly aid you in your object. Unless you are desirous of breeding yellows as part of your stud, it is not advisable to use them oftener than every third season. The principal reason for this lies in the fact of the feather of the yellow being of much more silky texture than the buff, consequently its continual use would perhaps detract from the width of the webbing of your buffs and apparently cause your birds to lose a little in size. But I myself think by the gain you attain in the other direction you are more than compensated for the loss of this feature.

PORTH AND RHONDDA VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 12, Headquarters. Decided not to hold a Table Show until later as moult seems later this year owing to the weather. Our Chairman, Mr. A. H. C. Legg, kindly promised to give an exhibition and lecture on British birds at next meeting, Sept. 26, at headquarters; and Mr. Challenger will give a lecture on Yorkshire Canaries a fortnight later. Members should try to attend, as I am sure we shall all be able to learn a hint or two; we shall welcome visitors. Our brother fancier, Mr. S. SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Meeting headquarters, Sept. 14, Mr. Norman presiding over a fair attendance. It is a pity members who only live a short distance from the hall will not attend the meetings and do their share of the work instead of leaving it to those who live at a great distance, and who always attend, often at great inconvenience. Local members please see what you can do in future. It was proposed that during Mr. F. W. Bartou's absence the secretarial work be carried on by Mr. G. Burton, who agreed to do his best. In the matter of the patronage shows, it is greatly to be regretted that almost all of the societies we gave our patronage to have had to cancel their shows. Members went fully into the matter, aided by letters from several of the provincial committee, and it was ultimately decided to withdraw the cups and other point specials from competition this year, and, providing we can get four societies (two London and two provincial) to accept our patronage and give us a fair classification, to offer, as an inducement to members to show, cash specials and spoons for each show. If secretaries of societies wishing to avail themselves of our patronage will write me at 126, Lee Road, Lee Green, S.E., I will give them any further particulars they may require. Redhill C.B.S. are showing the way, and are offering us a full classification, which we hope to avail ourselves of. Another meeting will be held as soon as possible, and members are requested to watch the "Club Notices" column for the date, and turn up in force.—Geo. Burton, Sec. (pro. tem.).

EAST HAM C.B.S.

Washing exhibition and prize distribution Town Hall, East Ham, on Sept. 10; there was a good muster. It was unanimously decided to hold our annual show as usual during alterations to the map of Europe. The prize-money, etc., for young stock show were then handed out by the chairman, Mr. G. Perry. Two birds were then washed by Mr. Perry and Mr. C. R. Evans, giving the novice members a good idea of washing birds for exhibition; afterwards, Mr. A. W. Farmer gave his opinion of the process with a few timely hints and advice. The members present heartily agreed to have messages sent by the secretary to absent members who are serving with the King's forces. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business.—F. SOUTH LONDON COL. AND F.A.

General meeting headquarters, Sept. 10, Mr. G. Munday presiding over a very large meeting. Letter read from the South Metropolitan F.A. respecting the invitation classes they are putting on at their evening shows. Several members expressed their willingness to send exhibits, and sec. was instructed to write to that effect. The members present unanimously endorsed the committee's decision to run the annual show, and many specials were promised. Various suggestions were made, and sec. was instructed to cut down any unnecessary expense, and to act in any way he thought beneficial to the club. Committee meeting headquarters Sept. 24, at 8, to draw up the schedule. Will members of the committee note this, as it will be the only intimation, and do please attend.—G. Burton, Hon. Sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION "OUT FOR BUSINESS."

Council Desires all Fixtures to be Held, and Formulates a Working Scheme.

The Council of the Yorkshire Union met on Sept. 12 at the Market Tavern, Bradford, Mr. Wm. Cruise (president) presiding over a capital attendance of delegates, every society but two being represented. A letter from Mr. H. H. Towers re fanciers helping the War Fund was allowed to stand over, as was the Shipley Society's notification to abandon its open show. In respect to a defaulting member reported by the latter society, it was left in the Union secretary's hands to make the necessary enquiries whether he had given verbal information to the late secretary as to his intention to resign.

The main item on the agenda was the likelihood of the Union programme of open shows being interfered with owing to the war interfering with trade and railway facilities. It was discussed which was the best scheme to adopt in order that this most trying ordeal may be safely negotiated. The council was out for business, and a scheme was not long forthcoming which to all appearances seems to cover, to some extent, the responsibility which the societies felt in holding their open shows.

The scheme is that of paying prize-money on the sliding scale for classes whose entries range from 5 to 14, inclusive. These are the classes which cast a heavy burden on the responsible officials and run away with a good amount of the balance which should certainly accrue between the total prize-money and the amount received in entry fees if shows are to be a success. This is the only feasible scheme which could lessen the financial responsibility and enable societies to run their shows with the possibility of a heavy loss reduced to the minimum. The council gave this scheme great consideration, and passed a unanimous resolution that all 1914-15 Union shows should adopt the above method of paying out prize-money. All classes with 15 entries or more shall have the usual prize-money, namely, 10s. 1st, 6s. 2nd, 4s. 3rd, 2s. 4th.

The council feel compelled to adopt this system in order to encourage societies to go forward with their open shows and thus allow all the Union and Yorkshire specialist clubs competitions to go on as usual. Exhibitors will kindly bear in mind that every Union show will pay the same scale of prize-money. The entry fees in all cases will stand as already announced in the printed schedules. In some cases where societies have a reduced entry fee for their members, the basis of prize-money will be paid on the 1s. 6d. entry fee only. The council adopted the principle of deducting 1d. per 1s. from entry fees, towards working expenses, in classes from 5 to 14 entries inclusive. All societies are thus assured that they cannot have a deficit from the entries received to the total prize-money paid out. The usual number of money prizes will be given in every class, namely, 4. A resolution was also carried that no specials be given, and that those already promised should be acquired by the members of the society holding the show, or otherwise be put towards the society's funds.

As the majority of societies have published their schedules in the Union Handbook, I wish to draw the attention of all intending exhibitors that whatever prize-money is announced to be paid at the respective Union shows, is all cancelled in favour of the scheme as passed by the council.

Only one society up to the present has signified its intention of abandoning its show, namely, Shipley, and the council expressed the hope that owing to the proposed scheme they would reconsider the question. The Union shows as arranged are as follows:—

Judges.
Oct. 3	Halifax, W. Stables
" 10	Bradford East W. A. Cowgill
" 17	Skelmanthorpe F. Allen
" 24	Shipley O.S. (might reconsider abandonment)..... W. Mundell
" 31	City of Bradford R. Halliday
Nov. 14	Tong H. W. Battye
" 21	Manningham and Bradford West P. Mason & H. Sutcliffe
Dec. 12	Huddersfield J. Robson
Jan. 2	Windhill, Shipley O.S. H. J. Chittenden
" 9	Great Horton A. Hirst

It is the council's express wish that societies will run their fixtures as already arranged, and I trust that members and exhibitors alike will do their utmost to give the shows every possible support in their power, as they are without doubt the life and soul of the Fancy to which we are all proud to belong. The Union Handbooks were distributed to the respective societies at this meeting, and all members desiring one immediately should apply to the secretary of the society to which they belong.

ORMSKIRK C.B.S.

Meeting King's Arms Hotel, Sept. 7, Mr. E. A. Walker presiding over a poor attendance. The chief business was the election of Secretary, and on the proposition of Mr. R. Hunter, it was decided that Mr. T. Johnson, junr., be Secretary for the remainder of the year. All members please attend next meeting to decide whether to hold annual show.—T. Johnson, junr., Hon. Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting Sept. 10, Mr. Havenhand presiding. Decided to postpone our annual show business until next meeting, when I hope all members will attend. Mr. Perry was elected to judge the Table Show on that date, Oct. 8, and I trust members will see to it that we have a good show. As we had a paper prepared by Mr. Hemming, which we had left over, we had this read, and a very interesting paper it proved. How Mr. Hemming had contrived to get so much sound information in his paper I hardly know. A very hearty vote of thanks to him concluded the meeting.—E. Johnson, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 11, Mr. Furness chair, and a very good number present. Table Shows to be held on the October and November meeting nights were suspended, but we are anticipating two good meetings. We are suspending the Table Shows, because it was unanimously decided to have our 'annual Members' Show on the date fixed, viz., Nov. 28. Any profit on the show will be handed over to the Lord Mayor's Relief Fund. We want our members to concentrate all their efforts and make it a big success. The object is one we can all work for, and we hope to hand over a good sum. Classification as in the syllabus. Prize money, 4s., 2s., 1s., for 6d. entry. The Society's cups, seven in number, will be up for competition, in addition to numerous other specials. In the gift class we want at least a score, these to be sold to help the Fund. Tickets will be ready for October meeting. Will all members kindly do their best to sell them?—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C.

Meeting Sept. 12, Market Tavern, Bradford. Mr. W. A. Cowgill (president) in the chair. Owing to three of our patronage shows being cancelled Secretary was instructed to try and get some of the Y.U. shows which have not applied for the patronage to do so, and to this end the following resolution was passed: "That the club's patronage be given to any other Union Show that will put on the necessary four green-marked classes irrespective of whether the said show pays full prize-money or prize-money on the sliding scale. As it is in the best interests of the Fancy generally that the shows and the competitions of the Yorkshire Specialist Clubs should go on, it is to be hoped that we shall at an early date receive applications for patronage, and thus be enabled to hold our various competitions, and at the same time help the shows with our entries. Members please note that the first two Union shows, viz., Halifax and Dis., on Oct. 3, and Bradford East on Oct. 10 are both patronage shows.—J. Chambers, Hon. Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

Meeting, Oddfellows' Hall, Charlotte St., Sept. 7, Mr. D. D. Longhorn, chair. Decided to leave the matter of the open show over until the October meeting, when we should have a better attendance. The Chairman then called upon Mr. Chapman to give us his lecture on the feeding and rearing of birds in aviaries and cages, in conjunction with birds in the economy of nature, their usefulness, birds usually kept, and observations of bird life in the fields. Mr. Chapman, who has been a keen naturalist and ornithologist for 35 years, dealt with the matter at great length; he had with him a very large assortment of wild seeds, about 200 varieties, and fully explained all the best seeds, etc., for feeding and rearing British birds and Hybrids from the nest, also the habits of British birds in the fields. He also showed us the different utensils he had for collecting the larvae of insects in summer and winter, and the most likely places of finding same. He also explained the value of aphides (black and green), ants' cocoons, and the way to gather them. After this followed scores of questions from the members, Mr. Chapman answering, and fully explaining them in a very able manner, thus bringing to a close one of the finest lectures our society has ever had. A vote of thanks to Mr. Chapman was carried with acclamation.—J. L. Heseltine, Hon. Sec.

CLUB REPORTS—Continued from overleaf.

CHESTER-LE-STREET, BIRTLEY, AND PELTON FELL (Amal.).

Meeting and table show, Dun Cow Hotel, Chester-le-Street, Aug. 26. Mr. J. Stanger judged.

LINNET or TWITE: 1, 3, hc, Wilford; 2, vhc, Davison. REDPOLL or SISKIN: 1, 2, 3, Wilford; vhc, Davison. BUNTING: 1, 2, Davison. SOFTBILL: 1, 2, Davison; 3, Wilford. Next meeting at Birtley at 6 p.m.; table show; classes: Nor. Buff, Yorks. Nell, Crests, A.O.V. Can.—R. Ward, Sec. Chester-le-Street C.B.S.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Sept. 5, at Lockhart's, Briggate, with a full attendance. Unanimously decided to abandon our annual show on Nov. 13-14; it was the general opinion that under the circumstances we had no other option. This is very disappointing, as we were looking forward to a record show. We had engaged the best room in Leeds for the purpose, and also some of the most capable judges in the Roller Fancy, who we hope will oblige at some future date.—H. Best, Sec.

LONDON C.B.A.

General meeting held at the El Vino, president Mr. R. L. Crisp in the chair. Mr. J. Houghton was elected a member. Several important matters were placed before the meeting in connection with the proposed annual show. Mr. Arthur J. Watcham gave a most interesting lecture on Crests; Messrs. Shepherd, Crisp, Dowhurst, Wallington, Sayer, and J. Rohson ably assisted in the discussion which followed. A vote of thanks to the lecturer for the valued services rendered to the association by his lecture was unanimously carried. Mr. Watcham suitably replied.—F. Knight, Press Correspondent.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

General meeting Sept. 7th. Decided to cancel our open show, as the hall engaged was required by the Government, and Southampton is a town which will be hit very hard through the war. It was decided to send one guinea to the Mayor of Southampton for the War Relief Fund started by him. A members' show will be held upon the same date (Dec. 2nd) as the open show was to have been held, and seven members offered special prizes for same, and the Society will give a special prize for the best bird in the show. Prize money upon the sliding scale, and 29 classes will be provided. At our last members' show we had 150 entries (not bad for a society just formed) and I hope we shall be able to eclipse that total. The cancelling of open shows is bound to affect the Fancy, but I think if societies who cancel their shows hold a members' show on a large scale in place of the open show it will help to keep societies together. The interest must be kept up, and there will then be no reason to talk of societies disbanding.—W. L. Page, Hon. Sec.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SITS ON FLOOR (Mrs. Hamilton).—Examine the bird's eyes closely to see if they are normal; also the claws are not excessively overgrown. If nothing seems wrong in these respects the bird is doubtless run down with the moult, and the following treatment for a month should set matters right. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a spray of watercress and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days give a morsel of stale bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and finally sprinkled with soft sugar. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of the seed mixture you are now using. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week, and after this give 20 drops of chemical food two days in every three for a fortnight or three weeks. Keep bird in a bright, healthy place, but do not expose it to cold draughts nor the fumes of burning lights in the evenings.

DIFFICULT BREATHING (W. Black).—It is possible that the bird may have caught cold on the journey, but it is not unlikely that its condition is simply due to some temporary effect of the moult. Treat as follows for a month or so. Keep in a moderately warm place, and do not expose to cold draughts or fumes of burning lights in the evenings, and allow it to bathe about every other day. Give as staple diet a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, niger, teazle and maw, and either a morsel of banana or a spray of watercress, and on the alternate days give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar, and a half ripe plantain stalk. In the drinking water add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice daily for three days, and after this give 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a month. The sawdust has nothing to do with the trouble, but you should see that the bird is supplied with grit in a small vessel for digestive purposes.

LOST HIS SONG (E. P. H.).—The moult is probably overtaxing the bird a little. See that it is free from cold direct draughts, sudden extremes of temperature, and do not hang it in a window, nor high up near the ceiling. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed only. In addition give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and a morsel of banana or a spray of some green salad, and on the intervening days give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with maw seed, and half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, niger, teazle, and broken groats. Continue this feeding for a month, allow the bird to bathe freely, keep its cage strewn with clean, gritty sand, and add 20 drops of chemical food to its drinking water every second day for a fortnight or so. See if the claws are much overgrown, and, if so, trim them back to a proper length, but do not otherwise interfere with the legs or feet.

SWELLING ON NECK (Anxious F.).—Without more definite information as to the nature and appearance of the swelling it is difficult to advise you. The swelling may be simply an air-sac, in which case carefully puncturing it with a clean needle would cause it to disappear, or it may be an abscess which could only be properly treated by incision and evacuation, which should only be performed by a skilled hand. Try painting the swelling with a feather dipped in tincture of iodine three times, with an interval of three days between each time, and meanwhile add to the water every second day as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice. If this does not cause the swelling to be absorbed it will do no harm to carefully prick it and press out any contents that come away readily, and then wash clean and anoint the spot with boracic ointment for a day or two. Place the food inside the cage for the time being.

A DEFORMED FOOT (Stanley).—If the toes appear rigid in the bent position my advice is to leave them severely alone. As only one foot is affected the bird will get along very well, and will not be very seriously hampered, unless, of course, in competition, if a show specimen, by the deformity, and after this lapse of time any interference is only likely to result in inflicting unnecessary pain. If the toes seem to be fairly supple you may try the effect of putting in the cage a thin and nearly round perch, about the size of a lead pencil, for a few weeks. Beyond this I do not advise you to go.

WAGS HER TONGUE (T. H.).—I do not think there is really much the matter, but you do not give sufficient particulars to help much. You appear doubtful about the swelling about the throat and head, and I think this may be simply due to the plumage being somewhat puffy. Keep in a fairly warm position until the moult is over, and do not expose to cold draughts or extreme fluctuations of heat and cold. Continue to give a staple of plain canary seed, but give only half a teaspoonful of the seed mixture every second day. Also omit the linseed altogether, and substitute an equal quantity of teazle. Give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed three times a week, and a spray of watercress every second day. In the water add 12 drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and after this give instead five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a week or fortnight as may seem necessary.

GET THIN AND DIE (Cymro).—If you continue to lose birds you would be well advised to take an early opportunity to have a post-mortem on the body of one of them, as there is a likelihood of the deaths being due to some bacillary disease. You ought also to have mentioned the composition of your colour food and the strength in which you are using it, as this may possibly be a contributing cause. Treat as follows for a fortnight and if the birds are not considerably better, write again, and give the fullest particulars. Keep cages, perches, and all seed and water vessels as clean as possible, and strew cage floors with clean, gritty sand. Continue the staple diet of plain canary seed, and in addition give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts millet, niger, rape, teazle, and broken groats. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed and a morsel of banana or spray of watercress. Allow a small teaspoonful of soft food with the colour food per bird daily. Limit the diet strictly to this, and allow the birds to bathe freely. In the water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea for three days, and after this add to the water instead a crystal of sulphate of soda as above, ditto of sulphate of iron half as big, and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

BORDER HEN RUFFLED UP (Idwal).—I do not think there is anything seriously wrong with the hen except that she seems to have a little difficulty in breaking away into moult. Keep her fairly warm for a while, but do not overheat her, and feed her the same as advised to "Cymro" in this issue, but give the soft food every second day only, and sprinkle it with maw seed each time. In the drinking water give five drops each of syrup of saffron and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a week. Glad to hear that the former advice was so successful.

OUTDOOR BIRDROOM (J. H. N.).—You mention nothing about the structure of the building, of what material it is built, nor whether it is of single or double walls, and these points considerably affect the susceptibility or otherwise to climatic changes. The area of glass in the front would also make it very susceptible to excessive fluctuations, and if the other parts of the structure are properly built, this alone is doubtless the cause of the variability. It is not good policy, however, to turn the front towards the north when you have the advantage of a southern aspect. A much better plan is to cover the major portion of the glass in front with "summer cloud," the same as greenhouses are sometimes treated in the summer to break the force of the sun's rays. Later on, when the weather is likely to become severe, you could make movable shutters of wood, or felt on wood frames, to put up over at least two-thirds of the glass in the front, which would still leave you plenty of light, and prevent excessive cold owing to radiation. This is the course I advise you to adopt instead of altering the aspect to a northern one.

VARIOUS (E. M. T.).—(1) If your Lizards are Silvers now they will be Silvers after the moult. Neither the moult nor any amount of colour food will turn a Silver into a Gold. It is not a very material question whether you use a Gold cock and a Silver hen in pairing the birds for breeding, or vice versa. Either mating produces both Golds and Silvers, but other things being equal the former way will give a slightly larger proportion of Golds. Mate rich Gold cocks with your young Silver hens next season. (2) Cannot say whether your colour food is too hot, as you omit to say how it is made. But you will get no advantage by giving it extra strong because you began to give it rather late. The colour of the droppings simply shows that the bird does not absorb all the colour you give, so that the extra strength is being practically wasted. Reduce it to normal strength now, and you will find the bird colour just as well. Add a pinch of Epsom salts to the water for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food for three or four days. (3) Glad to know the Yorks. and Lizard pair have benefited by previous advice. Give the old hen a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, lightly sprinkled with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar, every third day for a month; the day following add as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence to the drinking water; and the next day give five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre. (4) Certainly, the wild seeds you gather must be dried before you shut them up in a tin, otherwise they will become musty, and unfit for use at all. Either dry the ripe heads as you gather them in the sun, or hang them up in paper bags until quite dry, when you can separate the seeds and store them altogether in tins, or cardboard or wood boxes. Give a small teaspoonful per bird two or three times a week, but if the supply is unlimited you may give it much more freely.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

SEX OF LINNET-CANARY (Stanley).—It is difficult to assist you in sexing your Linnet-Canary. If you had several you might manage to pick out the cock birds by selecting the boldest and richest coloured, but as you have only a single specimen you cannot do better than keep him until he is clean moulted, when, if a male, he will soon sing lustily. The fact of your bird commencing to warble now is a hopeful sign; if he is the right sex his song will increase in volume daily, especially if you feed him fairly well. (2) Make the following mixture for stock: Canary three parts, rape and teazle one part each, and give a spoonful of mixed seeds twice a week; or you can procure a packet of Finch mixture put up by some reliable firm; use this twice weekly. A little crushed hemp occasionally will assist in getting him into song, but do not overdo it, as hemp is very stimulating.

BLACK REDSTART AND OTHERS (Softbill).—If you look after your Blackstart properly, you should have no difficulty in keeping him through the winter. Your having several Softbills makes me think you have had some experience, which, of course, would be helpful. The food you mention is quite good, and for insect life you will have to rely upon mealworms, but you should not neglect any opportunity that may occur to secure other live food. In addition make free use of fruit, ripe pears, and grapes, as long as you can get them, after that bananas will be useful. He would do very well in an unheated room in the house. (2) The same food would do for the Goldcrest, but the mealworms should be small, or should be cut up for him. A little extra preserved yolk of egg would not be out of place during the coldest weather. He is so tiny that he feels the changes of temperature, and should have a large cage so that he is able to take plenty of exercise. He could be kept under the same conditions as the Blackstart, but should be covered over on cold nights with a woollen shawl or rug, and during the long nights it would be a good plan to put a light in the bird-room for an hour just before retiring, to allow him to feed. He is fond of bathing and should be allowed to do so all the year round, care being taken that he goes to roost quite dry. (3) The staple food for your Coal Tit would be the same as the others; this could be mixed with a little boiled potato or scraped carrot. He should also have a piece of suet suspended to the wires of his cage, and a few sunflower or hemp seeds; a nut now and then will be beneficial, and keep him amused, so will a meat bone that has not been scraped too clean. (4) I would not advise you to place all these birds in your aviary together; leave out the Tit, none of the family can be trusted with weak or miling birds, and you cannot be certain of all the others keeping quite fit.

GREENFINCH WITH GROWTH ON BEAK (Groenie).—The growth on the beak, or rather at the base of it, requires a little surgical operation, and if you can manage to get a medical man or clever chemist to remove it for you, it will be the best thing; but, failing this, try painting it with iodoine. Do it carefully with a small camel-hair paint brush, just covering the spot and not putting any elsewhere. Mix as much Glauber Salts as will cover a sixpence in his drinking water for one day, and give him a good allowance of greenstuff and wild food. He should commence to sing as soon as he is through the moult; many do so before they have quite finished.

VARIOUS QUESTIONS (Anxious Novice).—Your bird is suffering from aethna, and requires very careful treatment. A most important point is his feeding; he should be kept in good condition, but not fat. I would advise you to omit the linseed and hemp. Continue the supply of fruit and green-food, see that all seeds are thoroughly free from dust; in fact, to secure this it would be as well to rub them in a slightly damp cloth to thoroughly clean them. About three times a week offer a cube of bread soaked in hot milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it. Keep him in a large cage in an airy room free from draughts, and away from any vapours from either the fire or gas. To relieve the breathing give five drops each of paregoric, syrup of squills, and glycerine in his drinking water, only using this occasionally when the symptoms are especially pronounced. (2) Your hybrid may not be troubled with red mite, but he may have grey lice; these live on the bird and eat away the feathers, particularly round the neck. If you find any, give him a good dusting of insect powder and roll him up in a cloth for ten minutes before returning him to his cage. Repeat in three days. Make an infusion of quassia chips and put a few drops in his bathing water. If no signs of insects, give him a cooling aperient, a teaspoonful of citrate of magnesia in three tablespoonfuls of water, for two or three days in succession. If he has not yet finished his moult the neck feathers will quickly grow again. (3) Your young Goldfinch-Canary is no doubt a lightly marked one, probably a hen. It may be worth keeping for another year if it is bred from good-sized parents, as all hybrids make up a lot between the first and second moults.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

AILING CAIQUE (N. S. A.).—The seed mixture should contain a large bulk of canary seed, in fact it would be well to make the following: One quart canary seed and one pint each white millet and Parrot mixture; well mix and keep a tin in the cage, even while supplying soft food. Continue the soft food as directed, also the cod-liver-oil emulsion. The mixture you ask for is laudanum, spirit of camphor, tincture of capsicum, essence of peppermint, and tincture of rhubarb; get your chemist to put a pennyworth each of the above in a bottle, well shake so as to thoroughly mix, and put five drops of this mixture in the drinking-water daily till the trouble disappears. Keep this bird in a well ventilated part of the room, yet away from all wind or draught. You must continue to give the soft food till you notice it eating heartily of the seed mixture again. Continue the C.L.O. emulsion on the sponge cake till the bird has recovered condition. When you cease giving the mixture in the drinking-water, put the bird on a course of syrup of phosphates for two or three weeks, half a teaspoonful in the drinking-water about four times a week will be sufficient. Shall be pleased to hear how the bird progresses.

BLUE-FRONTED AMAZON (A. P.).—You must persevere with the insect powder, and also give the bird a wash with tepid quassia solution once or twice weekly. Personally I seldom have to use an insecticide, but when need arises I dust under the wings and any parts where the parasites congregate, with Keating's insect powder. This bird will do with a little toning up. Five drops daily of cod-liver oil emulsion soaked into a little sponge-cake, or anything else similar that the bird will take. Put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water daily, except one day per week, when in lieu of the phosphates give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the water. Both bird and cage must be rid of the parasites, or they pass from one to the other. Fir tree oil, an horticultural requisite, makes a good insecticide for washing out cages, etc.; directions on bottle.

INFLAMED EYE (S. Potter).—Give half a tea-spoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water daily till the bowels have been well cleared; then only give this once a week, and half a-teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates on the other days till the bird is properly toned up again. Bathe the eye with a rose water and zinc eye solution daily till the inflammation yields. Keep strictly out of draught, yet in some well ventilated position. Diet the bird on canary and white millet and green-food—grit and cuttle-bone, of course.

GREY PARROT (A Bird Lover).—You had better send to our manager for Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2jd. post free; this will give you full details as to diet and tell you what to avoid. The only thing I can suggest as to stopping it biting its tail feathers is to have a light metal (zinc) punchinello sort of collar made to fit the bird's neck—the collar can be made in two halves and wired together, then the bird cannot get it off; but you must have the collar so made that it will not chafe the neck; your local plumber should be able to make one for you. Provide the bird with a thick branch, with the bark on, one that will stretch from bottom to top of cage; fix it in a fairly steep slope upwards. Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking-water, so long as the droppings are not watery loose. Twice a week put half a-teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the water. Do not give any kind of animal food whatever, and all tea, coffee, or milk sops should be strictly taboo.

AILING GREY PARROT (A. J. Coe).—Dissolve five grains of bromide of potassium in a little syrup and give this quantity in the drinking-water once a week (only give very little more water than the bird will consume in the day, and if any is left let the bird have its morning drink before changing it). Every fourth day give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia, so long as the voidings are not watery loose. Boiled maize should not be necessary, but do not stop this too suddenly; of course you supply only what it will consume in the one day, and the potassium mixture could be soaked into the maize after all the water it was boiled in has been drained away. If there is any evidence of an attack coming on, give a dose of the potassium at once. Treat as above, and report progress a few months hence. You would do well to get our Grey Parrot Nutshell, 2jd. post free, from our manager, and carefully read this as to management, but in changing the items of a bird's dietary, such change should be a gradual one. I should confine the nuts to peanuts (monkey nuts), Barcelona nuts and walnuts, the two latter would be better supplied already shelled.

PENNANTS' AND BUDGERIGARS (Psittacus).—(1) Young Pennants are mostly green, but there is some red in their plumage, the quantity being variable in respective broods. (2) I do not quite gather the purport of this query, but the nestling plumage of the sexes, so far as my observation goes, is similar. (3) Pennants are not what may be called free breeders as a whole, though many aviculturists have bred them, but once a good breeding pair is acquired they are fairly prolific. Pennants' are rather intolerant of the presence of other Platycerci in the same aviary. (4) It is difficult to assign a reason, but I know several who complain of poor results this season, and again others who have had good results. If the "dozen or so other birds" are not interfering with the Budgies, I should be inclined to change some of the stock.

AILING PARROT (C. Hainsworth).—You must keep up the treatment in the hope that the bird will ultimately give up this vice, for it is more of a vice than a disease. Spray it once or twice a week with a tepid quassia solution. Get a piece of a thick branch with the bark on, and set this up on end; it should reach from bottom to top of cage and have a pretty steep incline upwards. Renew it as often as the bird cuts it to pieces. If it is sufficiently tame, liberty outside its cage for a portion of the day will help to keep down ennui. Apart from the above I cannot add to the directions previously given. Such cases are not quickly cured, and call for much perseverance and persistence; you must not be discouraged by occasional lapses, but begin the treatment again when such occur.

HEN PARROT (A. R. P.).—Your bird is Roseate (Rose-breasted) Cockatoo. I should put a little riar's Balsam on the wound, and, if you can, hold the bird till it has dried in, but you must look out for its beak, as the balsam will sting a little when first applied; the balsam will soon check the bleeding, and it should soon heal if the bird does not open the wound again. Lightly anointing with zinc ointment might relieve the soreness after the balsam has dried in. If you treat and jilt the bird as advised in the Nutshell it will meet the case perfectly, but you can with advantage add a small quantity of maize to the mixture. Every fourth day for a month, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking-water, and after that only give it once a week. It will be well to well cleanse the wound with tepid water before applying the balsam. It is no use applying a bandage as the bird would tear this off at once. In the end you'll prevail, but a scratched or bitten wound lingers long.

AFRICAN GREY (B. G.).—You must induce the bird to eat or sheer weakness will do the rest, and you will speedily lose it; at least, I am much afraid that is what will occur now. As you have only had it five weeks you will not be able to handle it, so anything you give must be in the water and on the food. Keep the seed in the cage and tempt it with biscuit, crusts of bread, and plain cake or sponge cake. On either of the above give 8 drops of cod liver oil twice daily. Continue to offer fruit at intervals; it will acquire the taste yet. Keep cuttlebone in the cage continually. By means of a small stick put a little honey and borax on its tongue twice daily. While the bird is so weak give it a little milk-sop daily till the weakness passes. Prepare the milk sop so: Take half a tea-cupful of boiling water, stir in three drops of brandy, one teaspoonful of condensed milk, and quarter tea-spoonful of cod liver oil. Add sufficient biscuit and sponge cake, in pieces about size of hazel nut, to partially absorb the milk. Give this so long as the bird remains thin and weak, but as soon as it begins to pick up and eat the seed heartily, then gradually discontinue the sop. Keep the bird warm, yet

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. WALKER.—Inflammation of the bowels, resulting from ptomaine poisoning. Your food is evidently at fault; the latter you have not described, so cannot make any suggestion regarding this.

MR. W. E. CUTHBERT.—The symptoms you describe are indicative of pain, and arise from a gastro-enteritis which I think must be connected in some way with the feeding. I should certainly advise a fresh supply of a seed as a possible preventive, and to feed a little sparingly for a time. The addition of a few drops of infusion of gentian to the drinking water will tone them up and assist them in warding off the trouble.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

Genuine Japanese bird lime, guaranteed to stand all weathers and hold any bird from wren to rook, 1lb. 6d., 1lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6; sample, 5d., all post free. Absolutely everything required by catchers in stock, and all guaranteed brand new goods; send stamp for full printed list, which also gives hints on net making. Practically every professional catcher in the Kingdom uses my articles, and I guarantee every purchaser fullest satisfaction, and I guarantee to return his money in full. During the time of the war many people will probably have spare time; to what better use can they put it than to have some real good sport in bird catching, and at same time augment their income by disposing of their surplus catches, but to insure this they must have serviceable articles made by a man who thoroughly understands what is required for successful catching. Every article sent out by me is guaranteed to have been properly tested and exactly same quality as supplied to my own catchers. (1784)

Use DITCHFIELD'S Famous Bird Medicines as supplied to the London Zoo.

Ditchfield's Bird Medicines have been used for over six years by most leading fanciers, and have been proved to be the most reliable. We have over 2,000 testimonials, and are receiving letters every day from fanciers, telling us of the marvellous results of our Bird Medicines. Mr. A. Ezra, London, writes: "I find your Tonic Drops excellent." Mr. Hatton, Atherton: "Your Tonic Drops are excellent; they have cured me four birds in soft moult. They are now in full song." J. Dunan, West Brae: "Have used your Tonic Draps and Lung Tonic for over two years; they have never failed to cure." Mr. Hutton, Holbeach: "I shall never be without your Revivo again." Major B. Horsbrough: "Your medicine is magnificent stuff."

NOTICE.—When ordering medicine, kindly mention for what complaint, as in some cases an extra bottle is required, which we enclose free. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for Soft Mould, Not Singing, Going Light, Feather Plucking, and Inflammation of the Bowels. In 7d., 9d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. This medicine is invaluable for birds during the moulting season, and for young birds just getting on hard seed. For Bronchitis, Wheezing, and Hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds, also in 7d., 9d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For constitutional weakness and debility, get Ditchfield's Famous "Revivo". There's nothing to equal it for giving new life and vigour to the birds. A splendid Tonic after the moult. 7d., 9d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. To advertise our medicines, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9, three for 2/6. All medicines are sent post paid per return, at our risk. Two valuable seed recipes, How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Song, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, OLDHAM.

Instructive Books for Bird Lovers.

The authors, all well-known experts in their various subjects, have in each case endeavoured to give in an easily understandable manner, the methods to be employed in reaching success in that particular branch of the cage-bird hobby dealt with. This list comprises a set of books of unique value to bird-keepers. There is all the experience of years of careful study at the disposal of our readers. The books are based on the hard-earned knowledge of men who are recognised as the first authorities, and they are able to tell in a conclusive manner all the interesting "ins and outs" in their respective subjects.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1.—By H. W. Batty (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. J. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Bewick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Koller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATEELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc. Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts, Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

BIRDS OF THE COUNTRYSIDE, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. A handbook to the wild life of all our familiar British birds; their appearance and habits accurately described. With 12 beautiful coloured plates, and 118 photographic illustrations. A charming gift book.

PETS, AND HOW TO KEEP THEM, 5/4.—By Frank Finn, B.A., F.Z.S. Gives the correct method of housing, feeding, and managing every kind of pet; all sorts of animals are dealt with—monkeys, dogs, cats, lizards, tortoises, also gold and other fancy fish, while there is a large section devoted to birds. Contains many coloured plates and photographs. Another charming gift book.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editor, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3/6.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour.

"CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL." A wonderful sixpennyworth of bird literature. See announcement on Page 63.

THOSE who have bought or those who are about to buy a Grey Parrot, should get "Nutsell No. 17," it only costs 2/6, post free, but the tips it gives are priceless; from: "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. (2d. from agents, a list of whom is published frequently).

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutsell No. 14," from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2/6. From agents (see list frequently published).

EXTRAORDINARY talking Grey Parrot: Cross, Liverpool. Young African Grey Parrot, red tail, 35/-; Blue-fronted Amazon, finger-tame, acclimatised, saying a few words, 35/-; Younger bird, 25/-, all out-doors: Cross, Liverpool. Brass-mounted Parrot Cage: Cross, Otterspool House, The Direct Importer, Liverpool. Established a century.

A FEW varieties for disposal, bargains, acclimatised true pairs: Grand Eclectus, Bourke's Parakeets, Azure-winged Magpies (Cyanopica Cook's), Himalayan Red-headed Bullfinches (P. erythrocephala), Common Parrot Finches, at £6 per pair; West Indian Banana Twits, Hooded Skinks, at £3 10/- pair; Red-tailed Lovebirds, £2 10/-; odd lots, New Guinea Mynah, L. Valliant, Barb. Indian Blue-headed Rock Thrush, and Red-backed Bush Robin, at 9/6 each; Frost, 13, Fairlawn Ave., Chickwick, London. (1785)

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-checked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased 2s from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, 150, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutsell No. 20," 2/6, post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

PAIR Red-collared Lorries, 75/-; one Browns, 65/-; pair Nanday Cougars, 45/-; pair all greens, 15/-; pair Cockatiels, ready to nest, 16/6; odd hens, 8/6; pair Blue-winged Lovebirds, 12/6; Pope Cardinal, 7/6; Sulphur Seed-eater, 7/6; St. Helena Seed-eater, 4/-; cock Angola Singing Finch, 19/6; pair Green Budgies, 5/-; Orangecheeks and Grey Waxbills, Silverbills, Bronzewings, 3/6 pair; G. Chapman, High-st., Birmingham.

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutsell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once, 2/6, post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

Mr. Henry Tams, Longton, is engaged to judge at Wigan Show, Dec. 5.

We are asked to remind members of the Newcastle East End C.B.S., of the table show, to be held Sept. 30.

At the monthly meeting of the Leith O.S. it was decided to hold our annual show as usual on Nov. 14, writes Mr. Geo. W. Brown, sec.

Mr. M. Wellings (Preecot) has been engaged to judge the Lizards at Liverpool show, write Messrs. Metcalfe and Green, secs.

Mr. John Greaves has been appointed judge of the Great Horton O.S. October Members' Show, writes Mr. J. Holroyd, the hon. sec.

The judges for the show of the Glasgow and Western Counties C.B.S., to be held on Jan. 9 next, are: Canaries, Mr. G. Anott, Kirkcaldy; British, Mr. J. Strachan, Bathgate.

EXHIBITORS: SUPPORT THE SHOWS.

Remember that the societies are doing their best under circumstances of unusual difficulty to help fanciers and the Fancy.

Do YOUR Part by Sending Them Entries.

We have a stock of British bred mealworms, write Messrs. A. W. Gamage, Ltd. (Holborn, London), which we may add are larger and much superior to the German mealworms generally used for the English market.

Since our last issue we have received notification that the following shows have been abandoned for this season:—Ilkeston C.B.S., Southend C.B.S., Stockton-on-Tees C.B.S., Cardiff C.B.S., Selby C.B.S., Kirkcaldy C.B.S., Arbroath C.B.S., Portsmouth F.S.

Mr. A. Sutcliffe, Hon. Sec. of the Halifax C.B.S., writes that the patronage of the Cinnamon marked Y.C.C., has been accepted for the show of the society to be held on Oct. 3, and that four open classes in Cinnamon ticked or variegated have been added in order to comply with the rules: Yellow Yorks cock, Buff cock, Yellow hen, Buff hen. 600 schedules have been sent out, and anyone overlooked should apply to Mr. Sutcliffe at 46, Hammond-st., Hopwood-lane, Halifax.

Our Hon. Sec., W. Hodgkins, has joined the "Pals" Battalion of the Liverpool Regiment, and is now in training at Hooton, writes Mr. G. Benson, hon. sec., pro tem., of Wallacey C.B.S., and we are therefore compelled to seek a new secretary. We have other members who have been called up to join their regiments, both R.H.A. and R.F.A. It is needless to say we wish them good luck and a safe return ticket to Berlin. We are holding our members' show as usual on Nov. 7, Mr. E. Brunskill judge.

The opening article in the September issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, is "A Sunbirds' Aviary," by Mr. Wesley T. Page, and is an account of the unique collection of Sunbirds in the possession of Mr. A. Ezra. The Marquis of Tavistock continues his entertaining "Experiences of Cockatoos," and Mr. Page goes on with his "Easter Tour Among Members' Aviaries," this month's instalment being illustrated by pictures of the commodious aviaries at Poltimore Park (Lord Poltimore's). Miss A. B. Smyth tells of the breeding of hybrids between the Red-vented and Red-eared Bulbuls, and among the other contents is the beginning of a description, by Mr. W. Shore Bailey, of a journey across the Sierras of S. California.

OUR READERS' GIFTS TO WAR HOSPITALS AND CONVALESCENT HOMES.

Scheme Approaching Completion: Hurry Up and Be In It.

THE arrangements in connection with our scheme to supply singing Canaries to War Hospitals and Convalescent Homes for wounded soldiers and sailors are approaching completion. We hope to be able in a very short time now to get away the first batch of birds; we are not desirous of doing so, of course, until they have had some chance of recovering from the effects of the moult.

Although we now have in hand a goodly number of promises of birds, we are still open to receive more; as we stated last week, we are sure readers would not wish there should be any possibility of the demand exceeding the supply.

We have during the past few days received from leading bird dealers, etc., a number of offers of living-cages, to house the birds when they reach their destinations. These, needless to say, are just what is wanted, and we thank the donors for their generosity. Possibly there will also be many other kindly-disposed readers who have suitable living-cages they could well spare for this good cause. If so, we shall be glad if they will communicate with us, and fill in the form printed below.

These cages may be of wood (box pattern) or open wire. They need not necessarily be new, so long as they are in a quite clean, sound condition; we would ask, however, that they be of fair size and provided with the necessary fittings. The cage or cages we should ask donors to send carriage paid, and adequately packed, to such hospital or hospitals as we shall notify to donors in due course. May we ask your generous co-operation? The idea is, we think you will agree, a happy and worthy one, and its successful completion will redound to the credit of the Cage Bird Fancy. Gifts of one cage will be welcomed equally as warmly as a larger number.

The names of all donors, whether of birds or cages, will be published in CAGE BIRDS. Further, we shall arrange for an inscribed card to be sent with each bird and cage, giving the names of the donors of the bird, the cage, and the food, etc.

By the kindness of Messrs. Capern (Bristol) the birds will be fed free for at least three months on their noted seeds; while Messrs. Trower and Coy. (Caledonian Road, London, N.) have generously offered to supply free for the same period, or longer if needs be, their well-known bird-grit, for use on the cage floors.

The offers of cages referred to above have come from J. Day, City Aviaries, Hull (two, or more, and with birds, if needed) J. McKeand, Castle Douglas, N.B. (three), J. Thomas, Amblethorpe (two), F. Ditchfield, Nugget Street, Oldham (two), E. North, Manchester Road, Bradford (two), J. Martin, Castle Douglas, N.B. (two), Mrs. H. Martin, Cowcaddens Street, Glasgow; G. Osborne, Dudley Road, Wolverhampton; E. M. Stanton, Boothfield, Winton, Patricroft, and Brain and Son, Lichfield Road, Aston.

I was very pleased indeed to see my Mealy Redpoll on the front page of CAGE BIRDS last Friday. Many thanks for the great honour. I might say he was never beaten by a Mealy Redpoll. The sketch does your well-know artist, Mr. H. Norman, great credit. I wish your grand paper every success. As there are to be fewer shows this season, owing to the war, we shall look to CAGE BIRDS to keep fanciers together, to keep the old flag flying in the Fancy.—One of your many well wishers, Edward Stephens, Hon. Assis. Sec., N.B.B. and M.C.

OBITUARY.

I regret to tell you that our sec., Mr. O. C. Smith, has lost his little son, aged 3 years 3 months, after a brief illness, writes Mr. W. H. Pyke. Members and friends of the Reading C.B.S. will, I am sure, unite in offering their sympathy to him and his wife in their sad bereavement.

Glasgow Fanciers Aid War Fund. The members of the Scotch Fancy National Derby P.A., met on the morning of the show, held Sept. 19, and unanimously agreed to devote the whole of their prize money to the war relief fund.

Migrants in London. A Willow Wren and a hen Redstart, writes a correspondent to the "Saturday Review," are breaking their journey south in the gardens at the back of the King's Road, Chelsea, quite undisturbed by the racket of the traffic twenty yards or so away. Just a year ago I heard and saw for some days a Willow Wren and a Garden Warbler in the gardens at the back of Paulton Square, a little way down the King's Road.

PARS FROM THE POST-BAG.

I possess a splendid singing cock Canary a year old, and when clean moulted I will despatch at once when called upon for the good use you intend putting it to. JOSEPH N. MAIN.

Trautent, N.B.

An enclosing coupon and think that all fanciers should respond. I am sure the soldiers lying in the hospitals and hearing the birds sing will feel very grateful to the donors, and I hope you will have a great response to your call.

W. L. PAGE.

Southampton.

Will send one singing Canary when called on; I think it a good idea of yours. I should have sent before, but have been waiting for some fancier from Bannockburn to take the lead, and I hope this will bring them along. JOHN FORSYTH.

Bannockburn.

I shall be pleased to send you one Border cock for hospitals as soon as you like, after they are through the moult, which will soon be over.

E. J. BURCH.

Faversham.

You can add my name to your list of subscribers for singing Canaries. My birds are a bit behind this season, as I missed my first round; but I will send one of the very best (Randall's Strain) Rollers I have ready when the call comes, and I feel sure it will not disgrace myself or CAGE BIRDS. I think this is the best of all the many brilliant ideas that have appeared in your paper.

W. HOYLE.

Canaries for the Hospitals

I am willing, if called on any time during the next twelve months, to supply free of cost:— One singing cock Canary and small travelling cage.

One suitable living cage, with necessary fittings, to be presented as a gift to any Hospital or Convalescent Home applying for same. (Strike out one item if you are not presenting both.)

Sending Birds by Rail.

We understand that some cases have arisen where railway companies have expressed reluctance to accept parcels of live birds for transit, owing to difficulty of guaranteeing reasonably prompt delivery at their destination, as the authorities have "commandeered" so many of their horses and vans. Fanciers and dealers can easily overcome this objection, however, by arranging with customers that the birds shall be consigned "to be called for," the birds, of course, being fetched from the station by the buyers.

The London and Provincial O.S. Show.

The L. and P.O.S. Show has been arranged for Oct. 28 and 29 (Wed. and Thurs.) at the Lambeth Baths, Lambeth Road, London, S.E. The ball is a fine one, and very easily accessible. The show will be open to all fanciers able to deliver and collect their own birds to and from the ball, or who make arrangements for collection and delivery, the officials not undertaking to despatch any birds by rail at the conclusion of the show. The L. and P.O.S. hope that all fanciers in the Metropolitan area will support the show; their own members in turn will support, as far as possible, the shows of any other London society. All entry fees will be returned in full as prize-money; no deduction whatever for expenses. The hon. sec., Mr. C. W. Law, Brimley House, Woodhouse Road, North Finchley, will be glad to send further particulars. The judges are Messrs. J. Hodder (Nor.), T. Heath (all other Canaries), A. Silver (Brit.), H. J. Fulljames (For. and Novice Brit.).

Neets of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the old mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

A FEW FACTS ON CRESTS AND CREST BREEDING.

By ARTHUR J. WATCHAM.

A lecture given before the London C.B.A. on September 8th.

As to size, it would be right to say that the frame of a big Crest is no larger than that of a big Norwich. But put side by side when fully feathered, what an apparent difference would there be, due only, of course, to the length of feather of the Crested bird.

There is the question of double-cresting: What are the benefits to be gained by so doing and what are its disadvantages? I think myself that you should have a specific object in view in using two Crests, and that the greatest care should be exercised in the choice of birds for the purpose. This is amply borne out by the fact that a considerable number of Crests so bred have no pretensions whatever to proper formation, so that it should be very clear how easily harm may be introduced into one's stud by injudiciously pairing two Crests together which have not suitable properties, or are not properly balanced in their points. It is the easiest possible way to perpetuate bad faults in your stud.

For instance, I should not advise the use of Crests with such faults as bad centres, split sides, or with those glaring "ears." Rather would I prefer to use two comparatively small Crests, providing they were good in contour. Again, you might have a round Crest on one side and an elliptical one on the other, but always bear in mind to see that they possess good back-crests; those I mean that finish well down the neck with a natural fall from the centre. I am not a lover of the Crest that resembles a round table top. I mean those that are not finished at the back with what I think is termed a cowl. Quality of the feather should be fully considered and another very essential point is the small beak. A large beak detracts greatly from the appearance of an otherwise good specimen. In fact, all the good points of the Crest should be rigidly adhered to as far as lies in one's power.

Double-Crest as a Corrective.

It is a good plan to use a bird bred from double Crests when you find you are breeding a greater percentage of Crestbreds. This acts as a certain corrective. As a point: From one Crestbred hen this year I got three Crestbreds in the first nest and one in the second, but no Crests. Now, if I use this hen again next year I should run her with a Crest that has been bred from double Crests, and the same applies to her offspring. I very much like Crestbreds bred from two Crests, and I have got some very good birds that way, but I have not found that you succeed in getting many of them. One yellow so bred I sent to Plymouth. He won, but foolishly enough I omitted to notify on my entry form that he was eligible for the C.C.C. Special, and this consequently went to the second prize bird, and I lost the only opportunity I have yet had of having the coveted honour of taking a special of our Specialist Club.

I have brought with me this evening a Crested cock and two Crested hens. I would not hesitate myself to run him with either of these hens with the object of double cresting. Last season I invested in a yellow Crest cock with the sole object of running him with what I consider my best Crest hen. From them I have a Crestbred I feel proud of.

Don't Under-value the Crest-bred.

Now the Crestbred: There is no doubt a great deal more rests with the Crestbred than some have any idea of. I now allude principally to the novice. It must have a good wide entrance and be quite free from any suspicion of running away behind the eye. Many a bird having feather turning well over beak end has been spoilt by this. I should not despise a Crestbred for breeding purposes because of being a little short in head feather, providing that other essentials were present—such as, and principally, density and rise of skull. Such a bird is invaluable to mate with a Crest with any possibility of a long frontal, but still free from disease of feather or fault of form. I had a pair of breeding one or two with me to night, but they are not sufficiently forward in their moult. I have heard of two Crestbreds being paired together, but to me this policy would seem to be rather erratic and contrary to the principles of the breed.

Now you have no doubt by this time come to the conclusion that I must be full of admiration for the Crest. Well, I must admit I am. I have at various times tried my hand with the Norwich, Yorkshires, and British, but these side lines have never lasted long. Want of enthusiasm in me, perhaps. But I do not think I suffer from isolation in this admiration. I am sure I am quite right in saying this is also true of my fellow fanciers present, and please do not think me in the least unwilling to grant each their own love of their individual fancy. With these few remarks I will close, and if this little paper has interested you in the least I am fully compensated.

This Japanese Redbreast (Erithacus akahige) was exhibited at the Horticultural Hall show by Mr. John Frostick (Balham). The likeness of this charming bird to our own Robin in size and perkiness of demeanour is most marked, while there is more than a little similarity in colour and markings.

SOFT-BILLS AS CAGE BIRDS

ALTHOUGH not such a general favourite as the Thrush, the Blackbird is nevertheless a great pal of mine. This bird, which is practically silent all day long, pours forth its melody as the sun goes down. The flute-like notes, I think, excel those of the Thrush, for while the song of the latter suggests predominance, the Blackbird's is a calm, peaceful note, and at times inclined to be mournful; of course, to hear it at its best we must seek it in its natural state. To the hedgerows and copses we will go and have a look at its domestic affairs first.

About the end of March or beginning of April, according to the weather, the nesting operations commence. The nests are built in various places, some in hedges, others in hollies and some on the low branches of trees overgrown with ivy. They are about the same size as that of the Thrush and composed outwardly of dry grass and moss. This is cemented inside with mud mixed with touchwood, but unlike the nest of the Thrush is lined with fine grass.

The eggs, which usually number five, are of a greenish colour, spotted and blotched with brown. The young ones hatch out in about fourteen days and look a little more comfortable than young Thrushes. They soon grow, and are not much unlike young Thrushes, only darker; they retain their Thrush-like plumage until the first moult. As the plumage changes to a glossy black, so the beak changes to an orange colour.

In the Merry Springtime.

By the following spring, when they are thinking of courting, the beautiful orange bill shows up conspicuously against the shiny black coat. The hen, as with most hens, is more soberly clad, and is sooty brown in colour, and her beak is of a brownish-black colour. The food of the Blackbird is similar to that of the Thrush, chiefly slugs, worms, grubs, etc.; berries and fruit are also relished, especially ash, privet and hawthorn. The bird is much persecuted in some localities on a charge of stealing so much fruit, but I do not think he has much more than his share, seeing the good that he does by destroying grubs, caterpillars, etc.

To hear the Blackbird sing at his best one must be out in the fields on a summer's eve, where, perched on the bough of a tree, the "Merle" may be seen. "Wet morning," "Wet morning," "Forty-eight," "Forty-eight," will soon catch the listener's ear, and if he keeps quiet he will soon hear the rest of the flute-like notes of the Blackbird's song.

To keep in captivity hand-reared ones are the best, as they are much the better

Wild ones rarely settle down, they dash about and break their feathers, and are a source of anxiety and disappointment. The method of rearing young ones is similar to rearing Thrushes, as described in the chapter on the Thrush. Do not gorge them or they might choke, about three pieces are enough for each bird at once. Always give a couple of drops of water after each feed to wash all the food into the crop, so as to make sure of them not choking.

The nest should be kept quite clean, and all droppings removed as they appear. I found an old teaspoon very useful for this purpose and always kept one near the nest. If the lining should get wet remove the birds and throw out the old material or they will get cramp. Put in the nest some fresh hay, and roll a hot egg or something round inside to shape it. Give a good dusting of insect powder and replace them. Handle them as little as possible, as the heat of the hand soon upsets them.

Do not stop hand-feeding until you are satisfied they swallow what they pick up, for possibly they are only learning. Leave the nest in the cage as long as possible.

Hybrid Breeding Experiments at the Zoo.

Mr. R. I. Pocock, of the London Zoological Gardens, writing to "The Field," says: "On June 27 I gave an account of our attempts to breed from a cock Javan Jungle-fowl (Gallus varius) and hens that are hybrids between that species and the Red Jungle-fowl, G. gallus or bankiva, and also with hybrids of the latter cross paired inter se (amongst themselves). The results showed that there was a certain degree of fertility in each case, but more in the former than in the latter.

More recent trials have given practically the same result. A hybrid hen running with the pure Javan cock laid nine eggs which she incubated herself, five proved clear, and four were fertile, but the chicks were too weak to hatch, and all died in the shell.

In the case of hybrids paired together, a hen sat on eleven eggs, ten of which proved to be infertile and one fertile, the embryo being weak and dying in the shell.

The weakness of the embryo in both cases may possibly be due to the parents being related, and such experiments carried out on a larger scale with unrelated birds might perhaps result in some amount of success. An experiment similar to the second of those has been tried with Quails. Last year a hen Californian Quail (Zo- ble, for they sleep much and lie much warmer in the nest than in a corner of the cage. Do not coddle them at all, but keep them in a cool place out of the draught. When they begin to feed give a few pieces of cut up worms, snails or meat. As they get on gradually withdraw the egg-food and replace it with some reliable packet food, made according to directions.

Educating the Young.

The young birds are not easy to sex, but the cocks are usually a bit darker than the hens. As soon as the plumage changes the cocks are easily distinguished, for the beak gets lighter, which is not noticeable in the hens. The hens may as well be liberated, for they are no good as songsters. If possible cock birds should be hung where they can hear the song of the wild bird, so that they may learn the natural note. Of course, they will utter a few notes without teaching, but it is only a jumble and cannot be compared with that of the original. If an instrument such as a flute or whistle be played constantly within their hearing they will pick up a few notes, but this is not a song. They will learn a little ditty if one has the patience to teach them, but such notes I do not care for like the wild ones.

Variety in food is the best way to keep them in health. I give mine packet food one day and barley meal another, mixed just sufficiently moist to make it crumbly; also slugs, worms, snails, etc., and berries and fruit in season.

hortyx californica) was paired with a cock Douglas Quail (L. douglasi), with the result that a number of hybrids were reared. The two species are obviously nearly related, differing somewhat in colour and the form of the crest, and they crossed readily enough, all the eggs being fertile and producing strong chickens.

It occurred to me that this was a good opportunity of trying some Mendelian experiments with species hybrids if only these should prove to be fertile, which I expected they would be, seeing that the two parent forms appeared to be more nearly allied to one another than were the two species of Jungle-fowl before mentioned.

A large number of eggs was laid, and twenty of those were placed, together with ten eggs of the pure Douglas Quail, in an incubator. The latter hatched well, but every one of the hybrid eggs was perfectly clear, showing no sign of fertility.

Such results are most difficult to understand, especially when one considers that another group of gallinaceous birds, the Pheasants, produce fertile hybrids. The Gold and Amherst Pheasants, for instance, or the Mongolian and Chinese, would seem to be at least as distant from one another as are these two Quails, yet the offspring of their interbreeding will themselves breed inter se. Or take another group, the Ducks, and we find that such distinct species as the Pintail and Mallard will readily produce fertile offspring.

SCOTLAND'S GREAT NEW YEAR SHOW WILL BE HELD.

Details of Classes and Judges: The Novices Well Looked After.

Report of Scottish National C.B.S. annual and committee meetings, Feb. 14 to April 9, inclusive. Members were present in good numbers, Mr. J. Winter (Pres.), in the chair. Financial statement submitted and approved, showed net gain on last show of £8 9s. 10d. Votes of thanks were heartily accorded Miss Peddie Waddell, Mr. Hoyle, Honorary Provincial and Working Committees, for the splendid assistance given at our exhibition; and to Messrs. J. F. Dewar and P. Green for services as auditors. Office-bearers for 1914-15: Hon. President, Lord Provost R. K. Inches (Edinburgh); Hon. V.P., Coun. A. Stevenson, J. Brown, A. C. Club Reports.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Adjourned meeting, Mail Coach Inn, Mr. W. Brotherton chair, and a good attendance to consider whether we should hold our Open Show on Nov. 20. It was decided, after a fair discussion, not to hold the Open Show, but to hold our annual Members' Show on that date. The reason for not holding Open Show is because of the general local distress. —Taylor and Bailey, Secs.

LOANHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting Mason's Arms, Mr. A. Jardine, president, in the chair. Medals were considered, and secretary instructed to order four gold medals, one for each section. Agreed to get prize cards from "Leith Observer" Office, and that we do not canvass for outside support this year owing to war; to try and get specials from friends who have not been affected by the crisis. I have again secured Masonic Hall for Saturday, Oct. 10, for show. —Walter B. Smart, Sec.

IRVINE C.B.S.

Meeting "Golffields," Irvine, Sept. 12. Mr. John Nairn presiding. Present, Messrs. Spratt, Garland, Savage, McKean, Young, Murray, McColl, and Ferguson. After very careful deliberation it was decided that for this year our open show be not held. Meetings of the society are to be held, as usual, either in the Masonic Hall, or at Golffields. The re-election of office-bearers will take place in November, when new members will have an opportunity of enrolling. Members' subscriptions should be paid to secretary as early as possible. There will be a bird-washing demonstration given by an expert at an early date, and as many as possible should witness this—either to learn therefrom or to criticise. In regard to the abandoning of our open show, there were expressions of regret all round, as everything in connection with the society had been progressing very favourably. —H. M. Ferguson, Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting at headquarters, Marlboro' Hotel, Sept. 9. A good attendance faced chairman Willmott, and another new member was elected. This, said the chairman, was most encouraging to all, especially in these serious times, but if all members would only try and attend in full muster it would keep up interest in the Fancy. Decided that the young stock show be held Nov. 7 at 3, Mr. Wells to be invited to judge. A lengthy debate took place, in which all members joined, on the best way to increase membership and bring the society more to the public eye. Mr. Cowley remarked it was a surprise to him to find that 40 good fanciers resided in and around this district, and all members of the S.B.O.S. He had resided in this district over 30 years, and thought perhaps about 10 or 12 members would be the limit. It went to prove that by having interesting lectures, washing exhibitions, and more table shows, and getting these well advised in the Press, the society should have no difficulty in doubling this number. The chairman thought that members should make some interesting notes, if only a few lines, on their line of fancy, and send to the sec., who would make it into an interesting article for the leading Birmingham paper. The idea was taken up by all present. Washing competition at next meeting. —J. Sheppard, Sec.

CLYDEBANK C.B.S.

Meeting Sept. 17, Mr. Robb presiding. Sec. read letters from Dumbarton C.B.C. and Vale of Leven C.B.C. in connection with proposed open show. It was ultimately agreed that we should not proceed with it this year, but hope to carry it out next year. Owing to the small attendance it was agreed to postpone classification for members' show till next meeting. —Wm. Kane, Sec.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

Members and friends held a musical evening at headquarters, Sept. 9, which proved very enjoyable. Mr. H. James, the chairman, thanked the following for their services: Miss G. Mantell, songs and piano; Miss Parsons, songs; Mr. and Mrs. Pazel, gramophone selections; Mr. E. Loomes, songs; Mr. G. Absolon, songs; Mr. B. Burden, comic songs; Mr. W. H. Gibb, violin solo. Miss G. Mantell acted as accompanist with Mrs. G. Absolon. Another of these social evenings is arranged for Oct. 14, to which all fanciers in the district and their friends are invited. —W. H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Meeting, Grango Park Hall, Sept. 7. A good muster present to hear Mr. G. King on "The Management of a Birdroom." The lecturer opened his remarks by impressing on those present the need of a system. A stock that was not managed systematically would do no good in the long run. A stock book properly kept was an absolute necessity, and Mr. King explained in detail how his own book was kept. He also gave a number of other useful hints that were appreciated by all, and afterwards answered all the questions put to him. The members accorded Mr. King a hearty vote of thanks for a most interesting paper. The latter part of the evening was taken up by a discussion as to the advisability of running an open show. Bearing in mind the fact that two-thirds of our entries come by rail, and that some of the lines in and around London are being closed for a day or more without notice by the military authorities, the members were unanimously of the opinion that the annual show should be confined to members only. A motion to this effect was carried. —A. W. Farmer, Hon. Assist. Sec.

POSTERS

Prize Cards, Cage Slips, Badges, Judges' Books, cheapest and best. Read what the secretary of Wigan Cage Bird Society says: "Dear Sir,—Glad to say our members are simply delighted with the posters and prize cards. They say they are the best and cheapest they have ever had.—Yours, etc., E. Ball." Send for samples and prices.—The Manager, Printing Dept., "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

KIRKCALDY C.B.S.

Special meeting Sept. 16. Decided to postpone annual show, fixed for Oct. 31, till Oct. 30, 1915. Secretaries please note to avoid clashing.—T. Arnott, Sec.

STANLEY (Victoria) F.F. & C.B.S.

Meeting Sept. 19, Mr. R. Peart chair, and a splendid turn-out. Decided to have an open Linnet class on schedule for our annual show Dec. 5 and 6. Prize money paid in full, 8s., 4s., 2s., 1s.; 1s. entry. We hope Linnet fanciers will give us a good entry, as we have engaged a popular judge, Mr. W. Reid (Sunderland). —W. Elliott.

MIDDLETON C.B.S.

Meeting headquarters, Sept. 14. Decided to hold our 15th annual show on Dec. 5. Election of judge at next meeting, Oct. 12, when Mr. Schofield, of Failsforth, who judged our young bird show, will give a very interesting lecture on "The Canary in General," and we hope to have all fanciers and friends present; new members will be enrolled at this meeting. —Jas. Hulton.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Committee are unanimously agreed to hold members' annual show on November 24. We hope country members will be able to get some birds through. There will be 59 classes. I shall be pleased to recruit new Border Fancy members; there are five classes offered. Prize money on sliding scale; many specials promised.—A. G. Cant, Hon. Sec. (30, Henslowe Road, East Dulwich)

WINDHILL C.B.S.

Special meeting Sept. 19, Blue Bell Hotel. Unanimously decided to accept N.G.M. Y.C.C. patronage for our open show Jan. 2. These classes will now read: Class 13, Yellow, Green Mkd. Cock; Class 13a, Buff ditto; Class 14, Yellow Hen; Class 14a, Buff Hen. Also decided to increase members' entry fee to 1s. 3d. (instead of 1s. as in previous years). Don't forget our members' show Sept. 26. Special prize of a cock chicken given for hottest fed bird shown by a novice. Also other cash specials for both sections.—J. Taylor, Sec.

NORTH LONDON C.E.A.

Meeting at headquarters Sept. 16. Decided to hold a one-day show at Library Hall, Church-street, Stoke Newington, on Oct. 24. Mr. J. Robson judge, in lieu of original date fixed. Also that next meeting be held at headquarters Oct. 14 instead of 21st. Mr. G. Mortlock gave an interesting paper on "Mule Breeding." His knowledge and experience in this direction are well known throughout the Fancy, and the attention given him by members is proof of the esteem we hold for our worthy chairman.—P. W. Jeffries, Hon. Sec.

WEST STANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting Sept. 18, Mr. W. Creswell chair. Schedule for members' show drawn up: 8 Nor., 2 Cim., 2 Crest and C.B., pairs for breeding, 8 Yorks., 8 Borders, 1 A.O.V., 2 Linnets, Goldie and Bullie, Greenie, Mule or Hybrid, Redpoll, Siskin or Twite, A.O.V. Hardbill, Softbill, and Foreign. The show will be held in Victoria Hall Nov. 7 and 8. At next monthly meeting Oct. 3 there will be a table show. Classes: Nor. Cock or Hen, Yorks., Border, British; 3d. entry; birds staged 6.30 at Corn Hotel; new members will be enrolled at this meeting. —W. Elliott, Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Meeting Sept. 19, headquarters, Victoria Hotel, Charterhouse-street, E.C. Mr. R. J. Pretty presided over a fair number. The society very much regretted to hear that Mr. Shakespeare was on the sick list. Owing to his not being able to attend the meeting to open the debate, the members present decided to draw up the schedule for autumn show. Specials from Messrs. Cullers, Durham, Harrison, and Gilbert, and the eight half-crown specials were allotted, and a special prize for the best bird shown by a lady member. Next meeting Oct. 3, with a table show, and a judging competition of Norwich and Yorkshires. Fanciers will receive a hearty welcome. Mr. T. Wright, of Watford, was elected judge for the autumn show. —W. Gilbert, Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Meeting, Markells Hotel, Mr. Allsopp, chair; the chief business was to decide if we should run open show this year. After some discussion it was decided, owing to the war, and to the hall we had engaged being in the hands of the Military, to abandon our open show for this year. It was resolved to hold a members' show on Nov. 21, when we hope to have a real good show. A discussion took place, re holding a Welsh National show, and this will be dealt with through the press. I trust members will make an effort to attend next meeting, as it is unfair to leave the affairs of the society to the faithful few. Please come along and show your grit; turn up at the meetings, for if we cannot hold a show there is plenty of useful work for you to give a helping hand in. We intend to have a washing exhibition at the next meeting. —E. Thomas.

THIS GREAT CANARY VOLUME

'Our Canaries'

Can be obtained for 1/- down. Read below.

Many people are making a Splendid Income from Canaries—you can, too.

There is a great demand for high-class Canaries, and those who know the secrets of breeding and rearing them are making a splendid income. Apart from the big profits to be made, it is most fascinating to be able to develop the quality of your birds in the same way as the expert horticulturist improves the beauty and value of his flowers and fruit.

A Mine of Information about Canaries.

Every detail of the wonderful art of producing prizewinning Canaries is explained step by step in "Our Canaries"—a truly magnificent work on the subject. There are very full instructions on the selection of the parent birds, mating, feeding during incubation, and the feeding and aftercare of your Canaries when fledglings, and during the moult. There is also important information on the preparation of the birds for the show bench. In addition to this there is a mine of information on countless other matters, including the treatment of Canaries that are ailing, and how to prevent the loss that so many experience among their young birds at this time of the year.

"Our Canaries" is easy to secure.

In order that you may start right away making more money with your Canaries, arrangements have been made so that you can now secure "Our Canaries" at once for 1/- down. The balance you can pay in easy monthly payments afterwards. If you require more information about this wonderful volume fill in and send the coupon on this page for an interesting illustrated booklet. It has been specially prepared for readers of "Cage Birds," and is quite FREE. In order to lose no time, however, you will be wise in sending postal order for 1/- for "Our Canaries" at once.

One opinion (similar to many others which we have received) from a delighted purchaser.

No. 6, Co-operative Houses, Brierley, near Barnsley.

Dear Sir, It is with great pleasure that I thank you for sending me that most wonderful volume entitled "Our Canaries." I am sure it is worth every penny you ask for it, and will certainly recommend it to my friends.

It is a marvellous volume on the anatomy of Canaries alone. You can make any use you like of this letter, because "Our Canaries" is a book that needs circulating among Canary lovers. Thanking you again, I remain, yours faithfully,

THOS. S. WALLIS.

SCOTCH FANCY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

Annual show, Sept. 19, National Halls, Mains St., Gorbals, Glasgow. Entries were about normal, and quality above the average. The genial president, Mr. James Hogg, Oakley, was unable to be present owing to an attack of sciatica, and his cheery word and warm hand-shake were much missed by the many fancier friends who made kindly inquiries regarding him. Let us hope he will soon be about again his usual self. The judges, Messrs. Carlaw, Rodger, Fleming, and McFarlane, discharged their duties well. They had a rare struggle to find the cup winner, which was a fine specimen of the bird of circle, belonging to Mr. John Dalgleish, Edinburgh. The runner up was a Cl. Yell. hen, a grand bird, the property of Mr. Andrew Allardice, Overtown.

At a meeting of the members, held on morning of show, before judging started, it was unanimously agreed to give the prize money to the War Relief Fund.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

- (1)—All queries must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left hand corner of the query.
- (6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must, of course, be sent to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John, British Birds, Mules, and Hybrids.—H. Norman, Foreign Birds.—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Wild Bird Life.—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Borders, Scotch, or any other variety of Canary, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

CAUSE OF YOUNG DYING (Nelsoner).—

(1) I think that the cause of the young birds' deaths was practically certain to be due to some error of feeding after the young were taken away from their parents, but you do not give enough details for me to say definitely where you went wrong. You make no mention of green food, nor how you fed the birds after they were on their own. As is quite too late to try again this year, the best advice I can give you is to separate the birds now, and keep them apart until next March or beginning of April, and meantime get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our manager will send you for 7d. post free, and well digest its contents between now and then. (2) The parents were not too old to breed successfully, this is self-evident from the results you obtained from them. Neither will they be too old next season, provided they still keep active, and in good health.

TUTORING EN MASSE (Crest).—No, I'm afraid you could not hope to get high-class results from training your young birds all together in the flight. With the tutor caged separately the youngsters would undoubtedly acquire a good ordinary type of song, but for pure or high-class singing this method is quite out of the question. You may, of course, keep the young in the flight until they are beginning to record their song nicely, but they should then be caged up separately for a few weeks at least to finish their training. As your youngsters are now beginning to sing softly, it is just time that you should cage them up to complete their tuition.

MAKES NO SOUND (W. Worth).—The loss of voice may be only temporary owing to the moult, but you should make yourself sure that the bird is not exposed to cold draughts, damp, nor sudden and extreme changes of temperature, or the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Your feeding also is unsuitable. Treat as follows:—For staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give in addition a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, millet and broken groats, and on three other days give a morsel of green food, or a little banana, sweet apple, or carrot as a substitute. In the drinking water add five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a fortnight. Remember that treatment is quite useless unless you remove the exciting causes.

TO REMOVE HOARSENESS (Jellicoe).—The only rational way to remove hoarseness is to eliminate the conditions that cause it direct cold draughts, damp, or unwholesome fumes. A cold position will not necessarily cause it if it is free of these conditions, provided the birds have not been removed direct from a heated room to such a position. You must also remember that at this season the moult may be responsible for a bird losing its voice, which is quite different from hoarseness caused by unhealthy conditions, and needs no treatment. If moulting is not the cause in your case treat the bird the same as advised to "W. Worth" in this issue.

COLOUR FEEDING (Dickie, Rochdale).—You are mixing the colour feed considerably too strong for one thing, and you omit to say whether you refer to pure tasteless pepper, or a mixture of tasteless and sugar, with or without a proportion of hot pepper. In any case it will be sufficient if you mix one good teaspoonful of colour with four teaspoonful of the egg food, and give this in equal shares to the five birds each day. Sprinkle it lightly with maw seed when giving it, and if there is nothing but the pure peppers in the colour, add four ounces of soft brown sugar to one pound of the pepper, and well blend it together. Then, I think you will experience no further difficulty in getting the birds to eat it freely. They would also take it better if caged in couples.

EVIL COMMUNICATIONS (Hawk, Leeds).—You can do nothing at all to cure your Roller of the fault of "chopping," now its song is fixed and mature. It is also practically certain to corrupt the song of any other Roller that you may introduce into the room with it, sooner or later. It all depends upon the individual bird; some picking up faulty notes much quicker than others. Unless your neighbour's bird is heard very distinctly in your birdroom I should hesitate to blame it for the fault in the Roller's song, which might have deteriorated even if it had never heard another bird at all. If you want to breed for song alone, and the Yorkshire is heard only somewhat indistinctly, I think you might safely try another Roller cock, after clearing out the one you now have. But if song is not your special object then it would be as well to be on the safe side by beginning again with any breed you may fancy in which song is not of paramount importance.

ABOUT THE WHITES (D.S.).—The White Canary certainly seemed to have lost a little ground last season, but still there were some offered for sale in our prepaid advt. columns last spring, and if you watch them at the beginning of the New Year you will very likely see some offered again. I have sent you addresses by post. No definite price can be named, as this varies considerably.

A QUINTETTE (Stanley).—(1) You can only breed cinnamon ticked Norwich by mating birds with cinnamon blood in their veins on both sides, as in the case of the Yorkshire. It is not essential for both birds of a pair to be actually marked with cinnamon colour provided the blood relationship is there. If you have a choice of specimens, for instance, the best pair for your purpose would be a cock lightly variegated, or lightly marked on wings with cinnamon, mated to a clear hen, bred from cinnamon marked birds, which you would know by the hen having pink eyes. The sexes may be reversed, but in that case you must be quite certain that the cock is really bred from cinnamon parentage. Also you could use two very lightly marked or ticked birds, but to aim at getting marked specimens you should avoid as far as possible using birds with patches of colour on the neck, breast, shoulders, and back. (2) You will get green ticked Norwich easily enough, by mating a ticked, marked, or lightly variegated buff cock with a clear yellow hen, or vice versa, or a ticked, etc., yellow cock with a clear buff hen, or vice versa, in each case the marking being of the green type. In this case it is not advisable to mate two ticked birds, as the marking is apt to run darker than the parents. (3) Treat this bird to a vapour bath. Place it in an open wire cage on the table, place a mug of nearly boiling water near the cage, and cover all—cage and mug—over with a woollen wrap or shawl to confine the steam. Leave it so for a quarter of an hour, then remove the water, but leave the cage covered for half an hour or so. Then return bird to its own cage, and keep a light cover over it for a time to protect it from a chill. Keep it rather on the warm side, continue giving the bread and milk with the flour of sulphur for a fortnight, and add to the drinking water on the alternate days five drops each of syrup of saffron and sweet spirit of nitre. (4) Enamel is certainly the most durable, and will bear a greater amount of washing than paint, and distemper is the least durable, and generally requires renewal at least once every year. For all practical purposes one is as good as the other if used with average skill, and sufficiently often. (5) No, it is not good policy to use bread and milk or other soft foods as the staple diet of Canaries. The staple food should consist of dry seeds, and soft foods be reserved as luxuries.

TO EXTERMINATE RED MITES (H. Smith).—The failure of your efforts to rid the cage of red mites is most likely due to you overlooking the surroundings when treating the cage. If it is a hanging cage the cord, hook, bracket, etc., on or by which it hangs, should be given just as careful attention as the cage itself, as these are often the recruiting stations from which the newly cleaned cage is re-infested. In the case of a back cage hanging on a wall, the wall should be thoroughly cleaned, and any loose or cracked areas of wall-paper carefully examined and repaired. If you pay attention to these points at the same time as you overhaul the cage itself you will certainly succeed in exterminating the pest. If the cage is not too large, immerse it in a copper of boiling water for a few minutes. Otherwise well saturate it over again with the fluid you will find mentioned in the book you say you have.

SITS HUDDLED UP (A. V. D.).—Give the bird a vapour bath as advised to "Stanley (3)" in this issue; keep it rather on the warm side, but do not overheat it, and see that it is not exposed to extreme fluctuations of heat and cold. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana every second day, and on the alternate days a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut lightly dusted with flour of sulphur and finally sprinkled with soft sugar. Continue this for a fortnight, then give the bread and milk, minus the sulphur, twice a week only, and fill in the other days by giving half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, niger, teazle and broken groats. In the water add 20 drops of whisky, five of syrup of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece every second day for a fortnight. Give a spray of watercess three times a week.

RED MITE DESTROYER (A. R. Millard).—Only a thorough overhauling of the cages will rid them of red mites once they become infested, and where there are a number of cages they should all be done systematically at the same time. Remove the birds to temporary cages, well clean and scrape all soilure from the infested cages, and burn it immediately. Then saturate them well inside and out with a solution of camphor in either methylated spirit or paraffin—an ounce to a pint—the spirit being quite the best, but it will spoil the varnish on the cages, if any, and necessitate re-varnishing, staining, etc., as the case may be. Use a small paint brush and work the fluid well into the joints, corners and cracks. Stand in the open air to dry and next day repeat the operation, and when dry this time re-paint or distemper the insides, touch up the outsides as may be necessary, and when quite dry the birds may be returned. When treating the cages with the fluid, do not forget to deal in the same way with all appurtenances and staging, shelves, etc., on which they have been kept. After returning the birds dip the ends of the perches in the fluid once a week for a time.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

SHOW CAGE FOR WAXWING (F.G.).

A suitable show cage to exhibit a Waxwing would be one made of light pine, about 16 inches long, 14 high, and 8 wide. The outside should be enamelled black, the front bars and interior light blue, not too bright, but inclining somewhat to grey. If you mix the colour yourself you should purchase a lb. tin of good quality light blue, and mix with it a small quantity of red and yellow ochre. Take a little of the paint on a piece of glass and mix the red and yellow (very little yellow) with a knife until you get the required shade, then imitate this in the bulk, adding the red first, mixing it thoroughly, and then the yellow ochre. If the red you use is of a dull tone you may not require any yellow at all. The perches should not be very large, as the Waxwing has rather small feet, half an inch diameter would be suitable. Have them just large enough for the bird to grip.

BIRDS FOR SMALL AVIARY (A.H.A.).

The following birds would suit your purpose, they would be interesting, and there would be a possibility of some of them nesting next summer, a pair of Goldfinches, Linnets, and Siskins, a Bullfinch and a Greenfinch, both hens. A cock Redpoll, and during the summer months a strong cock Canary. I would advise you to purchase them as soon as possible, and turn them into the aviary before the winter sets in. Be careful to hang your seed boxes so that mice cannot get at them, and place the drinking fountain in a sheltered corner, so that any slight frost does not freeze the water. In very severe weather this should be changed every two hours, the fresh water being slightly warmed.

FEEDING A YELLOW BUNTING (W. H. Dalton).

The Yellow Bunting is not a difficult bird to feed when in captivity. Canary seed is the only one that appeals to the Buntings; in fact, it should be their stock seed. Few of them will eat any quantity of others, though it is as well to give them occasionally a spoonful of wild seed mixture, a little rape, cracked hemp, and maw seed, also a little coarse oatmeal or shelled oats. But to keep them in the best possible condition they should be encouraged to partake of a little soft food. Offer them a few live ants' eggs, if procurable, and failing these dried ones soaked in new milk; after a time these can be mixed liberally with a spoonful of good insectile food, made slightly moist; until they partake of both. In addition to this food they should have mealworms, flies, small beetles, grubs, and scoured gentles, according as you are able to procure them. If fed in this way, kept perfectly clean and allowed to bathe, the Yellow Bunting is a healthy and handsome cage bird, and well marked specimens make good show birds.

COLOUR - FEEDING REDPOLL - CANARY (Novice).

No matter how much colour food you give your Redpoll-Canary, you will not get any brilliant colour upon him, because he is naturally rather sombre in tone. With some of the other crosses there is the real natural colour to work upon, consequently the food enhances this, and then if the bird takes it well and is perfectly healthy, we get the brilliant specimens that we see on the show bench. Continue the food right through the moult.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

AILING BUDGERIGAR (A.M.).—Give direct to the beak one drop of pure salad oil, repeat the dose after an interval of three hours. Get from your chemist a mixture of spirit of camphor, laudanum, essence of peppermint, tincture of rhubarb and tincture of capsicum, say a pennyworth of each, and well shake together. Put three drops of the mixture into the drinking-water daily till relief is given. Give a little milk sop daily, made so: Get two or three pieces of sponge cake as large as walnuts, half a teaspoonful of condensed milk, quarter teaspoonful of cod-liver oil emulsion, and two tablespoonfuls of boiling water, well stir together, then add a teaspoonful of corn flour and stir again till properly incorporated. In addition supply the regular seed diet, etc., and also keep a millet spray in the cage. The milk sop can be continued till the bird has recovered condition, and should then be gradually discontinued. Keep the bird fairly warm, keep cage very clean, and there should soon be an improvement. As soon as the diarrhoea yields, cease giving the mixture and put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water in lieu of same.

BUDGERIGARS (B.C.P.).—Note: the cage must stand below the level of the gas burners in your kitchen, and should have a light and airy, but not draughty, position. Give the bird one drop of pure salad oil, direct to the beak from a quill, every three hours, till the bowels have been well moved. As soon as this occurs, or in conjunction with the above, put 5 drops of laudanum in a little syrup, and when thoroughly dissolved put five drops into the drinking-water daily for a week, or instead of putting it into the water you can give one drop direct to the beak twice daily for the same period. Follow this by a course of hypophosphites in the drinking water to tone the bird up a little. With all caged birds a watch should be kept against constipation—in fact it is better to keep the bowels properly regulated by a weekly or fortnightly dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful) in the drinking water. If the swelling does not yield in the course of a few days paint with neat whisky, but the bird must be kept in quite warm quarters while this is being done. In the case of further adverse symptoms write again, at once, with full details. Do not omit to keep grit and cuttlebone in the cage.

AILING AMAZON (J. Bell).—In addition to the boiled maize, give this bird a seed mixture of canary, white millet, oats, hemp, sunflower seed and shelled nuts, about equal parts of each—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Cease giving the bread soaked in tea, but you can give either crusts or biscuit moistened with chemical food and water. Cuttlebone and grit must be continually in the cage. Get the mixture as advised to "A.M." in this issue, and put four drops daily in the drinking water till the diarrhoea ceases. As soon as this occurs put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water every other day while the moult lasts. As soon as the diarrhoea ceases offer ripe fruit daily, any kind it will eat that is in season. Keep the cage very clean, it would be wise to remove the droppings at once while the diarrhoea lasts, and for preference burn them. Keep the bird warm, yet in an airy but not draughty position. Report progress a month hence.

BUDGERIGARS (Paul).—By the time you receive this second reply the salad oil should have taken effect. I have carefully considered both your letters, and I can only advise you to give a little milk-sop, not sloppy; prepare so: Three pieces of sponge cake about as large as walnuts, one-third teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, half-teaspoonful of condensed milk, and a table spoonful of boiling-water, or a little more if necessary. It will be better, perhaps, to mix the liquid first and then add the sponge-cake for this species. If she will take this it will feed her up nicely, but if she will not, then you must give her one drop of the cod liver oil emulsion direct to the beak twice daily, but it is certainly desirable to catch her up as little as possible, especially if this distresses her at all; therefore if she does not touch the milk-sop the first day supply it for two or three days, so as to give her a full opportunity of doing so. If the bird does not struggle in your hand you could easily push its beak into the sop and it would then be certain to suck in a little, then while it is in your hands, give it one drop of the cod liver oil emulsion before returning it to cage; afterwards it will probably help itself to the sop. It will certainly benefit the bird to keep it quite warm, in a position near the fire, but not facing fire light, even if this means caging it separately for a time. If the bird dies it would be well to have the body sent for post mortem examination, so as to ascertain definite cause.

WARTY GROWTH (J.W.D.).—The warty growth by the side of beak will ultimately break away. Lightly touch the growths occasionally with tincture of iodine, but you must not get it into either the bird's mouth or eyes. Give a laxative twice a week so as to keep the bowels moving quite freely, at the same time there must not be the appearance of chronic diarrhoea—one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water is about the best. On other days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of hypophosphites in the water, and give three or four drops of cod liver oil emulsion daily, or a crust, piece of cake, or anything similar the bird will eat. Besides water, grit and cuttlebone, the bird's dietary should cover seed mixture, nuts, and ripe fruit regularly. Any of the following may be given as extras: Biscuit, plain cake, crusts, dry potato, raw carrot, green cereals—if the bird insists on having any of these moistened, do not use tea, coffee, milk, etc., but keep a mixture of chemical food and water by you for the purpose. Do not give general table scraps, slops, or animal food of any kind whatever. If it has been accustomed to boiled maize, this can be continued, though not necessary for an adult Indian Green Parrot. If you want the growth taken away you must let your local vet. do this for you, and on the spot he can advise some stronger caustic application than I can venture on.

AMAZON PARROT (Amazon).—Do not give tea, coffee or milk slops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food whatever. Every fourth day, so long as the voidings are not watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking-water, and on the intermediate days put half a teaspoonful of syrup of hypophosphates in the water, and continue for a month at least. Get a box of honey and borax and put a little in the bird's mouth once or twice daily—if you cannot handle the bird smear a little on the end of a stick and push this against the bird's beak near the gape, the bird will mostly bite at the end of the stick and so get the mixture. Dietary: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, dry crusts, biscuit, plain cake, green food (some Amazons are fond of boiled maize, but if yours is not used to this it need not be given), with, of course, the other essentials, viz., water, grit, cuttlebone and wood to bite up. Keep warm and out of draught, yet where it will get light and air.

BEAUTIES FROM FAR-OFF CLIMES.

These dainty little birds are seed-eaters, easy to keep, and thrive admirably in the British Isles.

THE DIAMOND FINCH, found solely in Australia, is a bird of striking plumage and indulges in a quaint "love dance." Its general colour is grey, with velvety-black breast and flank markings, the latter spotted with pure white; the beak and lower part of the back are vivid red.

THE COMMON AVADAVAT is found in India, Burma, Malay, etc. This tiny sprite is carmine-red in colour, and covered with pearl-white spots; the beak is coral-red. Its vivacity and curious song, together with its cheapness and readiness to breed, have made it a great favourite with bird-lovers.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

is not a matter of bubble and squeak; there's no question of cutting down quality to price. My one aim is to supply thoroughly serviceable articles at prices consistent with highest quality; so that intending purchasers may assure themselves of this fact, I send everything I sell on approval on the understanding that if the article is in any way misrepresented by me, or that a better article may be purchased elsewhere at anything like the same purchase, my goods may be smashed up or destroyed in any manner, and I undertake to refund the whole of the purchase money. Clap nets, made from superfine 3in. mesh netting, 2 yards long, 5 1/2 feet deep, and 4 feet ply, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed of above measurement, and are fitted complete with pegs, poles, and lines, ready for immediate use. Loose netting, specially knitted for bird catching, same as used in above nets, 3in. mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 ins., 1/2; ditto, 18 by 14 ins., 11d. each, post free. Please note, my net traps have no old-fashioned board arrangement about them, they are by far the most effective traps on the market, can be baited for hard and softbills at same time, and call-bird may be used inside them if desired; single trap cages, 6d.; double ditto, 1/-; treble ditto, 1/3 each; the above trap cages all have separate compartment for call bird in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each; genuine Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to catch and hold any bird to Rook size in every weather, 1lb. 6d., 1lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 3d.; all post free. Sparrow nets, on 19 feet bamboo poles, 6/6 complete; flirt pegs, 8d. each, post free; absolutely everything required by catchers always in stock; send stamp for complete list, which also gives hints on net making. Practically every professional bird catcher in the kingdom gets his living with articles supplied by me, and what they think of them the following letter will show:—"Sutton Rookery, near Long Sutton, Wisbech, Sept. 9.—Sir,—Last season I caught 400 cock Linnetts in 5 hours, and averaged 107 cocks per day right through the season, and every bird was caught in nets supplied by you. I have had other nets for 16 years, but they are useless compared with yours. I can catch more Linnetts in one day in your nets than I can in any other I have (and I have several makes) in a month. Your nets do not frighten the birds like others do and I get my living during catching season with nets, so I require the best. Yours are the best that are made, and not only best but cheapest. I shall want another in about a week.—Yours, J. C. Ball." (Mr. Ball claims to be the largest catcher in a county noted for its catchers (Lincolnshire), so he certainly knows what he is talking about.—W. Gore.) The above letter may be inspected here at any time, and I offer £10 to anyone that can prove that this or any other testimonial I have ever published is not genuine and unsolicited.

Use DITCHFIELD'S Famous Bird Medicines as supplied to the London Zoo.

Ditchfield's Bird Medicines have been used for over six years by most leading fanciers, and have been proved to be the most reliable. We have over 2,000 testimonials, and are receiving letters every day from fanciers, telling us of the marvellous results of our Bird Medicines. Mr. A. Ezra, London, writes: "I find your Tonic Drops excellent." Mr. Hatton, Atherton: "Your Tonic Drops are excellent; they have cured me four birds in soft moult. They are now in full song." J. Duncan, West Brae: "Have used your Tonic Drops and Lung Tonic for over two years; they have never failed to cure." Mr. Hutton, Holbeach: "I shall never be without your Revivo again." Major B. Horsbrough: "Your medicines are magnificent stuff."

NOTICE.—When ordering medicine, kindly mention for what complaint, as in some cases an extra bottle is required, which we enclose free. Ditchfield's Tonic Drops are a guaranteed cure for Soft Mould, Not Singing, Going Light, Feather Plucking, and Inflammation of the Bowels. In 7d., 9d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. This medicine is invaluable for birds during the moulting season, and for young birds just getting on hard seed. For Bronchitis, Wheezing, and Hoarseness, get Ditchfield's Special Lung Tonic, the grandest medicine ever introduced for chest and lung affections in cage birds, also in 7d., 9d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. For constitutional weakness and debility, get Ditchfield's Famous "Revivo." There's nothing to equal it for giving new life and vigour to the birds. A splendid Tonic after the moult. 7d., 9d., 1/1, and 2/- bottles. To advertise our medicines, we will send two 7d. bottles of any of the above medicines for 1/-, three for 1/6, or two 1/1 bottles for 1/9, three for 2/6. All medicines are sent post paid per return, at our risk. Two valuable seed recipes, How to Feed Linnets and Rollers for Song, given free to all purchasers of our medicines.—FRANK DITCHFIELD, Bird Specialist, OLDHAM. (1791)

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fullames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Meadowlarks? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 21d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

Club Reports.

BRIDGETON EAST END O.S.
 Meeting Sept. 15, Mr. A. McMillan presiding over a fine turn out. After business, which included very important matters, had been gone over, the president asked Mr. Stewart, senr., Cathcart, to begin his hand washing exhibition, which he had voluntarily come to do for the benefit of members. Mr. Stewart gave a fine exhibition, which interested the members very much. The president moved a hearty vote of thanks, and thanked Mr. Stewart very much for his services.—D. Burnett, Sec.

ALTRINCHAM OPEN C.B.S.
 Meeting, Sept. 23, Station Cafe, Altrinch., the proposed classification for members' show was discussed, no decision being agreed on, it was left in abeyance. Mr. T. Harrison gave a highly interesting lecture on "Seeds and other foods," their uses and abuses, which was much appreciated, and it is to be regretted that there was not a larger attendance of members. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Harrison. Next meeting Oct. 7, Station Cafe, Altrinch., "Washing Demonstration," by Mr. Hickson.—C. Bailey, Hon. Sec.

LARKHALL C.B.A.
 Meeting in Y.M. Halls, Sept. 19, Mr. Pundell presiding. Slight alteration was made in schedule for annual show on Oct. 31; Canary section—5 classes Nor., 5 Bord., 2 Yorks., 1 Common, 1 A.O.V., 1 Crest or C.B., 1 Sell. Judge, Mr. W. G. Muir, Kilmarnock. 2 classes Mule and Hyb., 9 Brit., 1 Mule or Hyb. Selling, 1 For., 1 Gift. Also Greenfinch hen class and class for best decorated cage for boys and girls under 14 years (open). Judge, Mr. P. McQuiston, Ayr. Next meeting Oct. 3, in Y.M. Halls at 7. Members holding cups for last year are asked to bring to next meeting. Schedules ready.—Allan Thomson, Sec.

WALKLEY C.B.S.
 Meeting Sept. 10, annual show business; decided to hold show at usual date, viz., Nov. 14. Classes were somewhat reduced, leaving 5 members' Yorks., 5 members' Norwich, same novice in both sections. Old birds: Yorks 3 classes, Norwich 3, British 4. Prizes 3s., 2s., 1s.; rule relating to members being financial to be strictly enforced. Show opens at 1 o'clock, close 8 o'clock. Birds can be brought Friday night 8.30 to 10 o'clock; each member to be responsible for two tickets. A letter of goodwill was sent to Mr. Lawton, Association Sec., who has left to join his regiment. Mr. Tisson was appointed to his place. A colour food competition followed, and very interesting it proved; 1st T. Ridal, 2nd C. Tomlinson. Members rally round next meeting, Oct.; table show, 10 classes.—C. Tomlinson, sec.

YORKS. AND LANCS. B.B. & M.C.
 Meeting Sept. 23, Market Tavern, Godwin-street, Bradford, Mr. W. A. Cowgill chair, and a fair turn-up of members. We had the pleasure of making five more new members, namely: Mr. H. Walsh, Accrington; Mr. G. Fletcher, Sheffield; Mr. A. Cuss, Ripon; Mr. W. Waind, Leeds; and Miss Pickering, Scarborough. This meeting being called to discuss what was to be done in regard to patronage, there seemed to be no other alternative but to cancel the few patronages we had left, seeing most of them had abandoned their shows, and it was agreed unanimously that the patronages be abandoned this year. Decided to give, for members of the Y. and L.B.B. and M.C., 3s. and bottle of wine value 1s. 9d. for 1st and 2nd most points in British and Mules, at Bradford West and Manningham, 3s. 6d. at Doncaster, and 3s. 6d. at Manchester Northern Counties O.S. Decided that all subs. and adverts. that are paid stand for next year. The war has upset nearly everything, but we must hope for the best and more shows next year. I hope members will show as many birds as they can at the shows mentioned. Bradford National Show is run in conjunction with Bradford West and Manningham for the benefit of the Cinderella Fund (three shows in one). The dates are: Bradford West and Manningham, Nov. 21; Doncaster, Jan. 9.—T. H. Inman, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE & LIZARD F.A.
 Meeting, Newmarket Hotel, Manchester, Sept. 19th. The chief business was in regard to show patronage, as the secretary had to inform the meeting that Nottingham and Sheffield had both decided to abandon their shows. However, a little brightness was brought into the matter when it was given out that Manchester and N.C.O.S. had decided to try at least a one-day show, and even had it under discussion about a two-days' show. The L. and L.F.A. gave them their patronage, and promised to try and make the Lanes. and Lizard classes a success. Decided to have 6 classes for Lancashires and 6 for Lizards, as follows:—Yellow Copy, Clear or Ticked Buff ditto, Yellow Plainhead ditto, Buff do., Lanes. Hen, A.V., and Lanes., Bred 1914. Lizards: Gold Clear Cap, Silver, Gold Broken Cap, Silver; hens, Gold Lizard, A.V., Silver, A.V. Mr. John Swallow, Oldham, judge. Sec. was instructed to ask Mr. F. W. Baker, the once famous Lizard exhibitor, to judge the annual Club Show, in connection with Denton Show, Nov. 21st. It is to be hoped that we shall be successful in getting this gentleman to judge, as his experience in Lizards should tend to bring out a good entry, and many fanciers will be pleased to once again see him amongst the "dark-uns." A little bird whispered the news that under the supervision of Teddy Fuller, the Rogues' Den Prince Albert Fund is an enormous success. Will members kindly note that subs. are now due, and send same on to me as early as possible. Next meeting Newmarket Hotel, Manchester, Oct. 17.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

PELTON FELL (Amalg.) C.B.S.
 Meeting Pelton Fell, Colliery Inn, Sept 26, Mr. J. Stanger chair. A discussion was held about including a few open classes at the annual shows, but members think there would not be plenty of support. Mr. J. Stanger was appointed to judge the birds staged. BRAMBLE AND CHAFF. (8): 1, c. Davison; 2, 3, vhc. hc, Wilford. GREENF. (5): 1, hc, Davison; 2, 3, vhc, Wilford. A.O. FINCH (2): 1, Wilford; 2, Davison. GOLDF. (1): 1, Davison. Next meeting at Chester-le-Street, Dunn Cow Inn, Oct. 10, at 6. Preparation of schedule for first annual show.—J. Robinson, Sec.

Mr. Horatio Hill, Settle Terrace, Bradford, writes that after Oct. 5 his address will be 3, Thornton road, Thornton, Bradford.

The dates of the show of the Salo C.B.S. are Nov. 27-28, not Nov. 23-29, as stated in our last issue in the letter from Mr. H. Whitney, asst. sec.

I was very pleased to see in CAGE BIRDS that our great Scottish National New Year Show is to be held, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, the hon. sec. of the Border Fancy C.C.

As I have had a few applications for schedules of Loanhead and District C.B.S. Show, writes Mr. W. B. Smart, Hon. Sec., would you announce that it is a Members' Club Show.

Will members of the Porth and Rhondda Valley C. and C.B.S. and others note that my address in future is c/o Mrs. Davies, The Aviaris, 66, Pontypridd-road, Porth, writes Mr. J. S. Jones, Sec.

We should be greatly obliged if you would kindly notify in your next issue that our show is only open to those exhibitors who will bring their exhibits to the show and take them away after, writes Mr. T. J. Hose, Hon. Sec. Clapham C.B.A.

In place of the open show for 1914, which I am sorry to state is cancelled, the Coventry Godiva C.B.S. is holding a members' show on the same date, Oct. 24, when we hope to have a good master of birds on view.—H. Saunders, Hon. Sec.

EXHIBITORS: SUPPORT THE SHOWS.

Remember that the societies are doing their best under circumstances of unusual difficulty to help fanciers and the Fancy.

Do YOUR Part by Sending Them Entries.

We are informed that the following societies have abandoned their proposed open shows for 1914: Cowdenbeath C.B.S., Buckhaven C.B.S., Kidwelly P.P. and C.B.S., Norwich Alliance C.B.A., Coventry Godiva C.B.S., Border City (Carlisle) O.S.

Mr. Martin Cook, Hon. Sec., Boscombe Fanciers' Association, having resigned through over pressure of business, all communications for the society in future should be addressed to his successor, Mr. E. T. Hames, "Fairholme," 30, South Road, Bournemouth.

The West Stanley C.B.S. holds a Table Show to-day (Sat., Oct. 3) in the Commercial Hotel, writes Mr. W. Elliott, the sec., and the monthly meeting will be held same night. Will all intending members please attend, as this is the last meeting before annual show.

Owing to the secretary of the Bradford West C.B.A., Mr. W. H. Kilburn, having been called up to serve his country, the duties of secretary have been taken over by Mr. F. P. Terry, 180, Lumb Lane, Bradford, to whom all communications for the society should be addressed.

We are open, writes Mr. Geo. Burton, sec. pro tem, Southern Border Fancy Club, 126, Lee Road, Lee Green, S.E., to give our patronage to two London and two Provincial societies who will give us a fair classification, as we do not want to drop all competition this season, in spite of the unsettled state of things.

We are pleased to hear from Mr. S. Wilcock, hon. sec. Eccleshill C.B.A., that the society is holding its shows as originally arranged. The three shows yet to be held are fixed for Oct. 17, Nov. 21, and Dec. 19, and at each there are 12 Yorks classes (6 novice), and 6 Norwich. Mr. Wilcock's address is 6, Back Manor Street, Eccleshill, Bradford.

Bradford East open show Oct. 10 has been granted the patronage of the Cinnamon-marked Y.C.C. The numbers of the added classes will be 30, 31, 32 and 33. Will fanciers please note this and let us have as good a show as possible in the present crisis? writes Mr. Wm. Cruise, Sec., 104, Gaythorne-road, West Bowling, Bradford.

An invitation is given to all fanciers of Boscombe and District to attend the meeting of the Boscombe and District C.B.A., held at the Railway Hotel, Holdenhrst Road, on Oct. 13, at 8, writes Mr. E. T. Hames, Hon. Sec. All members joining on this night will be able to show at our members' show in November; there will be 26 classes and good specials. We intended running our second open show this year, but owing to the national crisis find it impossible, local halls being booked on behalf of the Government. This society will in future be known as the "Boscombe and Dist. Fanciers' Association."

Spangles of "Silver and Gold." The "Toronto Sunday World," of Sept. 6, tells its readers that the Lizard Canary "is spangled all over the breast, shoulders, and back, with spots of silver and gold."

A Message from the Front. Am glad to let you know that I am quite well, writes Mr. "Bob" Orton (corporal, R.A.M.C., British Expeditionary Force), and am hoping still to see many more fine specimens illustrated in CAGE BIRDS, three numbers of which I have beside me. My wife will show my favourites, the "wee gems," for me in this my second season.

Fancier's Son Saved. Mr. C. Cattell, the Yorkshire enthusiast, of Wingrove Road, Newcastle-on-Tyne, had a son on the H.M.S. Hogue, one of the three cruisers recently torpedoed by the German submarines off the Hook of Holland. Fortunately he was one of the saved, but Mr. and Mrs. Cattell endured many hours of great suspense and anxiety till they got his wire to say he was safe. They wish to thank all who have made kindly enquiries, as it is impossible to write to everyone.

New Secretary for Richmond C.B.S. Mr. Nicholls having resigned the secretaryship of the Richmond and District (Surrey) C.B.S., I have been elected to fill the vacancy, writes Mr. S. Birch, and I trust that the present members and other fanciers in this district will rally round the club and make it a success. We have solid silver cups in competition. An extra special general meeting will be held Oct. 26 re annual show, at St. John's Hall, Richmond. All communications in future should be addressed to S. Birch, Bonner Hill Stores, Bonner Hill-road, Kingston-on-Thames.

OBITUARY.

MR. JAMES HOGG (Oakley, Fife). The death of Mr. James Hogg, Postmaster and General Merchant, Oakley, or as he was familiarly called "Jimmy" Hogg, will come to many as a great shock. He has been ailing for the last two years, but latterly he seemed to have got over his trouble, and was as spry and cheerful as ever. He could not be present at the National Derby at Glasgow as he had an attack of sciatica. Though in bed with this he was quite cheerful, and fully expected to be going about in a few days' time, but alas, on Wednesday last he took a slight shivering, and in a few minutes his spirit had fled. The Scottish Fancy is greatly the loser by his death. His was one of those genial natures, the most sociable, kind-hearted of men, and he was ever held in high esteem. His knowledge of his favourite, the Scotch Fancy Canary, was second to none, and for over 30 years he has been in great request as a judge at the principal shows in Scotland, where his judgments were always well received. By his demise one of the most prominent figures in the Cage Bird Fancy of Scotland has passed away. He was a member of various public bodies, member of the School Board for 24 years, and was chairman at the time of his death, Parish Councillor and Governor under the Culross Educational Trust, and President of the "Scotch Fancy National Derby" for some years. He is survived by a widow, a son, and two daughters. I am sure, writes Mr. Jas. F. Dewar, who sends these notes, that your readers will join with me in offering them our sincere sympathy. His funeral took place on Sept. 26, and was attended by many fanciers who had come long distances to pay their respects to their late comrade.

MR. JOHN BROWN, Edinburgh.

It is, with deep regret, writes Mr. Jas. Winter, that I have to announce the death of one of Scotland's oldest and most respected fanciers in the person of Mr. John Brown, of Edinburgh, which occurred at his native town, Auchterarder, on Sept. 25, after a long and serious illness. John, as he was popularly called, fell into bad health three years ago, but throughout all the pain he suffered he remained his bright and cheerful self until the end. His was a somewhat complex nature. Without venge, he always spoke his mind, but beneath the exterior lay a heart of pure gold. He was always ready to do a kindly action, and many were the fanciers who were proud to call him friend. His record as an exhibitor was as honourable as it was lengthy. He first exhibited at Auchterarder when he was a boy of 14 years, and pursued his hobby untiringly up to the end,

SINGING CANARIES FOR WAR HOSPITALS.

Severe pressure on space this week admits of only brief notice of our scheme. This progresses towards a favourable conclusion. We should still be glad, however, of promises of suitable living cages (vide notes in our last issue). Mr. Krenmer (Tib Street, Manchester) generously offers 6, Mr. H. Orford (Patricroft) 2, and Messrs. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool), S. Young (Crewkerne), H. C. Perks (West Hampstead), F. Allen (Hull), Burton Bros. (Lee Green), F. Schofield (Middletown), and E. J. Reynolds (Seven Kings) 1 each, the three latter also kindly offering a bird each in addition. Lord Peltimore (Poltimore Park, Exeter) has made the welcome and generous contribution of 12 singing Canaries; while Messrs. Capern (Bristol) will provide the seed and Messrs. Trower (London) the sand for a period of at least three months, free.

Canaries for the Hospitals

I am willing, if called on any time during the next twelve months, to supply free of cost:—

*One singing cock Canary and small travelling cage.

*One suitable living cage, with necessary fittings.

to be presented as a gift to any Hospital or Convalescent Home applying for same.

(*Strike out one item if you are not presenting both.)

his last show being Bathgate of this year. During the 55 years he won honours at all the principal shows in the United Kingdom, and as he travelled along with his birds he was a well-known figure, and loved by all. He always held a strong hand in Britishers, especially large Softbills and Bullfinches, and as a judge he was in great demand, owing to his strict integrity, and a terror to evil-doers. His memory will live long in the hearts of his many friends in the cage bird fancy.

His remains were followed to their last resting place in Newington Cemetery, Edinburgh, on Sept. 23, by a goodly number of fanciers. Our old friend John was truly a rough diamond of great worth, and the whole Fancy will assuredly extend to his sorrowing widow and family heartfelt sympathy.

The Moulting of Canaries.

One of the "Ten Minute Lectures" given at a recent meeting of the City and Suburban A.C.B.

By
F. J. MARTIN
(Battersea).

FANCIERS:—I have selected this subject for my few minutes' address, since it is one that must at the moment be uppermost in our minds. During the past months it has been a case of our birds doing their best or worst for us. Now the tables are turned, and we must do our very best for the birds, or it will be a poor season indeed.

I would impress upon you that it is better to see in the fancy paper a record in this wise: "No. 12, Jones, an exhibit grandly fed and beautifully staged," than the mere bald statement: "1st, Jones." Whoever is fortunate enough to merit the first named honour has indeed mastered the most difficult art of Canary culture.

Most of my hearers breed birds that have to be colour-fed, and no doubt they have at some time or other asked themselves what is the best vehicle they could employ to carry to the birds the pepper in the best possible manner. Most of you doubtless have concluded that egg and biscuit having answered such a good purpose during the breeding season, you will stick to the servant that has served you so well. I am not going to quarrel with you over such a decision, but I will submit an alternative that in my judgment has several advantages over the egg and biscuit.

An Expense Avoided.

Egg and biscuit at this time of year is an expensive item. It has to be made fresh daily. The preparing of such a food occupies some little time. If the usual attendant is away in the middle of the moult there is a difficulty for the family to give the colour food in the precise strength to which the birds have been accustomed; and the white of the egg does not, in my mind, take the colour as well as is desirable.

These several objections can be smashed by the aid of madeira cake. This cake is easily made, is appreciated by nearly everybody, and is certainly much cheaper weight for weight than egg and biscuit. Speaking from several years of experience I commend it to you as a cheap and sufficiently nourishing food to be used as a medium for colour-feeding Canaries. Personally, I get several made up, put them through the mill, mix the pepper, and then store in tins ready for use.

By this method the colour-food is always ready for use in perfectly equal strength, and the colour evenly distributed, and the required quantity can be given to the birds by a school lad with confidence. Should the food at any time require a little moisture, water will answer the desired purpose.

I give the pepper twice daily. With the afternoon portion I mix a little maw and gold of pleasure; this obviates the use of linseed, which I have not found Canaries to appreciate. As the birds finish their moult I discontinue the morning feed and substitute a little maw and rape.

Something for the Legs.

I do not consider any egg food in the breeding season complete without the addition of ground cuttlefish bone, nor colour food complete without carbonate of iron in the proportion of 1 oz. to a pound of pepper. Some fanciers say iron in this form delays the moult, but such a statement is as absurd as to say you are able to stop the leaves from leaving the trees in the autumn.

Additional economy can safely be secured by giving colour-food every other day until the birds are well broken into moult. When the adult birds are put up for moulting I always rub their legs with sulphur ointment; this I have found keeps their legs youthful and healthy in appearance.

Where there is a difficulty in getting birds to moult I have found spraying them daily with warm water, and giving a little syrup of buckthorn in their drinking water to bring about the desired result. Young birds go easily into moult when the proper time arrives; this can be detected by their body becoming in appearance as if it had been sprinkled with flour.

The bath should be freely used. Adult birds, however, like Weary Willie, shun it. These should be sprayed a little every other day. It helps the birds to rid themselves of their old feathers, and prevents the new ones from becoming soiled—a very important point; for I am satisfied that where new feathers are allowed to become really soiled, no amount of washing will ever get them so nice as they would otherwise have been. Further, dirt destroys the sheen that it is so essential for a show bird of merit to carry. Type is necessary to win, but sheen I really think is more so; therefore, assist your birds in every way to get it and to keep it, so that upon visiting the shows you can spot your exhibits by the colour and polish of their jackets.

Some of you may find the family stocking getting depleted owing to the many raids you have made upon it to keep your birds going; do not be down hearted, but be determined to secure a good moult, and I am sure your birds will by their wins and sales return you the outlay with interest. I hope, friends, that perchance I have said something that may be the means of helping to secure for you a success that exceeds your expectations.

SOFT-BILLS AS CAGE BIRDS

A practical article upon the keeping of some of our most popular Soft-bills.

BY

THE best method of storing berries is to gather them ripe and dry and place in a box; then cover them with sawdust and store in a dry place. Given plenty of sand and a bath on bright days they should do fairly well if provided with a good sized cage. My cages are of the box pattern, with a door in the front at each end, three feet long, twenty inches high, and fourteen inches from back to front. I like box cages best, for they keep out the draught, and prevent cats getting at the birds.

Sand-drawers are much more convenient than putting the sand on the cage bottom, for when the birds bathe they make such a splash. Remove the drawer before the bath is put in, so that all that is spilt can run out through the opening. Replace the drawer as soon as the cage has drained, thus the sand is always dry. Thrushes and Blackbirds are best hung outside all the year round unless the weather be very severe, when they may either be covered up with an old sack or put indoors in the cool out of draught. I have a piece of corrugated iron on the tops of my cages to keep out the wet and draw an old sack over the front at night to prevent cats getting at them.

The Skylark's Grand Song.

The Skylark, although such a grand songster, is not kept nearly as much as the Thrush, possibly because its wants are slightly different. The green grass which is so essential to its welfare is rather scarce in towns, so to see or rather hear it one must journey across the country glades. In spring it is one of the first birds to sing in the morning. It will rise from the ground and commence to sing immediately. Higher and higher it will soar in small circles, singing all the time, till almost lost to sight. Down it will come, just as steadily, still singing, till within a few feet of the earth, when it suddenly ceases, and darts to the ground.

The domestic affairs of the Skylark generally commence in May, but I have found its nest during the last week in April. It is chiefly composed of grass, becoming finer towards the centre, and is always placed on the ground. Some are built under a tuft of grass, others among corn, while some are placed in a slight depression on the bare land without any protection whatever. I once found a nest over which was built a canopy, possibly because the young rye in which it was built had been cut down. The eggs are very similar in colour to the earth, and when the nest is built on fallow land are easily overlooked. They usually number three to five, often not more than three.

The young birds are fed on insects and grubs, which are usually rather plentiful amidst the surroundings. If cage birds are wanted it is best to hand-rear, as old birds do not settle down like the former. When the feathers begin to break is the best time to take them, and as the nest is not easily removed whole place them in a box on some hay. Feed as advised for the Thrush and Blackbird. I do not give any hemp, for I think young Larks are about the biggest gluttons going. Continually feeding them on food containing hemp makes them very fat.

Love to "Hustle in Sand."

When they get a few feathers, a little grated carrot and a pinch of sand mixed with the food is very beneficial to them. The carrot helps to cleanse the liver without scouring them and the sand aids digestion. Always keep plenty of sand on the floor, as Larks do not use water in their toilet but hustle in the sand like fowls. A few cut-up worms, caterpillars and small pieces of meat should be mixed with the food, which should be made less moist as they pick up. When they feed fairly well the diet should be gradually changed to the following. One part meat meal, one part ants' eggs to four parts ground puppy biscuits, made just crumbly moist with grated raw carrot or a little water.

Do not be in too great a hurry to separate them, for they are very sulky birds by themselves, and should they show signs of this after being parted put them together again for a few days. The cock birds are usually distinguished by being the largest and boldest of the youngsters, bracing themselves up into various attitudes not noticeable in the hens. A piece of green turf should be put into the cage at least twice a week, for they enjoy picking among this, and, in fact, it almost seems a necessity to keep them in health and condition. When they are finally separated the hens may as well be liberated, for they are of little value.

The bow-fronted cage is as good as any, and into one of these each of the cock birds should be put. The stock food now should be some good insectivorous packet food, or the following — One part meat meal, one part ants' eggs to four parts puppy biscuits or barley meal. In summer middlings may be substituted for barley meal, as this is not so fattening. Mix the required quantity crumbly moist, not too wet or the birds will leave it, as they do not like anything that sticks to the beak. Give a piece of green turf about twice a week or oftener if possible.

MORE BIRDS OF PARADISE ARRIVE.

Mr. W. Frost Makes Another Successful Trip to New Guinea and the Aru Islands!

The London Zoological Society's stock of Birds of Paradise having gradually diminished and become reduced to some four or five specimens, none of which were of species carrying the characteristic flank plumes so coveted by the plume hunters, it was thought desirable to try to obtain more specimens if possible, and with this object in view it was arranged between the Zoological Society and a few private aviculturists to send out Mr. Wilfred Frost for these and other rare birds. Mr. Frost sailed last autumn for New Guinea and the Aru Islands, where he hoped to obtain the Paradise birds, and perhaps on his way be able to arrange for some Argus Pheasants and other rare Malayan species to be secured, so that he might pick them up on the return voyage.

Killed for their Plumes.

He was very successful in Aru, where he secured a number of specimens of the greater Bird of Paradise (Paradisca apoda) and the King Bird of Paradise (Cicinnurus regius), while in South-west New Guinea he obtained the Lesser Bird of Paradise (P. minor). He found both the Aru species common, but the numbers of the former consist almost entirely of immature birds. It appears, as Mr. Walter Goodfellow also found, that every full-plumaged male is killed for its plumes, which are grown when it reaches some four or five years of age, and that only the young males, which commence to breed when two or three years old, are left to propagate the species.

The voyage home in a Dutch boat was not without excitement, for after the declaration of war the ship was constantly stopped by cruisers and her papers examined. The captain's intention was to proceed direct to Amsterdam, but the ship was detained at Portsmouth, and Mr. Frost allowed to disembark there with his collection. Very great difficulty was experienced in obtaining fruit for the birds on the voyage, most of it having been bought up by the ships detained in the ports, and the collection suffered in consequence. Besides Birds of Paradise, the collection contains a number of other interesting birds.—R. I. Pocock, in "The Field."

How to Breed Mealworms?

SIR,—I should be very glad if any fancier would kindly give me a few hints on how to breed mealworms.

Uncommon Birds in London.

SIR,—Seeing that a correspondent mentions the Redstart and Willow Wren, I may say that I saw on Sept. 23 at mid-day a wild duck cross Church Street, Chelsea, from some gardens. It flew not more than 10ft. high. I also had a Golden Crested Wren brought to my shop on Sept. 20 by two gentlemen, who said they caught it in Kensington Gardens, and wanted a cage to put it in! These two birds may, of course, have escaped.

Local Shows to "Keep Things Alive."

SIR,—I am very sorry so many of our open shows have been abandoned through the war crisis. I think that instead of having no show, it would be much better to have local shows with a less classification and reduced prize money, etc., exhibitors to bring their birds to the show. I am sure such shows would pay all right, and would help to keep our hobby alive. This method would at least let us know who have the best birds, which would give some satisfaction in return for the trouble and expense of maintaining one's stock. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it so well deserves.

A Rustic Superstition.

Do Parent Birds "Poison" Their Young?

SIR,—I lately came across another survival of the old superstition that the parent birds will poison their young if the latter are put in a cage near the place where they were hatched. I wonder how many of your readers who have tried this method of getting young British birds reared have experienced this "poisoning"? I have had quite a number of nests reared in this way myself without any mishap whatever, and I naturally consider the story all nonsense.

The writer "R" says:—"M.S.S." brings up an old superstition that if young birds are taken and put in a cage near the place they were reared, the parent birds will seek them out, try to release them and, failing, will deliberately feed them with poisonous food, so that they die. In the most remote country places this is firmly believed, and in some cases that I know about as a lad, the young of Blackbirds, Thrushes, and Linnets so exposed were attended by the old ones until they were dead, which was in a few days after being caged. It was said the old birds used poison berries from the hedges and the yew tree."

Tips on Soldering.

SIR.—In reply to Mr. Tuthill, re making wire fronts, I make all my wire fronts for the cages I have sold since I won the gold medal at the Crystal Palace for double breeders. You want a board 2ft. long by 18 inches high. Tack a strip of wood, about 1in. wide and the thickness of the punched bar, along the top of the board, and have ready a second strip about the same as the top piece. Cut the number of wires you want, all of one length. To ensure this tack temporarily the loose strip, according to the required length of wires. Then hold the wires up to the strip, and cut off with a pair of flat-nosed pliers, holding the pliers at the edge of the board; by doing this you must get them one length. Take up the strip and take two of your wires and lay each end of the board; then tack the strip tight up with the two wires in between. Thread all the wires through the three punched bars, leaving out the door wires, also four for the fixing to cage, and for the drinking holes. Lay your front in between the strips, push the top and bottom bars close up to the strips, gauge the centre one to where you require it, and solder with broken spirits of salts with a hot iron. Put the spirits on the front with a small brush. When soldered, fit in the long wires, and those with the seed holes, and you will get a good square front quickly made. Any other question re fronts I shall be pleased to answer.

A Lark Food that Will Keep.

The Suggested Welsh National Show.

SIR,—I was very pleased and interested to read the letter from Mr. Banks, Cardiff, in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS re a suggestion of holding a national show. I think it is time that something should be done towards this end. Why should not Wales have a national show as well as England and Scotland? If we, as Welsh fanciers, put our shoulders to the wheel, we shall have one of the finest shows possible. I hope that this opportunity will not be allowed to pass.

Grangemouth C.B.S. Proposes a Joint Local Show.

SIR,—The postponement of many shows in this district is through the military occupying of most of the suitable halls, and to a good few fanciers not being in a position to support so many fixtures this year. I am calling a meeting for Saturday, Oct. 3, at 7.30, at the Oddfellows' Hall, Falkirk, to see if three or four of the local societies cannot have a joint members' show this year (say at Falkirk, being the most central). I have written to a few societies, and most of them have offered their support, so I would like to have a good attendance of local fanciers. Falkirk and Dis. C.B.S., Grangemouth and Dis. C.B.S., and Bannockburn C.B.S. have decided to join hands in the above scheme.

Eastleigh C.B.S. Undaunted.

SIR.—At the meeting of the Eastleigh and District C.B.S., held Sept. 21, it was decided not to cancel our show fixed for Nov. 25 and 26. It was pointed out that we stand in a good central position, with the best railway service possible. It only remains for fanciers to give us a bumping entry, as we are allotting 30 per cent. of the tickets sold to the War Fund. We have a number of specials offered at present, and there is a possibility of more to come. Fanciers desiring a schedule should write, and I shall be pleased to forward one as soon as printed.

SIR.—At the meeting of the Cumnock C.B.S. held on Sept. 26 at the Town Hall, Anchinleck, Mr. J. Hailey in the chair, and a large attendance, among which were a few new members, the first business was the consideration of the wisdom of holding show under present war crisis, but after consideration of circumstances and means at our disposal, it was carried unanimously to go on with show and give the surplus of same to the Relief Fund. Mr. Andrew Wilson was elected vice-president in the place of the late respected vice, Mr. Arthur Tannoch. The other business in connection with show, viz., the fixing of stewards, sub-committee, doorkeepers, etc., was carried through and a pleasant meeting broke up with a vote of thanks to chair. As this is our last meeting

S. TICKELL.

SOUTH AFRICAN CAGE BIRD CLUB.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee held at the R.S.T. Stores, Johannesburg, on June 29, 1914, the Hon. Treas., Mr. W. G. Tickell, tendered his resignation on account of leaving for England. It was carried unanimously: "That a hearty vote of thanks be given to Mr. Tickell for the able and unstinted manner in which he has performed the duties of Hon. Treas. to the Club, and also to wish him bon voyage and a very pleasant holiday in Europe, though we trust that Europe will not fascinate him to such an extent as to keep him there, as the Fancy in South Africa can ill afford to lose such a worker, and a conscientious and upright judge of Mr. Tickell's type."

Mr. Van Niekerk, on behalf of the Rand Poultry Club, paid tribute to the able manner in which Mr. Tickell had executed his duties as judge at the Central South African Championship Show, Johannesburg, on the 5th and 6th of June, having had the arduous duty of judging, single handed, the largest number of cage birds (viz., 264) ever staged in South Africa, to the entire satisfaction of all exhibitors, which in itself should be something to be proud of.

On behalf of the members of the South African Cage Bird Club Mr. Tickell was presented with a silver cigar case, suitably inscribed, as a token of their high esteem and great regard. Mr. Tickell, in a few well-chosen words, thanked the members, and said that during the seven years he had been with them he had the honour of judging the Central South African Show (the Crystal Palace of the country) on four occasions, and he was pleased to hear that he had given them satisfaction. The present they had given him that evening came as a great surprise, and it was one that would always be treasured as coming from right down honest fanciers. He trusted the Club would prosper and continue still to look after the interests of the Fancy.

A Scheme for a Combined Show of Northumberland Societies.

SIR,—A meeting of the Ashington C.B.S. was held on Sept. 19, when the suggestion of a federation of local clubs for the purpose of holding an annual show was discussed, and a resolution passed to forward a rough idea of the scheme to the Fancy press which could serve as a basis for discussion for other clubs, and stimulate the idea. We could afterwards, perhaps, arrange a conference of delegates from different societies to consider the whole question. The following societies were mentioned: Blyth, Newsham, Morpeth, Choppington, Cramlington, Cambois, and Delaval, with Bedlington as a centre.

Suggestions:—1.—That the committee of management consist of one delegate elected by each society, who shall elect chairman and secretary.

2.—That each society pay an annual subscription of 5s.

3.—That the show be held on the 1st January.

4.—That societies show their birds in teams of six.

5.—That a cash special be given in each class to the society gaining highest points.

6.—That the entrance be 1s. per cage, to be paid by exhibitor; and the prize-money be 20s. per class.

7.—That each society take their own entrance money, and forward to district secretary one week before the show.

8.—That judges be elected by ballot, each society having the right of nomination.

Assuming that six societies joined the federation, take as example, say, Class I., yellow Norwich. Under the suggested rules, each society showing a team of six birds, an entry of thirty-six at 1s. would mean 36s. per class, and, allowing for general expenses and cash specials, prize-money of £1 per class could be paid. A show organised on the above or similar suggestions would be a great success not only from the number of entries, but also from the interest which it would create by one club competing with others for special prizes and for the honour of scoring the greatest number of points for the club and the district which it would represent. A great saving would also be effected in printing and advertising and postage, as each club affiliated would supply the schedules to its own members and arrange the entries for its own district.—Signed on behalf of the Ashington C.B.S.,

JOS. MILES,

THOS. THOMPSON.

In existing circumstances the undertaking is as gigantic as it is generous, and exhibitors should endeavour to make the show a huge success, with the view of benefiting the funds of the Red Cross Society, and at the same time as an appreciation of the public spirit of the three associations who are making themselves responsible for the show. Provincial exhibitors should not hesitate to send their most valuable exhibits, as arrangements will be made to collect the birds by special vans before the show, and to deliver them afterwards at the various railway termini.

Prospective exhibitors would greatly assist the management by sending a postcard to the undersigned for schedule, which will be ready shortly, 64, Chaplin-road, Wembley, Middlesex.

Clapham's Forthcoming Show.

SIR,—The Clapham and District C.B.A. Show, on Thursday, Oct. 15, is open to all fanciers who will deliver their birds to the show and take them away afterwards. Schedules can be obtained of Mr. T. J. Hose, 5, Wells-crescent, Camberwell. There are about 50 classes. Immediately after judging the show will be open to the public. The hall is the Strathblane Hall, Plough Hotel, Clapham Junction, and as the printing expenses have proved to be unexpectedly high we can only hope for a good gate.

A Great Autumn Show for London.

The Horticultural Hall Exhibition to be Held Conjointly by the London C.B.A., National British Bird and M.C., and Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League.

ALL PROFITS TO THE BRITISH RED CROSS SOCIETY.

We have received the appended communications from the secretaries of the N.B.B. and M.C. (Mr. Carr) and the F.B.E.L. (Mr. Silver), conveying the decision of their clubs to join with the L.C.B.A. in the holding of the Horticultural Hall Exhibition on Nov. 26, 27 and 28. We are sure that fanciers throughout the British Isles will learn the news with considerable satisfaction and congratulate the societies concerned on the plucky attitude they have taken up, also, what is of even greater importance, support them generously with entries when the time comes round.

Mr. Allen Silver writes:—"Although it has been found inadvisable to maintain the very exhaustive classification that you were good enough to publish for the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League early in the year, the League has made arrangements for, considering all things, a fairly exhaustive collection of classes, and it is to be hoped that the number of entries will be a large one. Keepers of foreign birds are asked to do all they can to support this fixture, because the L.C.B.A., N.B.B. and M.C., and the League have agreed to derive no pecuniary benefit from the show in the event of a profit, but to hand all proceeds, over and above working expenses, to the funds of the British Red Cross Society. Schedules and entry forms will be available on or about November 1st, and I shall be only too pleased to furnish anyone with particulars regarding the exhibition, which, all being well, will take place on November 26, 27, and 28 at the Horticultural Hall.

Country exhibitors need have no fear with regard to sending their birds (provided there is at the time no general disorganisation of traffic), because special arrangements have been made to collect and despatch birds at the several London termini. The address of the show manager (from whom schedules, etc., will be obtainable) will appear later in the show advertisement columns of CAGE BIRDS.

The League appeals to everyone who keeps foreign birds to send as many as they can, because every bird entered or sold will be something on the way to a profit, and as this joint arrangement has been made possible in the interests of the Fancy, the Fancy, it is hoped, will come forward in an enthusiastic manner and make the project a success. Then it will be possible for the bird-keepers of Great Britain to say that whilst sustaining the interest in their own hobby during trying time, at the same time they carried out their programme with a worthy object in view. I may add that those societies who have obtained the League's patronage, and who are still holding open fixtures may conclude that the patronage still holds good.—A. Silver (Hon. Sec. F.B.E.L.), 303, High Road, Streatham."

Mr. Carr also sends a stirring appeal on behalf of the N.B.B. and M.C., and gives similar details to Mr. Silver, and the latter we have not thought it necessary to repeat. He adds:—"The very exhaustive classification we had previously proposed to give would, under the circumstances, stand but little chance of filling, so the N.B.B. and M.C. have provided a smaller one, which, however, lays claim to being fair in arrangement and pretty extensive. As these classes are open to all, and conditions still apply, our esteemed Hon. Treasurer, Mr. T. R. Trower, has decided to allow his original offer to stand, viz., 5s. for the most entries in each class for a member or non-member, and a silver medal in each class for the most points. If a non-member of the Club gains most points the exhibitor can take the same by becoming a member of the club.

The club hopes that all who exhibit British birds will make this section a success by entering as many birds as they can. This will be one of few great open events that may stand good this year, and as it is being held not only for the benefit of fanciers who have moulted and prepared birds, but also for a good cause, may I count upon the support of the British bird-keepers of Great Britain. Everyone cannot make a big entry, but every entry counts, and every sale counts, and if the enthusiasm of the Fancy is equal to the occasion, there is no reason why the funds of a deserving object should not be considerably helped.—J. P. Carr, Hon. Sec. N.B.B. and M.C., 45, Overdale Road, South Ealing."

The full classifications considerations of space prevent our publishing; they will be found, of course, in the schedules issued in a few weeks' time. Briefly the N.B.B. and M.C. offers 22 classes for British birds (13 for seed-eaters, 8 softbills, 1 albino), 1 Continental class and 10 for Hybrids, including a matched pair class. The F.B.E.L. offers 31 classes, covering 10 for Parrots and Parakeets, 11 for Finches and other seed-eaters, 8 for softbills, 1 Doves, Quails, etc., and 1 Albinos and Hybrids.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Meeting, Village School Room, Alexandria, Sept. 22. Mr. A. W. Donaldson, chair. The principal item of interest was the intimation that the hall engaged for Annual Show had been commandeered by the military authorities. A general discussion having taken place, it was brought out that nearly every hall was in the same position, however, the final agreement was that if any suitable premises can be had the show should go on, and a strong committee was appointed to go thoroughly into the matter and report same at next meeting.—A. H. McLean, Sec.

PORTH & RHONDDA VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 26, at Headquarters, a poor attendance; Mr. Legg in the chair. It was regretted that more members were not present, as it seems a pity for a paper such as Mr. Legg's to be read before a poor attendance. After business Mr. T. James was asked to take the chair, and Mr. Legg gave his most helpful and instructive lecture on British birds and the effect sunflower seed has on same. He also gave many other useful hints, but as time was getting on we had to draw the meeting to a close with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Legg for the way he gave his lecture. Next meeting October 10, at Headquarters, when Mr. Challenger will give a lecture on Yorkshires. All members are requested to attend, as subs. are due.—J. S. Jones, Sec.

[Mr. Legg's lecture will appear in a later issue.—Editor "C.B."]

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting Sept. 28, Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, Mr. W. A. Shepherd chair, and 25 members present. The chairman announced that Mr. V. Wynn, our popular sec., was enjoying a fortnight's holiday in the North of England and Scotland. A judging competition in Norwich Plainheads was the feature of the evening, members staging 27 birds in two classes, 12 yellow and 15 buff, and quality was above the average, which augurs well for keen competition at our annual show in November. Mr. G. Gardner acted as final judge, and evidently gave satisfaction, as our expert critics did not question his placing the awards. The judge fully explained his reasons for placing the various birds, and impressed on members breeding for exhibition the necessity of persevering to eradicate little faults. Members accorded Mr. Gardner a very hearty vote of thanks for acting as judge, and also for his very instructive remarks.—F. Thynne, Asst. Hon. Sec.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Meeting Sept. 26, Mr. George Wareing chair, and a good number in attendance. Decided to hold the annual contest on Nov. 27 and 28 at the Old Boar's Head, Corporation Street, Manchester. Classes: Champ. Young Birds, Nov. Young Birds, Open Champion. Amateur and £2 Limit will be provided. Messrs. Wareing, Massey, Kelsaw, and Tomlinson were elected judges. Owing to some of the shows not taking place this season the points competition will be withdrawn. The feeling of the meeting was totally against the judges' names and the classes they were to take being printed in the schedule.—A. Percival, Hon. Sec.

BUCKHAVEN C.B.S.

Owing to the Society having reluctantly to abandon their annual open show on account of all the halls being taken up by Territorials, the annual general meeting took place on Sept. 19. Our worthy President, Mr. A. Peters, resigned office (owing to indisposition). Mr. W. Foster (late Sec.) was elected in his room, with George Paterson, 20, Taylor's Buildings, Wellesley Road, Methil, as Sec.; other office-bearers re-elected. If a suitable hall can be got a club show will be held on an extensive scale early in the New Year. The open show of 1915 will in all probability be held on Oct. 30. Seeing we claim to be the premier society in the County, neighbouring societies are requested to note date.—Geo. Paterson, Sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

CODNOR PK. & EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Meeting, Portland Arms, Jacksdale, Sept. 26, when a good number turned up and business was got through in fine style. Mr. L. Parsons and Mr. P. Potts were selected as stewards for the open show. It was decided that each member should receive a special on points for the open show and that members must pay their subscription at next meeting, Oct. 10, at Eastwood, to compete for same.

NORTHAMPTON GOOD INTENT P. & F.S.S.

Special meeting Sept. 7 to consider the advisability of holding the All England show, announced to be held in the Jubilee Hall, Franklin's Gardens, Oct. 7. The members felt it would be unwise to hold the show as arranged, but decided to hold one on a smaller scale one month later, in the old Odd-fellows' Hall, Nov. 4 and 5. Any tickets distributed for the show previously announced will be available for the one now arranged.—G. Hobbs, Treasurer and Collector.

REDCAR C.B.S.

Meeting Crown and Anchor, Sept. 23. Mr. Bray presided over a good muster. Decided to hold a young stock show Oct. 10, at the Crown and Anchor, and the following classes were fixed: Champion Yorks. Yellow, Buff, and Marked or Variegated Yellow or Buff, Novice Yorks. ditto, Norwich Yellow, Buff, A.O.V. Canary, Mule or Hybrid, Linnet, Goldfinch, and A.O.V. British, and we hope to have a good show. Will those members who are behind with their subs. please settle before the show according to rule.—C. L. Mallory, Sec.

BORDER FANCY C.C.

Will members note that Mr. D. Jenkins, 71, Argyle Street, Swansea, is now a member? Most of the club lists were out before I got Mr. Jenkins, so will members please fill in his address in their list. I hope they will not forget with entries the L.C.B.A. Show, which has the patronage of the club. I should also like to draw attention to a mistake of my own in not forwarding Mr. W. Hy. Wright, 35, London Road, Carlisle, whom I trust members will add to any lists sent out without him. As an encouragement to Haddington for carrying on their open show the club has granted them a novice medal. Any society who intends holding its open show, and which has not already been granted a novice medal, should now send in an application. The meaning of novice under B.F.C.C. rules is one who has never won a medal.—W. B. Smart, hon. sec.

EDINBURGH C.B.S.

Meeting Cairn's Memorial Hall, Gorgie-road, Sept. 15, with a good turn-out. President, Mr. A. W. Watson, gave report as delegate to the West of Fife League, in connection with the travelling facilities of birds during the show season, which was highly satisfactory. Sec. gave report of F.F. show held Aug. 1, showing a balance of about 13s., which was quite satisfactory. Annual show business then came up for discussion. It was agreed that we ask the Leith Printing Co. for estimates for classification forms and catalogues, the same firm to supply posters and prize cards. Sec. was instructed to write sec. of Edinburgh Western O.S. re use of staging, and terms of hire for same. Classification for table show Oct. 20 came up for discussion. It was agreed that we have the following classes: Norwich, 2 colour-fed and 2 non-fed; Crest or C.B., 1; Bord., 3; Scotch Fancy, 2; A.O.V., 1; Mule or Hybrid, 1. Fee, 2d. per bird.—J. Charlton, Sec.

HALIFAX O.S.

Meeting Sept. 26, Plummet Line Hotel. Mr. R. E. Helliwell gave an exhibition of washing before an interested company to the number of about forty. After he had put a couple through the tub, and explained his method, four of the novices present had a competition amongst themselves for a silver medal, kindly given by the President, Mr. F. Townsend; Mr. H. Crossley won. Mr. F. Lee proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Helliwell for his demonstration, and was glad to see some of the raw novices present, several of whom said they had not seen a Canary washed before. Mr. Crossley thanked the donor of the medal, and said he would not be satisfied until he had won a gold one. Mr. Helliwell briefly replied, and said if anything he had done had helped anybody he was amply repaid. Will members make a special effort to be present at next meeting, Oct. 3, so that we can do something about the Open Show, which will be our twenty-fifth.—H. Clegg.

POSTERS

Prize Cards, Cage Slips, Badges, Judges' Books, cheapest and best. Read what the secretary of Wigan Cage Bird Society says: "Dear Sir,—Glad to say our members are simply delighted with the posters and prize cards. Instructive Books for Bird Lovers.

The authors, all well-known experts have given the methods to be employed in reaching success in that particular branch of the cage-bird hobby dealt with. There is all the experience of years of careful study at the disposal of our readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper building, fitting, and management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1.—By H. W. Batty (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS, 3/6.—By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moulit the birds to get the richest possible colour.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

CURE FOR DIARRHOEA (E.V.).—(1) Keep floors and perches as clean as possible, and to assist in attaining this object strew the floors well with clean pine sawdust for the present. Stop all green food, and cut all linseed out of the dietary until the looseness is removed. Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and in addition give half a teaspoonful per bird daily of a mixture of equal parts broken groats, crushed arrowroot biscuit and maw seed. A piece of banana may be given three times as a substitute for green food. In the water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny-piece for one day only, and after this give daily four drops each of tincture of gentian, tinct. of opium, and dilute sulphuric acid until the droppings resume a normal consistency. (2) Treat the hen that has a difficulty in breaking away into the moult to a vapour bath, and treat generally the same as advised to "Stanley (3)" in last week's issue.

A TAIL WAGGER (Villager).—Beyond saying that the tail is always on the move you give no symptoms to lead one to form an opinion as to what is wrong. Does the tail move in unison with the breathing, or is it a kind of jerky movement at intervals? And is there any difficulty of breathing? Try the following, and if the bird is not well in a fortnight, write again and give full particulars of all symptoms shown, and say how you feed and where you keep it. See that it is free from cold draughts, and extreme, rapid fluctuations of temperature. In addition to the usual seed diet give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every second day, and on the alternate days a spray of watercress or some other green salad. In the drinking water add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea and ten drops of lemon juice for three consecutive days, and after this give instead 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for the remainder of the fortnight.

TUTORS WITH FAULTY NOTES (S.A.M. James).—If the birds introduce the undesirable notes into their song regularly I am afraid you can do nothing but discard them, if you do not wish to keep them in song boxes, and cannot move them out of ear-shot of the young birds. It may be that the faulty notes are only very prominent at certain times, such as the early morning or at night, or when the birds are over-excited or stimulated, and in that case you could manage very well with them, by keeping them either in a closed song box, or in another room where the youngsters cannot hear them, and only introduce them to the youngsters as tutors at the times when the song was least objectionable. You do not mention what the objectionable notes consist of, but if the song is only too shrill and high pitched you might do something by feeding the birds chiefly on good summer rape, with a pinch of canary daily, and a little egg food twice a week, and a scrap of green food on the days when egg is not given.

SEEDS EXAMINED (T.O.H.).—The canary seed is very small in size, appears as though the bulk from which it came is very dusty, and it is also musty, and a very undesirable seed for feeding Canaries. The rape appears a nice sample of summer rape, of good quality, but it has the appearance of being a little infested with mites, and there is also the characteristic odour of these mites perceptible when the seed is rubbed between the fingers. I should regard it with suspicion. The niger is a nice clean sample, of good average quality. The maw also is of good quality. Considering that the two first-named seeds form the bulk of the birds' diet it is not improbable that they have something to do with your losses, and you would do well to make a change at once; of the canary seed in particular.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3/4); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

MOPING AND NOT MOULTING (Grocer).—If the bird was bred in 1913 it would be quite natural for her not to shed any tail or flight feathers at the last moult. Cage her separately, give three vapour baths, with an interval of four days between each, and otherwise treat her the same as advised to "A.V.D." in last week's issue. In that issue you will also find details for giving vapour baths mentioned in reply to "Stanley (3)."

A TRIO (S.A.M.J.).—(1) No it will not harm the birds to put them in a sunny position for a time in the afternoon, and then return them to a cool room at night. It is not wise, however, to expose them to the full power of the sun for any great length of time on very warm days. (2) I would not advise covering the backs of the cages with serge, as it would afford too secure a harbour for red mites. If the room is free from draught and damp, no such cover is at all necessary. A light muslin or linen cover thrown over the cages at night in very severe weather in winter would do no harm, but is not really essential. This can be easily doused into boiling water in the morning now and again as an effectual means of destroying any stray mite that may be present and take refuge upon it after the night's foray. A mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, black rape, linseed, and broken groats, will serve the purpose you wish in very cold weather. Give a small teaspoonful per bird two or three times a week. (3) Crested birds are themselves not wholly free from the habit of pulling each other's crests, though they may, perhaps, be a trifle less addicted to it than plainheaded varieties. Your best course would be to remove the Yorkshire that is the culprit.

BREEDING QUERIES (T. Sommers).—(1) No, no. It is too much like counting one's chickens before hatching to attempt to advise you as to the number of stock you will require to breed a stated number of cocks each year. It is possible to produce your desired number of ten cocks from a single pair of birds, but, mark you, it is very, very highly improbable. To stand a reasonable chance you should run two trios each of one cock and two hens. You must not overlook the fact that among the number of young you breed hens may be a very awkward problem. (2) For two trios you could manage nicely with your present stock of cages, plus a singing cage to transfer one cock to when not engaged with the hens; the centre of the three-compartment cage answering for the other. And you would want one or two flight cages for the young, and a sufficiency of smaller cages for caging the cocks separately whilst completing their tuition. (3) In case you want to train a number of birds, it is advisable to keep a tutor for singing only, though it would do no material harm to mate him for a round of young in the early part of the season. (4) I think the plan of running one cock with six hens is seriously overworking the cock, and is far less likely to be successful for any length of time. It is quite sufficient to run one cock with two hens. (5) It depends upon the position, locality, etc., of the room whether the best results are obtained from heated or cold rooms. But if you have healthy, robust birds and a room free from extreme fluctuations, damp, etc., heated rooms are neither necessary nor desirable. (6) For general detailed information you cannot do better than get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager will send you for 7d., post free.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

BIRDS FOR AN AVIARY (H. Jones).—(1) If you introduce a hen Greenfinch into your aviary where the cock Greenfinch and the Canaries are, she will be more likely to pair with him than with any other. Cases are on record where a bird has refused to mate with one of its own kind, preferring the attentions of another species, but such doings are quite the exceptions. A house-moulted hen Goldfinch would be a very useful bird for Hybrid breeding. You should introduce her to a Linnet or Greenfinch and let them fly together during the winter months. (2) For your aviary I would advise the following: Cock birds, two Goldfinches, a Linnet and a Twita; hens, one Bullfinch, Greenfinch, Siskin, and Redpoll. You would also have room to introduce a couple of nice yellow Norwich Canary hens, which would immensely increase your chances of producing young ones; an extra hen or two would be an advantage as it is probable one or other of the British hens would not go to nest, or only in a half-hearted manner. (3) The Bullfinch hen is used more in Hybrid production than any other, and seldom refuses to nest, if properly treated, and run with a partner she takes to.

SEEDS FOR MIXED AVIARY (Redstart).—In an aviary composed of mixed birds it is a rather difficult matter to feed with a seed mixture suitable to all. The best plan is to watch the more tender subjects and feed them correctly, allowing the others to take their chance. Or if you see any signs of one of them being a bit seedy, catch him up and treat him separately for a time, until he is sufficiently recovered to return. For general use make up the following seeds: Canary 3 parts by measures, teal 2 parts, rape 1 part. Another mixture, to be given three times a week, would be the following: Hemp 3 parts, niger 2 parts, maw 1 part. In addition to this they could have a little wild seed mixture twice a week, and sunflower seeds daily. Also supply green food and bunches of seeding plants, which are just now very plentiful on all waste ground, and along the road-sides. You could collect the seed pods of many of them, lay them out to dry in the sun, or in an airy room, and store for winter use. These are very much appreciated by the birds, and are a grand pick-me-up for seedy ones.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3/4); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 25 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twita," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Mould British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BIRDS REFUSING TO BATHE (Stanley).—One occasionally gets a bird or two in a collection that never appear to be at all interested in the bathing arrangements. They are generally birds that have been frightened or are of very nervous dispositions. The most simple method is to place them in a large flight with known bathers, when they will generally follow a good example. Another way is to keep the bird in your smallest cage for a few days, and then turn him into a large one, giving a bath at once, he generally commences to straighten out his plumage and finishes up with a good dip. This change of cage should be managed if possible on a sunny day. Another method is to catch the bird, disarrange his feathers without breaking them, and give the bath when he is returned to his cage.

FEEDING A THRUSH (Claud F. Vaughan).—The Song Thrush is not a very difficult bird to keep in health and condition, if one attends to him regularly. He will exist on very simple fare, but to get the best out of him it is necessary to feed him well. The food you mention is, in my opinion, hardly nourishing enough for a staple diet, but can be given occasionally as a change. Procure some good puppy biscuits, break them up and soak in hot water or gravy; another day soak a little chicken meal (best quality) in the same way, and mix a spoonful of meat meal in with it. Buy a lb. of good insectile food and give him a feed of this about twice a week, mixing it with scraped carrot or boiled potato. Offer scraps from the table, a piece of suet pudding, lean meat, vegetables, etc. Give fruit in season, and any insect you can procure, but not too many snails, they are rather relaxing for birds in captivity. You should procure our Nutshell booklet on the Thrush, it will give you a lot more information.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (G. C. C.).—Your out-door aviary as described would do nicely for a few birds. If you only want them as ornaments to the garden, your selection would do admirably, but if you thought of trying to breed with them next season I would advise you to have a pair of Greenfinches or Linnets in place of the Bullfinches, or you could put in a Bullfinch hen with a cock (Greenie or Linnet). The reason I suggest this is because the cock Bullfinch seldom does any good as a breeder in captivity. It is rather too late now to turn out Canaries unless you can manage to get a pair that were bred outdoors; if not, you had better wait until the spring before putting them out. The others could be put in at once, the earlier now the better.

TROUBLE WITH THRUSH (Numquam).—Your bird has evidently taken cold, which has affected his voice; in addition to this you are not treating him properly, or he would not have the growth you mention. I am sorry you did not tell me how you are feeding him. I could have then pointed out your error. Anyway, kindly read the advice given to "Claud F. Vaughan" for general treatment; but for time feed him on insectile food, and plenty of fruit. Before changing his food, give as much Glauber salts as will cover a sixpence in two tablespoonfuls of water, for one day only. Make the following mixture, and put thirty drops in his drinking-water every other day for a fortnight: Equal quantities of whiskey, glycerine and fresh lemon juice. With this treatment he should soon be in good health.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

BUDGERIGARS ON SHOW BENCH (W. M. S.).—The birds should be large but shapely, that is fairly slim. The colours should be pure and intense, and the markings sharply and cleanly cut. The blue and also the black spots on sides of lower face should stand out sharp and clear. It is needless to say that beak must be clean, not scaly, nor yet overgrown. Feet and claws must be perfect, and the plumage clean, silky and perfect in every respect. Providing it is not definitely stated otherwise in schedule, either a pair or a single bird can be exhibited in a cage, but if two are shown in the same cage they must be male and female. Of course if you have two birds perfect in every respect and fulfilling above conditions, then stage both of them, but it must be borne in mind that if one is faulty it penalises the other, perhaps perfect bird, in other words unless the pair are equally perfect it is better to only stage the male, though of course with such a class of Budgerigars most judges would put a perfect pair before a single bird. These are very erratic in captivity. Some pairs begin quite early in the year, almost ahead of spring, others much later—the proper breeding season in this country may be said to be from early spring to the moult. Many pairs will breed all the year round with only a short pause for the moult, but such is very exhausting.

WHAT SHALL I GET? (A.H.A.).—Zebra Finches and Budgerigars are about the most certain and regular of Foreign birds to breed, and you could not do better than begin with either a pair of Zebra Finches, or two pairs of Budgerigars, but unless you get them by advert. from some outdoor aviary where they have been out all the summer, you must not put them out till next spring. I do not consider Zebra Finches and Budgerigars would agree together for any length of time in your aviary, so you must make up your mind to keep one or the other. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s. 1½d. post free, from our manager, would help you.

BLACK MYNAH (Novice).—The main dietary will be live insects, fruit and insectile mixture. You can supplement this with table scraps, cooked vegetables, boiled rice, etc., while as to insects nothing will come amiss, beetles, mealworms, flies; you can give it every garden pest it will eat. We have not yet issued any Nutshell on this species. The value is 30s. to 50s., according to condition, but clever talkers, of course, command a fancy price. They are almost as large as a Rook, but a more shapely bird, and need a cage not less than 30in. long, 15in. deep and 18in. high, and as they are large eaters the cage needs frequent attention to keep it sweet and clean. As cage birds they make nice pets and become very tame, but are mischievous, indulging in such pranks as putting their bill through a lace curtain and enjoying the tearing sound as they open their beak. They are not vicious, but of course must not be associated with small birds, and it would not be wise to let them have liberty in a room in which small birds were kept in all-wire cages.

MADAGASCAR LOVEBIRDS (A. Myers).—(1 and 2) Canary, white millet and millet sprays, with once or twice a week a few oats; green food, grit and cuttlebone. (3) The male has a green body and a grey head and neck, the female is all green of varying shades. (4) Madagascar Lovebirds and Budgerigars will agree together in the same aviary providing the space is sufficient—you give me no idea of size of your aviary. (5) Irregular, but from early spring to late autumn. (6) A box or barrel would be the better as they carry in a lot of leaves, strips of thin bark, dry green-food, etc.—you must supply these—with which to make a nest. If the above is not clear, you must say of what you are still in doubt and give full particulars of situation and size of aviary.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

M.B.—Siskin died of pneumonia, affecting both lungs, and probably arising as the result of a chill owing to recent weather changes.

E. SOUTHWOOD.—Post-mortem examination of Linnet revealed extensive enteritis complicated with pneumonia, the result of the ingestion of ptomaine or poisonous products in some form. It is not an infectious nature, but has arisen in each case from a common cause. The intestines were most acutely inflamed along their whole extent. The causal agent must have been of a very virulent type.

J. TRINER.—The birds I examined were in first rate condition, there being no sign of disease except that the lungs were highly congested, and in one case hemorrhage had occurred as the result. The birds, in my opinion, died from fright, either by mice or by your other birds.

MISS V. F. BLANDFORD.—Acute enteritis, no liver trouble as in last case, but due in my opinion to a common cause. I do not think you will lose all your birds, but think it advisable to segregate your birds for a time; improvise another aviary or room temporarily, whilst thoroughly disinfecting your aviary. It can become contagious by contact, direct or indirect, but is not infectious. Get a fresh supply of seed, and give in the drinking-water daily for a week a few grains of sulphate of soda, followed by a course of some tonic such as infusion of gentian, five drops to each bird in drinking-water daily for another week; this may be sweetened with a little sugar or simple syrup if the birds show any disinclination for it.

MR. B. C. PAUL.—The Budgerigar died of liver disease of some standing; this organ was very much enlarged, giving a swollen appearance to the body. The generative organs were quite sound.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

J. W. Yarwood.—We will have made a reproduction of your sketch and utilise it in a future issue. Thanks for your useful letter.

Burnley.—The external appearance of the seed is good, but we do not care for the look of the kernel, which seems powdery and dry, as though artificially (kiln) dried. Try a change of seed, by all means, and see if this helps the birds.

BUSINESS WITH ME

is not a matter of bubble and squeak; there's no question of cutting down quality to price. My one aim is to supply thoroughly serviceable articles at prices consistent with highest quality; so that intending purchasers may assure themselves of this fact, I send everything I sell on approval on the understanding that if the article is in any way misrepresented by me, or that a better article may be purchased elsewhere at anything like the same money, my goods may be smashed up or destroyed in any manner, and I undertake to refund the whole of the purchase money. Clap nets, made from superfine fin. mesh netting, 3 yards long, 5 1/2 feet deep, and 4 feet ply, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed of above measurement, and are fitted complete with pegs, poles, and lines, ready for immediate use. Loose netting, specially knitted for bird catching, same as used in above nets, 2in. mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Specially strong netting, for use on rough ground and making Sparrow nets, fin. mesh, 10 feet deep, 6d. yard, post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 ins., 1/2; ditto, 18 by 14 ins., 11d. each, post free. Please note, my net traps have no old-fashioned board arrangement about them, they are by far the most effective traps on the market, and can be baited for hard and softbills at same time, and call-bird may be used inside them if desired; single trap cages, 6d.; double ditto, 1/-; triple ditto, 1/3 each; the above trap cages all have separate compartment for call bird in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each; genuine Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to catch and hold any bird to rook size in every weather, 1lb. 6d., 1lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 3d.; all post free. Sparrow nets, on 19 feet bamboo poles, 6/6 complete; flint pegs, 8d. each, post free; absolutely everything required by catchers always in stock; send stamp for complete list, which also gives hints on net making. Practically every professional bird catcher in the kingdom gets his living with articles supplied by me, and what they think of them the following letter will show:—"Sutton Rookery, near Long Sutton, Wisbech, Sept. 9.—Sir,—Last season I caught 400 cock Linnetts in 5 hours, and averaged 107 cocks per day right through the season, and every bird was caught in nets supplied by you. I have had other nets for 16 years, but they are useless compared with yours. I can catch more Linnetts in one day in your nets than I can in any other I have (and I have several makes) in a month. Your nets do not frighten the birds like others do and I get my living during catching season with nets, so I require the best. Yours are the best that are made, and not only best but cheapest. I shall want another in about a week.—Yours, J. C. Ball." (Mr. Ball claims to be the largest catcher in a county noted for its catchers (Lincolnshire), so he certainly knows what he is talking about.—W. Gore.) The above letter may be inspected here at any time, and I offer £10 to anyone that can prove that this or any other testimonial I have ever published is not genuine and unsolicited. (1806)

NORWICH Canaries, 1/1, by C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal," are worth the cost of the whole book many times over: "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-street, London.

CHAMPION bull hen, big winner, 30/-; unflighted bull cock, rare shape, grand head, 21/-, can win in good members' shows, unflighted buff hen, real gem, all over, 30/-; clear bull hen, sister to my diploma winner, 20/-; now in grand show trim; approval, all risks taken on rail: Judge Silk, Whitstable. (1806)

TO NORWICH FANCIERS

Being reluctantly compelled to give up the fancy, the whole of my Norwich are for sale. Among them are many young birds now fit for the keenest competition; yellows, buff, and even marked, and bred from last season's winners; the whole are offered at prices to effect a speedy sale; birds of this quality can seldom be bought at moderate prices; it would pay any intending purchaser of Norwich to give me a visit (by appointment); breeding, showing, and travelling cases at clearing prices; also a grand Siberian hen Bullfinch for hybrid breeding. Wanted, a good dog cart, suiting small pony: Taylor, Draper, Bideford.

We hear that Mr. F. W. Nelson will judge Stockport and Hazel Grove members' show, Nov. 14th, at Co-operative Hall, Hazel Grove.

Respecting Lark food, if your correspondent, Mr. W. Freeman, will write me I will give him the information required.—John C. Riley, Royal Cottage, Sough Road, Darwen.

I have taken over the secretarial duties of the Stanley Empire Club F.F. and Cage Bird Society in place of Mr. Robinson, who has been called up for active service, writes Mr. W. Elliott (15, Fairford Terrace, West Stanley, S.O.).

It has been found impossible to hold Luton open show this year, writes Mr. E. Bloomfield, the Hon. Sec., as we are unable to procure a hall for certain, they being at present in the occupation of the military authorities. We shall try and arrange for a members' show later to keep things going.

We hear from Mr. J. Ainsworth, 15, Vaughan Street, Shildon, the new hon. sec. of the Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.S., that the date of the open show of the society has been changed from Dec. 4, 5, to Nov. 13, 14. All club correspondence should in future be addressed to Mr. Ainsworth, at the address stated.

THE GREAT NATIONAL CAGE BIRD SHOW WILL BE HELD ON FEB. 5, 6, 8 & 9, 1915

We are going to try to hold a members' show on the date originally fixed for open show, viz., Dec. 5, writes Mr. J. R. Chestney, hon. sec. Cramlington C.B.S., with the object of keeping our members interested in the Fancy, and keeping up their enthusiasm for another year, when it is hoped things will again be normal.

We have received the Year Book of the Southern Border Fancy Club. It contains a list of officers, rules and by-laws of the club, a full description of the club's standard Border and scale of points, members' names and addresses, and balance-sheet for 1913. The latter shows cash in hand £4 17s. 10d., and outstanding 3s. 6d. The hon. sec., pro tem, is Mr. Geo. Burton, 126, Lee Road, Lee Green, S.E.

Owing to the hall we had engaged for our open show being commandeered by the military authorities, we have postponed our show, writes Mr. J. Fairgrieve, sec. East Lothian C.B.S. We are in view of a suitable place, which is hardly ready yet, so the committee thought it would be better to put back the show for a week or two. The date will be advertised in CAGE BIRDS when decided.

I would like to draw the special attention of members to the next meeting of the Gateshead C.B.S. on Oct. 14, writes Mr. W. Curry, as it concerns a question which all should come to the meeting to vote upon (not leave it to about six members). My own personal opinion is that an open show on a smaller scale than our usual show will pay all right, as fanciers round about here will be keen to have their birds tried.

Kindly let secretaries know that I have removed from Sthernhall Street to 168, Wood Street, Walthamstow, writes Mr. W. Wilson. I might tell you I have had a good season, both in quantity and quality. I purchased some of Mr. Binns' stock last year, and I might say that that gentleman treated me grandly. I cannot say more about him than that. I am only too sorry to think a fancier like himself should unavoidably be compelled to leave the Fancy.

Mr. W. H. Christer, hon. sec., Chopwell C.B.S., has removed from 7, Clyde Street, to 22, Mersey Street, Chopwell.

At the annual show of the Kirkintilloch C.B.C. there will be 10 added classes open to all; note Club Report this week.

Schedules of the Liverpool O.S. show have been posted, write Metcalfe and Green, hon. secs., 68, Brunswick Road, Liverpool. Anyone overlooked kindly apply at once.

We have decided on 27 classes, 21 for Canaries and 6 British, writes Mr. J. Ainsworth, hon. sec. Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.S. Prizes will be 10s., 5s., 2s. 6d., 1s., for a fee of 1s. 6d.

At the show to be held at Muirkirk on Oct. 31, the proceeds will be given to the War Relief Fund. In the cage bird section there are 13 open classes, full particulars of which are given under the heading "Review of Schedules" in this issue.

Birdlovers in the metropolitan area should remember that Clapham show is held Thursday next, Oct. 15; a visit from them will be appreciated by the officials. The hall (Strathblane Hall, "The Plough") is within a few yards of Clapham Junction Station, and on the tram and bus routes; open after mid-day.

OBITUARY.

MR. WALTER SIMPSON (Halifax).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. Harry Clegg, sec. Halifax O.S., that I have to inform you of the death of one of our members, Mr. W. Simpson, who died on Sept. 28, at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Waterhouse. He had not enjoyed good health for some time, but his sudden death came as a surprise to the fanciers. His chief hobby was Yorkshire Greens, and he was successful on several occasions at the leading shows of the country. The Liverpool fanciers, I feel sure, will join with the Halifax fanciers in mourning his loss.

SIR A. C. GIBSON CRAIG, Bart.

It is with a sense of the deepest sympathy and regret, writes Mr. J. Napier, hon. sec., Colinton and Currie Parishes O.S. that I have to announce the death of one of our Hon. Vice-Presidents, Sir Archibald C. Gibson-Craig, Bart., of Riccarton, Currie, who has been killed in action in the Battle of the Aisne. Sir Archibald was a Lieutenant in the H.L.I. He took a great interest in the doings of our society, and himself studied bird life on his estate a good deal. The kindly welcome he gave us and the members of the Edin. and Dis. C.B.S., on the occasion of our recent ramble through his estate will not readily be forgotten, either by us or the Edin. and Dis. members. Sir Archibald had promised to come to our show this year. I am sure the sympathy of both societies, and fanciers in general, will go out to his sorrowing mother, Lady Gibson-Craig, in her sad bereavement. She will feel the loss all the more through having lost her eldest son in the South African War. But both died noble deaths.

Extra Specials at Clapham Show.

At a meeting of the Clapham and Dist. C.B.A. held Oct. 6, the secretary announced that he had received several special prizes which were too late for inclusion in the schedule, and also that the National British Bird and M.C. were offering two diplomas. The sec., Mr. T. J. Hose, 5, Wells Crescent, Camberwell, will receive entries up to Saturday next, 10th inst.

Success at Halifax.

Prize-money in connection with our open show on Saturday last has been paid, writes Mr. A. Sutcliffe, Sec. Halifax C.B.S. All not paid on Saturday at the show was posted to-day (Monday). Anyone overlooked, please inform me. I wish to thank all exhibitors and patrons for their kind support, which made our show the success that was desired. I also thank all our members, and especially our chairman for the help that has been given to me; without such willing and energetic workers, success would not have been ours. Every bird had left for home by 7.30 p.m.

This Year—and Last.

A comparison between the opening Yorkshire Union fixture of 1913 and that of this year is interesting. Last Saturday the Halifax Society received 283 entries in 28 classes (1 void) from 99 exhibitors; and the officials were, we understand, very well satisfied with this result, under the prevailing conditions. The new scheme of the Y.U. resulted in a profit of (roughly) £1 14s. from the entry fees, after paying the prize-money. The first Y.U. show last year was held by the Great Horton O.S., who had 365 entries in 29 classes from 120 exhibitors. So Halifax this year were 82 entries behind this, and had 21 less exhibitors. The chief drop was in the Novice section, the 8 classes at Halifax bringing 97 birds, against 155 found in 1913 at Great Horton—a drop of 58! The balance of the deficit is made up of 17 birds in the champion section, and 7 in the selling classes.

FOR BIRD-KEEPERS JOINING THE COLOURS.

Generous Offer by a Well-known Lady Bird-lover.

A lady offers a temporary home for the pet bird or birds of men called away owing to the War. The birds will be fed and looked after free of charge by skilled fanciers until the end of the War. Any kinds will be taken in (Parrot tribe only excepted) insectivorous and fruit-eating British or foreign species having preference, though there will be room for seed eaters and a certain number of Canaries as well.

A formal receipt will be given in exchange for each bird left or sent, which will have its owner's name and address attached to its cage, and the birds will be given up on production of the receipt at any time.

Anyone intending to forward birds to be looked after is requested to send a postcard, stating kind of bird or birds it is proposed to send, and whether they have been kept in a cold or a warm room; and immediately they receive an answer to say there is still accommodation available, the birds can be sent or brought to The Hon. Mrs. Bouke, 75, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, London, W.

SINGING CANARIES FOR WAR HOSPITALS.

WE have this week the pleasant task of heartily thanking readers of CAGE BIRDS for the splendid support they have given to our scheme to provide singing Canaries to help brighten the convalescent homes and hospitals wherein our gallant fighting-men are recuperating from injuries received at the front. So generous has been the support that we have to announce that no further promises of birds are required; we have sufficient, we think, to meet all requests for them. Their sprightly song will, we trust, very soon be bringing a note of cheerfulness and a new interest into the enforced "leisure" of many gallant lads—lads as a body remarkable for their devotion to pets of every kind.

We should, however, like to have by us a few further promises of house-cages for use of the birds when they arrive at their destinations. No doubt there are still many kindly-disposed readers who have suitable living-cages they could well spare for this good cause. If so, we shall be glad if they will fill in and post to us the form printed below.

These cages may be of wood (box pattern) or open wire. They need not necessarily be new, so long as they are in a quite clean, sound condition; we would ask, however, that they be of fair size and provided with the necessary fittings. The cage or cages we should ask donors to send carriage paid, and adequately packed, to such hospital or hospitals as we shall notify to donors in due course. Gifts of one cage will be welcomed equally as warmly as a larger number.

Readers who may have no cage for disposal are not debarred from participating in the scheme; they may, if they so desire, promise to purchase and forward a suitable cage and fittings if they are called upon by us within the specified time.

The names of all donors, whether of birds or cages, will be published in CAGE BIRDS. Further, we shall arrange for an inscribed card to be sent with each bird and cage giving the names of the donors of the bird, the cage, and the food, etc.

Two well-known firms are generously co-operating with bird-keepers in this scheme Messrs. Capern, Ltd. (Bristol) having promised to supply sufficient seed to last every bird at least three months, and Messrs. Trower and Co. (London) the necessary bird-sand over a similar period.

Canaries for the Hospitals

I am willing, if called on any time during the next twelve months, to supply free of cost:—
One living cage, with necessary fittings, suitable for a singing Canary, to be presented as a gift to any Hospital or Convalescent Home applying for same.

The Sunflower and its Value to British Finches.

With some useful hints on feeding the birds. A lecture given before the Porth and Rhondda Valleys C.B.S.

By
A. H. C. LEGG
(Porth).

MR. Chairman, Ladies, and Gentlemen: By request of our secretary, I have pleasure in giving you my experience of the feeding value of sunflower seed to some of our British Finches. I am going to give you my own personal experience extending back some ten years, and I do not want you to think my way the only proper and right way to feed the British birds I shall mention this evening. Different fanciers have different ways, and every fancier thinks his way to be right.

But for my esteemed friend, Mr. John Challenger, I don't think I would ever have been a British bird fancier; he started me off by giving me a beautiful Goldfinch, and whenever I visited his bird-room he had something new in British birds. I "made haste slowly" to catch him up, and eventually I did so, and many a battle we have fought at the shows.

If the novices present will give my way of feeding a fair trial, I am quite sure they will not go wrong. I will now proceed with my subject. The sunflower: its growing and feeding values to the five British birds I shall name this evening, namely, the Hawfinch, Greenfinch, Chaffinch, Goldfinch, and Siskin.

Why not in England?

The sunflower is grown in various parts of the world as a field crop, notably in Southern Russia and France. It seems to me a pity that the English farmer does not take this up, seeing the good market there is for the sunflower seeds. The bird fancier who only grows a few sunflowers in his garden for the birds, should, after extracting the seed, dry the stalks and heads, and burn them, then save the ashes, and throw this about the flower beds, as the ashes contain a very high percentage of potash. The flowers of the plant are very rich in nectar, and very large numbers of bees may be seen upon them.

Although the sunflower is a native of tropical America, it is very hardy. The seed should not be sown before the third or last week in April, while if the weather is wet and cold, planting should be delayed until the first week in May. There are several varieties, but the white seed I favour most, and pick out the largest seed I can get hold of. I always save my own. The White Russian and Black Russian are the largest, and I have found that the Russian white contains a larger amount of seed than the black or the striped.

There are two kinds which stand out from all others, the giant and the dwarf. I advise you to grow two rows of these. Sow the dwarf in front of the giant, with two feet between the rows. Plant the seed 18 inches apart, and one inch deep. If possible, let your rows face due south. Remember that the sunflower is a great feeder, and you need to dig in deeply plenty of manure. If you have a hedge as a background the sunflowers will look simply grand; the dwarf will grow to 3 feet and the giant 6 to 8 feet; the one I have this evening was 8 feet 1 inch high, and 10 ins. across the flower. They will grow anywhere from 8 to 12 inches in diameter, and the heads as you see are one mass of seed. In dry weather, always remember the water-can.

A Great Colour Producer.

In my opinion freshly gathered sunflower seed is a great colour producer, especially with the Hawfinch, Greenfinch, Chaffinch, Goldfinch, and Siskin.

The Hawfinch is to me the king of the Finch tribe; he is a rather heavy feeder and a good roomy cage is essential; my own are 3 feet by 16 inches high and 11 inches wide, with the wires of the front 1 inch apart.

As an exhibition bird, the Hawfinch is getting very popular with British bird exhibitors, and a good one is almost sure of that first and special. In selecting a Hawfinch get one with plenty of size, of good colour, a good large head, the cap on the head, and the V bib, as defined as possible, and as clear cut as you like to see the edges of a good exhibition Goldie's blaze. The hen is smaller and less bright in colour, and easy to distinguish from the cock.

I feed mostly with sunflower and safflower. I put these into a separate food vessel to the other seeds, which are composed of 2 parts Canary, 1 part rape, 1 part hemp, 1/2 part linseed. This is his winter diet, and in the summer I give as much sunflower fresh gathered as will fill an egg-cup, or I cut a head of sunflower into 4 or 6 parts, and give one part each day, in addition to his ordinary seed. You will find feeding on sunflower seed, fresh gathered, will put a beautiful colour and bloom upon the feather.

The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe

By J. TOMLINSON.

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

THERE is little opportunity of preventing young birds picking up a bad tour of a tutor along with his good tours, unless the fault is sung at the end of the song. In whatever part of the song a fault is brought this is the least objectionable, for it gives the fancier a chance of dodging it. The fancier must make himself thoroughly conversant with the bird's song, so that he knows the precise moment when it will break off from its good tours to the faulty one. When the bird has sang all its good tours, and is about to break away to the imperfection, gently but quickly raise the hand to the front of the cage, this will cause the bird to stop singing.

Good, though Rather Tedious.

After singing a few times the bird can be removed from the room, and the process repeated as convenient. It is obvious that where this procedure is strictly followed the young will only hear the best portion of the tutor's song. I am fully cognisant that this modus operandi is rather a tedious one; I recommended it in CAGE BIRDS in 1912. How many fanciers adopted it I am unaware, but it is pleasing to note that one gentleman afterwards wrote me saying, "Your advice was opportune. I had my youngsters under a faulty singer, so resorted to your advised method, and managed to turn out a few faultless ones, these were amongst my winners at the first International Show." This fancier's birds were also amongst the winners at the second International Show.

A peculiarity in some young birds that cannot be either accounted for or explained, is that even where they are bred from a faulty singer and trained under it they do not sing his faulty tour, and it is often found in such a circumstance they will also leave out of their song one or more of their sire's and tutor's good tours. Such birds are rather the exception than the rule.

"Good Form" in the Young.

Reverting to the training, a difference is soon recognisable in the demeanour of the young cocks when they are put in the flight cages. Fanciers like to see their youngsters sit, or stand, quietly with closed beaks, rehearsing their immature song, a sign which often foretells a good singer, but some in their studies will be conspicuous by the way they frequently open their beaks, and this often predicts faulty tours.

A third type are those that appear to be too full of vim to maintain one position for many moments, for after a short song they suddenly break, and will do anything that is detrimental to their progress in their studies. A little patience should be exercised with this type, for there is a possible chance that they may settle down in the song cage, and their early removal from the flight may have a beneficial effect toward this end. Personally, I have found the majority of this type to turn out disconnected singers, as their early demeanour in the flight predicted.

The caging off from the flight cages into the wire song cages or shutter cabinets, makes another step in the process of training. The reader will recollect that as a general rule an appropriate time to do this will be when the warbling is gradually fading away, and the tours and rolls commence to become distinguishable.

A Bird that "Barked."

It will not be unusual for some of the birds, in their endeavour to sing some of the tours, to utter queer and maybe objectionable sounds. These birds will require watching, as sometimes these sounds will establish themselves into a faulty tour, while with others the objectionable sound will gradually fade as the voice gets stronger, and a good tour will be established. I recollect an instance of this that is not entirely devoid of humour, a fancier informed me that one of his young birds was trying to imitate the bark of his dog, and he wondered if it was about to introduce a new tour. As the tour developed it proved to be the Hollow-Glucke, and not a "bow-wow" as my friend anticipated.

A method employed by some fanciers after transferring the young to the wire song cages is to place the cages side by side on a tier of shelves, until the birds are accustomed to the seed and water glasses. The cages are then separated by inserting pieces of cardboard between them, and after a little while they are placed inside the cabinets.

How the Birds Saved the Bridge

An Episode of the Great War Crisis.

HE was a funny little chap. Spidery red legs; long, hooked wings; brown, whitish-waistcoated body about the size of a Thrush; and thin skewer of a beak. He was in very truth a mud-lark, a haunter of the treacherous ooze of the estuary, a snatcher-up of trifles, a traveller of great distances, a telescopic-eyed marvel, a sharp-tongued piker into other people's business—a Redshank.

You beheld him running about on the mud-flats, a lump of mud to look at, what time the first thin clutching fingers of the rising tide began to creep and twine up the deep channels, and the boom of the sea on the "bar" rose an octave as token, and the day faded out even as you looked.

Now he would stop and aim at some marine worm, drawing his beak back and forth, as a fencer with a rapier, and then there was not a worm left. And next second he was up, had flung himself on wing, hurled aloft, whistling "Tyop; Tyo! Tyo-o!" at the top of his voice.

The Sleepers Awaken.

Up went the heads of the sleeping Gulls. Up went the heads of the probing Curlews. Up went the heads of the searching Plovers. Up went the heads of the foraging Shelducks. All the estuary for half a mile or more was put on the alert.

"Who goes there?"

Every whistle of the Redshanks, every inquiring eye of the alarmed birds, seemed to be saying it. Then: "He-oh! He-oh!" as up went the big Herring-gulls, one by one. "Pee-wit! Pee-e-wit!" as the wailing Plover flung aloft. "Cra-ank! Cra-ank!" as the big, lean, old Heron slowly got under way. "Cour-lip! Cour-lip!" as, one after the other, the fine curved-beaked Curlew threw themselves upwards in a string.

"Hang!" muttered the old Wildfowler, lifting his head from his hiding-place among the long, glaucous stems of the bent grass alongshore. But not at him was the Redshank, the spirit incarnate of the English estuary, challenging afar out over the silent flats. He was following the movements of something else along one of the deep-cut main channels, something the old Wildfowler could not see upon the shore, something that was moving, invisible, towards the railway-bridge over the channel to a mud island not five hundred yards from the mainland, which had assuredly done more to assist, and is doing more to assist, in the making of our great history than any other island in the world.

The Danger in the Boat.

"Ach!" snarled the crouched form in the flat-bottomed gunning-punt, as he slid his craft, paddling cautiously with one arm over side, up the main channel—a lane of darkness now in the all-but-extinguished light—towards the railway-bridge and its single shivering sentry.

But the unceasing warning "Tyo! Tyop!" of the indignant Redshank, who refused to leave the object of his alarm, never ceased, and never left off coming nearer.

Suddenly the sentry faced round. Realisation seemed to come to him in a flash. When he was on leave he was accustomed to go wild-fowling with a crazy muzzle-loading gun in Norfolk, where his home was. He knew the meaning of that shrill bird note. Something was coming up the channel, and it was against the law.

"Who goes there?"

The sharp human words rang forth clearly over the waters, and the Redshank yelled anew. "Bang!" The heavy report of the .303 rifle seemed to run and butt and shatter the silence all over the harbour, and come back again, but there was no need of a second shot. The man crouched in the body of the punt gave an odd cough, squirmed, kicked, said "Mein Gott!" and was still—quite dead.

And so the railway bridge was saved. The guard found enough explosives in that punt below to blow up two bridges—"Answers."

To Be Or Not To Be at Gateshead.

SIR,—A meeting of the Gateshead and District C.B.S., will be held at Lockhart's Cafe, High Street, Gateshead, on Wednesday, Oct. 14, at 7.30, when all members are requested to attend, as the principal business will be a discussion upon the advisability or otherwise of holding an Open Show this year.

An Appeal to Newcastle and Tyneside Fanciers.

SIR,—Three weeks ago I made an appeal for 100 Canaries for the Lord Mayor of Newcastle's War Fund. I have also sent out over 130 circulars. Let me say, fellow fanciers, that this appeal is not only to members of the Newcastle Society, it is to every fancier in the district. I shall be pleased to receive promises from anyone. Let me ask again those who have not signified their intention of giving one or more Canaries to think the subject over again. Remember, it is for a noble cause; spare one bird to help to relieve the sufferings of those whom our brave soldiers have left behind whilst they have gone to fight for the very existence of our nation. I hope this poor appeal will awaken every true fancier to a sense of duty.

The Breeding of Mealworms.

SIR,—Seeing that a correspondent wants to know how to breed mealworms, I may say that I have a large tin of very nice ones which I have bred myself. I will do my best to show him how I bred them. It is very easy, only you want to have a bit of patience and wait for them to breed. I got a biscuit tin about 12 inches square, and bored a lot of holes in the top. Next I got 1s. 6d. worth of mealworms (1,000) as advertised in CAGE BIRDS. Then I bought 2lb. of barley meal, also got some old stocking feet. I mixed the meal and stocking feet together and put them in the tin. Then I put the mealworms into the tin. Some more stocking feet (old rags or anything woolly will do) I put on top, inside the tin. After putting the lid on, I placed the tin in a warm place and did not touch them again for about three months. Don't put them where it is too warm. If your correspondent will follow my instructions he will have more mealworms than he will ever want to use. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success; I find it very valuable to me.

JONATHAN BROOKS.

The Suggested National Cage Bird Show for Wales.

SIR,—In reply to Mr. Jenkins re a Welsh National show, I would like to make it clear that the Cardiff C.B.S. do not want to run this show. The idea belongs to Mr. E. J. Banks, St. John's Square, Cardiff, and he would be pleased to hear from any fancier, giving their views. The idea roughly is for every society in Wales and Monmouthshire to discuss the matter and to elect a representative to attend a meeting, when the secretary could be appointed. If all societies take the matter up, the financial part could be easily arranged. Let it be clearly understood that this is to be a Welsh National Show. My suggestion is that after the committee have selected a town to hold the show in, they invite the local society to help in the staging, unpacking, and other general work in connection with a show. Mr. Lloyd James has written to me offering a subscription, also promising a silver cup for the British section. Now, fanciers, let us have your news. I should like to hear from Messrs. Longden, Nicholas, Tedstone, G. T. Jones, Maggs, Hitchings, Heal, Jeffries, Richards (Narberth), also all the secretaries of cage-bird societies in Wales and Monmouthshire. Something must be done to "stop the rot."

E. THOMAS.

Support from Swansea.

SIR,—I see that the Cardiff C.B.S. intends abandoning the annual show this year. Such a proceeding is incomprehensible to me, as I, and the majority of Welsh Canary breeders, have always considered the Cardiff society as practically the "hub of the wheel," and I am sure that this step will occasion universal regret. Thanks to the magnificent efforts of the officials, with Mr. E. Thomas at the helm, and the co-operation of its members, Cardiff show of last year was unsurpassed, and in the Canary section was even ahead of the Palace show, hence my keen disappointment at its abandonment.

I have much pleasure in congratulating Mr. Banks, regarding his suggestion of a Welsh National Show. The idea is truly a splendid one, and I trust that all cage birds organisations in Wales will amalgamate and come to an early decision, so as to prevent deterioration of the Fancy here. I would like to emphasise the need of an early decision, as there is a danger of fanciers allowing their birds to flight, instead of colour-feeding them. This would inevitably be the case, should there be no prospect of a show; in fact, I know of a few such cases here already. I will render all possible aid to the cause, as well as contribute to the list of "specials."

In the case of the suggested Welsh National show, so as to effectively guard against the possibility of losses, the date should be very judiciously chosen. Exhibitors do not belong to the leisured classes, but are pre-eminently working men, and consequently the date should be fixed to suit their convenience. Midweek fixtures have proved a continual failure, times out of number; so why not try a weekend show, either on a Friday and Saturday, or a Saturday and Monday? Very little extra expense would be incurred by such an arrangement, and as the majority of exhibitors generally terminate their week's duties at noon on Saturday, they would naturally attend the show, which I unhesitatingly venture to predict would prove an unparalleled success. I would further suggest that the date be fixed to correspond with that of a good football match or some notable event; thus fanciers could travel at greatly moderated prices by excursion trains. If the time and financial positions of the exhibitors are duly taken into consideration, we need fear no deterioration in the Fancy, but can look forward to the Welsh National Show as an immovable institution.

Swansea.

ALF. HITCHINGS.

A Reminder from Llanelly.

SIR,—Ro the letters from Mr. E. J. Banks and Mr. D. Jenkins, I am quite in accord with them, but believe that it is too late for this year. An important matter is the date. I see in Mr. Banks' letter the second or third week in January suggested. I hope that he has not overlooked Llanelly show, which is booked for January 12. I am calling a meeting of my members for next Saturday to decide if our show is to be carried on as usual. I do not believe that the "rot" has set in with our Society; the Llanelly fanciers, whose show is one of the largest held in Wales confined to cage birds only, I think are game enough to carry on the business as usual. It has been named the great one-day international show of Wales, and we have the patronage of the Southern Border Fancy Canary Club, also the British Bird and Mule Club. We have it on the agenda for this meeting to give the proceeds, after paying all expenses, to some fund most needy at the time.

DANIEL JOHN.

Hon. Sec., Llanelly C.B.S.

Generous Help Soon Forthcoming.

SIR,—I was particularly pleased to read the letter from Mr. D. Jenkins, of Border Fancy fame, and I know that he will do all he can in and around Swansea to promote a Welsh National show. Mr. E. Thomas has also handed me a splendid patriotic letter from that enthusiastic British bird fancier, Mr. W. P. Lloyd James. Just fancy, a subscription of two guineas and also a silver cup to be competed for; why, it is only necessary to have a dozen offers like this and the Welsh National show is an assured success. If every society in Wales would subscribe two guineas towards the show fund it would create that personal interest among the members which is so necessary in a national movement.

I should like to review the working of such a show, but I consider it would be far better to discuss this matter at a meeting when all societies interested could speak for themselves and then co-operate with the Welsh National Show Committee, which should be representative of all societies in Wales. It is very necessary at the present moment to rouse Welsh fanciers from the state of lethargy into which they seem to have fallen. Some fanciers consider that a Welsh National show is "too big a thing to tackle." Well, all I can say is that such a show will never take place with such lukewarm enthusiasm. I would remind these fanciers that they owe it as a duty individually, not only to Welsh cage bird breeding, but to the Fancy generally, to help all they can the idea of a Welsh National Show.

E. J. BANKS.

(Copy of Mr. Lloyd James's Letter.)

Dear Mr. Thomas,—I think the idea of a Welsh National Show an excellent one, and we should all do our utmost to further it. Providing a suitable place can be obtained, I feel sure that with good classification, especially in the British Section, and with full prize money guaranteed, no cancelling of classes, and qualified judges, it would be a big success and an annual event. I regret that I live so far away as to be unable to give my personal services and attention, and I feel that the only thing I can do is to offer £3 2s. as a subscription to the National Show (or I will guarantee any two classes that may be appointed). I will also give a silver cup to be competed for as I shall arrange later. I trust to hear from you on the subject and that the matter will be successfully discussed in the columns of CAGE BIRDS.

W. F. LLOYD JAMES.

A Cure for "Going Light."

SIR,—I should be very glad if any fancier would kindly give me a certain cure for Canaries and British birds "going light." I have lost a number of Britishers last year, and have tried all sorts of "cures," but all failed.

G. RONSON.

SIR,—It is with great pleasure I comply with your request to send you a few notes about my Rock-Thrush, a likeness of which by that skilled artist of bird-life, Mr. Goodchild, is to be reproduced in this week's issue of CAGE BIRDS.

I think it was in 1886 when I exhibited my first Rock Thrush at the Westminster Aquarium; this bird unfortunately came to grief through someone (out of kindness) giving it a piece of cheese to eat, and it was not until last year, when travelling on the Continent, that I espied in a dealer's shop the object of these notes.

Carniola, Montenegro, Bosnia, Turkey, and the Western part of India, are the home of the Rock-Thrush, and in these countries he lives in company with the Blue-Thrush in the lonely crags and valleys of the mountains, and is often found among old ruins.

His solitary life makes the bird rather shy, and adults take sometimes two years before they become really tame, whereas young birds, hand-reared, and obtainable in July and August, make excellent pets, and become very steady and much attached to their keeper.

In Austria Rock Thrushes are frequently met with as cage birds, and it is a pity that they are not more frequently imported into this country, as not only is the beautiful contrast of colour in their plumage (a bluish grey head and neck, carrying off well the bright orange coloured breast) a great recommendation, but they are easily catered for, as they will do well on the usual food for Thrushes. Their song is very sweet, and not too loud for the room. They are splendid imitators of other birds' songs, which they mingle with their own notes, and I once had a bird who gave the call of the Chaffinch to perfection.

There is one matter in their keeping which requires great attention, and that is the feet. As they spend nearly all their time on the ground, they should have a piece of rock or stone at the cage bottom to stand on, and the perch they mostly rest on should be covered with Paris plaster, as wooden perches seem to keep their feet too warm, and make them tender. Very often a bad condition of the feet is the result of too rich a diet, and, unless the bird is in song, meal-worms should be given sparingly.

OTTO PUCK.

Combined Show of Specialist Clubs Suggested for Scotland.

SIR,—Seeing so many societies in Scotland have abandoned their annual open shows for the season, either through inability to procure a suitable hall, or disinclination to risk it from the financial point of view, the idea has struck me that the various specialist clubs in Scotland might combine and have a central show in, say, Edinburgh, at some date in November. I am sure that if a meeting were called, and delegates sent from every specialist club, a very successful show could be got up, with advantage and pleasure to all fanciers. Exhibitors, like myself, must feel like fishes out of water under the forced inactivity that lies before us. Another point is that while no shows are being held, we cannot be certain how far a variety has progressed or gone back; we want a few shows where this season's champions meet, along with last year's winners. I am afraid that each variety, and the fanciers who breed them, will suffer in consequence. It is well known that all cannot take an active part in fighting our country's foes, and much as one would wish to be in the thick of it, age and other infirmities compel many to stay on in their usual employment. Therefore if we cannot help our country by giving our services, let us do the next best thing possible as fanciers, and hold as many shows as possible. All monies over working expenses should be given to the Prince of Wales National Fund. Those of us who could afford it would no doubt give all prize money as well. I am sure that all would act a part to help a show of this kind carried to a successful issue. I will be at Loanhead and in Edinburgh all this week-end, and will be happy to meet with anyone who may join in with my suggestion.

Leinster O.S. Hopeful of Holding Show in the New Year.

SIR,—At a meeting of my committee held on Tuesday last, it was unanimously decided to postpone our show until after the new year, when if all goes well we shall hope to hold it at the end of January or early in February. Our contract to spend the 25s. in advertising will be adhered to by my committee.

A Chance for Scotch Fanciers.

SIR,—At a meeting of the Edinburgh Ornithological Open Association, held Oct. 3rd, it was unanimously agreed to go on with our annual show on November 21st. We hope that fanciers throughout the country will support us. The following judges have agreed to officiate: A. Paterson, Edinburgh; J. Carson; Easthouses; G. A. Stewart, Glasgow; G. Park, Govan, and P. Kean (for Belgians).

Cockermouth Upholds Cumberland's Reputation.

SIR,—At a special meeting of the Cocker-mouth F.S., held last week, it was unanimously decided to hold an open show on November 28th. So far as is known, we appear to be the only society in Cumberland willing to venture. We recognise the risks, and by a graduated scale of prize money we ask exhibitors, for whom we cater, to share them. Through the courtesy of our previously selected judges, whose fees were high, we have been enabled to cancel their engagements and obtain the services of competent local men at low figures—in some cases bare expenses. We also have to submit a reduced classification, but hope nevertheless to have a first-class show.

Halifax O.S. Going Ahead with 25th Annual Show.

SIR,—The members of the Halifax Ornithological Society, at their meeting on Oct. 3rd, at the Plummet Line Hotel, decided to hold their annual open show, which will be their semi-jubilee, at the Friendly and Trades Hall, on Nov. 20 and 21, the dates previously decided upon, and there will be no amalgamation with any other Society. They also decided upon their classification: Eight open Yorks., eight open novice Yorks., six open Nor., four open novice Nor., three Brit., and two selling classes. The prize money will be 10s., 6s., 4s., 2s. and 1s. 6d. (five prizes) and all prize money guaranteed.

Falkirk Good Intent Holding On.

SIR,—At a meeting of the Falkirk Good Intent C.B.A., Sept. 26, it was decided to go on with our annual show to be held Dec. 12. As the season is getting on, I should be glad if intending members would kindly forward their contributions at their earliest convenience (books still open). Next meeting Oct. 31. New members admitted up to 15 miles radius.

The Manchester and N.C.O.S. Out to do its Best.

SIR,—The Manchester and N.C.O.S. have engaged the Co-operative Hall, Downing St., for their show on Oct. 31st. This hall is within easy reach of all railway stations, and will be far more comfortable, for both birds and exhibitors, than the room at Belle-Vue. Schedules will be ready by the 10th inst., and will be sent to all known exhibitors. We have decided to hand over any profits on the show to the Relief Fund, so I hope that fanciers will do their best to make the show a success. We have a show committee of keen fanciers who will do their utmost for the welfare of the exhibitors and to keep up the high standard of efficiency of the "Pioneer" Manchester Society.

Abersychan's Record Meeting Decides to Hold Show.

SIR,—At the Abersychan and Dist. C.B.S. meeting held Oct. 3, when a record number of members turned up, it was decided that the open show should be held on the day fixed, Dec. 3 next. We ask for all the support fanciers can give us. We have one of the best halls in the district, and fanciers can rest assured that their exhibits will receive every care at the hands of capable fanciers. We have secured the services of that well-known judge, Mr. H. W. Battye, so we hope fanciers will rally round and make this show a great success. The society is open to all, and they can compete for members' specials; entrance fee 1s., 6d. per month subs.

not have much difficulty in making a good guess at the sex of birds from the same nest, but from a batch bred from different parents the difference in colour is no sure guide, the birds from one nest being frequently much richer than from another. If you keep them over the moult their song and general appearance should assist you in making your selection. As a rule with Mules cock birds are in the majority.

SINGING BIRDS FOR AVIARY (D. Christopher-son).—The following birds would be suitable to turn into your aviary: Cock Goldfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Chaffinch, Yellow Bunting, a Linnet or Goldfinch-Canary Mule, and during the summer months a stout cock Canary. You could also add a couple of Singing Finches, or one or two of the brighter coloured small Foreign seed eaters. You would get plenty of song from the British birds and hybrids, so that you need not trouble about your Foreign birds being singers. All you would require is to make sure that they are seed eaters. Do not overcrowd. You will have better results with the number I give you.

FEEDING LINNET-CANARY MULES (Bosco, Watford).—Make up the following seed mixture for your Linnet-Canary Mules: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, rape 1 part, linseed 1 part. Give a few cracked sunflowers twice a week, and should they at any time be a bit backward in song, a spoonful of cracked hemp occasionally will be of great assistance. Do not forget to supply them with green food and the seeding tops of any wild plants you can procure, the favourites are shepherd's purse, chickweed, sow thistle and groundsel. (2) If you make a mixture of equal quantities of sand and roughly out sawdust I think you will find it will answer your purpose. If the sand is just the slightest bit damp it will prevent the sawdust from being thrown out of the cages. Another material is slightly damped coco-nut fibre, which you can purchase from the florist's, but whatever you use you are sure to have some litter; you can prevent it in part by stretching muslin across the lower part of the cage front.

FEEDING A BULLFINCH (Gunning).—The fact that you find books giving advice upon the feeding of Bullfinches very valuable is a proof to you that there is no "proper method," because the articles are mostly written by men who have had considerable experience in the keeping of Mules; but I think you will find that although the writers may differ in the exact quantities of seed advised, the general treatment of each species is the same. In regard to the Bullfinches I have found the following treatment successful. As staple food: Two parts canary, one each of teazle and summer rape. Hemp seed should be given very sparingly; in fact, it need not be used at all if the bird is allowed a few sunflowers daily. A spoonful of a good brand of wild seed mixture given once or twice a week is very acceptable. So much for hard seed, but I always think that the real success of keeping the Bullfinch in health and condition is in the free use one is able to make of the wild seeds and fruits gathered in the open. Just now the following are plentiful and are greatly relished. Shepherd's purse, groundsel, chickweed, sow thistle, dock, thistle, grass, etc., also berries of black bryony, rowan, blackberries and privet. The latter can be collected and kept in water or wet sand for several days, and a spray of them given the birds daily. The Bullfinch should be kept in a cage not less than 18 inches in length, and should be allowed to bathe frequently.

THE SINGING LINNET (A. Thompson).—If you are anxious for your young Linnets to have the Linnet song only it is necessary for them to hear a good bird of their own species. Linnets, like the majority of our song birds, will mimic any bird they hear, and I understand that purity of song is one of the chief points in birds used for contest singing. I fear you will have some difficulty in getting an old tutor just now, as most birds are in moult. I think your best plan would be to buy two or three wild caught birds, keep them in fairly small cages, and let the young birds hear them. They may not sing much for some time, but if they do only a few notes it will assist the young ones to keep to the wild song. The Mule should be taken right away from them out of hearing, so as to give them the opportunity of forgetting his song entirely. (2) Make the following mixture for staple food: Three parts canary, 2 parts teazle, 1 part each of rape and linseed. Make another mixture of gold of pleasure, niger, plantain, sesame and thistle, 2oz. of each; give a teaspoonful three times a week. A little lightly cracked hemp twice a week will soon bring them into song.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

SICKNESS (E. E.).—It is most difficult to deal with such a case by post, and the best course for you to take is to let your local vet. see it, though personally I consider the kindest proceeding would be to have it painlessly destroyed—your chemist would chloroform it for you. It is evident the bird's internal system is all wrong. It is really a case which one needs to see before attempting to prescribe any treatment, and as the bird is not well enough to undertake a journey, these are the only two courses open to you as stated above. The eye trouble is, I think, merely consequent or part of the ear trouble. Of course it is possible that upon being examined the case may not be so serious as appears to me from your letter, and the vet. may be able to give the bird immediate relief, and prescribe curative treatment. I am sorry I cannot give you definite help, but the probability is one would only complicate matters by treating per post. You were not entitled to a reply per post, as you will see by reference to the rules; but as the case is urgent, a reply has been sent you.

GREY JAVA SPARROWS (R. Keer).—(1) Canary and white millet seeds, green food, grit, cuttlebone and water. A little paddy rice and crushed oats may be supplied in a separate tin. (2) Dissolve 10 grains of sulphate of soda and 2 grains of sulphate of iron, in three ounces of distilled water (your chemist will mix for you). Get a glass drinking vessel, holding about one ounce of water, and put half a teaspoonful of the above mixture into the vessel and fill up with water (other water, i.e., plain water, not to be supplied), this to form the bird's drinking water for the next fourteen days, of course renewing the supply daily or oftener if required. Follow this by putting 10 drops of syrup of hypophosphates into the water daily for three weeks or a bit longer.

LEAVING OUT OF DOORS (H. C.).—Providing your county is not a northern one, and the base of the aviary is reasonably dry, all the birds you name should safely pass the winter out of doors. Of course, if the whole of your roof, except the screened end, is open netting, it will be better to tack felt over the roof and keep it there till mid-April, and also to treat the east end and three feet of the front adjoining the east end in the same manner. You can easily keep the felt in position, by laying it in position and screwing a length of thin laths over it at suitable distances; it is then easily removed when spring comes round once more, when it can be rolled up, and, together with the laths, stowed away for another winter's use.

ZEBRA DOVES (Notts County).—The description of the male is sketchily as follows: Front part of head and throat, ashy-grey; hind part of crown and head, reddish (vinous). The general body colouring is brown and brownish-grey, more or less barred with narrow black lines, mostly confined to the upper parts; breast, pale vinous, abdomen, pale buffish-white. The hen is a little smaller than the male and her hind-head is less reddish than that of her mate.

GREEN AMAZON (G. Hille).—If the bird is tame the sore at the side of the mouth should be washed with a weak tepid solution of Condy's Fluid, dabbed dry with a soft cloth, and then lightly anointed with a little zinc ointment. Put a little honey and borax into the bird's mouth once or twice daily; this can usually be done by putting a little on the end of a stick, which the bird will generally bite at when placed against its mouth, but you'll be able to arrange method yourself according to the demeanour of your particular bird. Whatever is used it must be cleansed each time before being put into the paste. For three consecutive days put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water, and then after a week's interval repeat the treatment; follow this latter by putting half a teaspoonful of hypophosphates in the water daily for a month or so. Diet: In addition to the seed mixture, supply such extras as shelled nuts, ripe fruit, stale crusts, biscuits. Grit and cuttlebone must be continually in the cage.

WHAT BIRD? ETC. (R.H.M.S.).—(1) It is most probably either a hen Weaver or Whydab, or may possibly be a young male out of colour. The females of many species of Weaver are so near alike that they are very difficult to place, and almost impossible to define by a written description, unless such be of a very careful and complete character. (2) Yes, it is now too late to put birds outside and leave them out, unless they have come from some outdoor aviary, where they have been out all the summer. If birds (foreign species) are put out later than mid-July, it is taking undue risks to leave them out during the first winter, though if it be a mild one, they may survive.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

E. D. Ballard.—Impaction of the proventriculus and bowels. Do not feed the parent birds on small seed only; give a little coarse oatmeal, white millet, and only very sparingly of canary seed. Allow plenty of coarse gritty sand. The trouble must be due to some error in feeding.

T. H. Hartford.—Bird was in perfect health, not slightest evidence of disease. Death occurred from an injury to the head. Under the black mark you mentioned was a large clot of blood, and the skull was indented, both ante mortem occurrences.

J. C. O.—Pneumonia, very acute. The liver was to a slight degree in a condition of fatty degeneration. Owing to the necessity of careful examination, it would have been useless to you for the purpose required.

BUSINESS WITH ME

is not a matter of hubbub and squeak; there's no question of cutting down quality to price. My one aim is to supply thoroughly serviceable articles at prices consistent with highest quality; so that intending purchasers may assure themselves of this fact, I send everything I sell on approval on the understanding that if the article is in any way misrepresented by me, or that a better article may be purchased elsewhere at anything like the same money, my goods may be smashed up or destroyed in any manner, and I undertake to refund the whole of the purchase money. Clap nets, made from superfine 3in. mesh netting, 3 yards long, 5 1/2 feet deep, and 4 feet ply, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed of above measurement, and are fitted complete with pegs, poles, and lines, ready for immediate use. Loose netting, specially knitted for bird catching, same as used in above nets, 3in. mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Specially strong netting, for use on rough ground and making Sparrow nets, 3in. mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 ins., 1/2; ditto, 18 by 14 ins., 11d. each, post free. Please note, my net traps have no old-fashioned board arrangement about them, they are by far the most effective traps on the market, and can be baited for hard and softbills at same time, and call-bird may be used inside them if desired; single trap cages, 6d.; double ditto, 1/-; treble ditto, 1/3 each; the above trap cages all have separate compartment for call bird in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each; genuine Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to catch and hold any bird to Rock size in every weather, 1lb. 6d., 3lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 2d.; all post free. Sparrow nets, on 19 feet bamboo poles, 6/6 complete; flint pegs, 8d. each, post free; absolutely everything required by catchers always in stock; send stamp for complete list, which also gives hints on net making. Practically every professional bird catcher in the kingdom gets his living with articles supplied by me, and what they think of them the following letter will show:—"Sutton Rookery, near Long Sutton, Wisbech, Sept. 9.—Sir,—Last season I caught 400 cock Linnets in 5 hours, and averaged 107 cocks per day right through the season, and every bird was caught in nets supplied by you. I have had other nets for 16 years, but they are useless compared with yours. I can catch more Linnets in one day in your nets than I can in any other I have (and I have several makes) in a month. Your nets do not frighten the birds like others do and I get my living during catching season with nets, so I require the best. Yours are the best that are made, and not only best but cheapest. I shall want another in about a week.—Yours, J. C. Ball." (Mr. Ball claims to be the largest catcher in a county noted for its catchers (Lincolnshire), so he certainly knows what he is talking about.—W. Gore.) The above letter may be inspected here at any time, and I offer £10 to anyone that can prove that this or any other testimonial I have ever published is not genuine and unsolicited. (1817)

Allen, Tannery, Maryport, Cumberland.—Dear Sir,—The Linnets you sent me is the best Linnets ever seen at such a price. I have had the best of satisfaction with it. Many of my friends have seen it and say the same. I have dealt with a few fanciers now, but if wanting any more I will send to you.—J. Clark, to H. Allen. The above show they are the finest singing Linnets in the world. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnets of the world. They make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest for length, turns and form. They stand alone, and for voice they have no equal. 1/6 to 2/-. This class of bird have won the English Derby and all the English championships and the world's greatest contest. Notice, I am the only dealer that can get this class of bird. Beautiful singing cock Linnets, with new cage and my book of secrets, 3/6 the lot. I defy any dealer to supply the same for the money. Real English Peartree cock Goldfinches, the largest in England and showing splendid colour, 2/-, 2/6; and some extra large, will make toppers for the bench, 3/6 and 4/6. Linnets for the show bench; they stand alone for size, colour and markings; they are real Norwich type; rare prize-winners for the bench, 2/-. Yellowhammers, Greenfinches and Chaffinches, real prize-winners for the bench, 1/6 each; my hook of secrets, 1/-. So if you want good value send to your old friend. Beware of imitators: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds. (1817)

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 25," by H. J. Full James. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2d., from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

Twitterings.

We hear from Mr. E. Dendle, hon. sec., that 33 cage bird classes will be provided at the show of the Swansea F.A. on Dec. 10. Mr. W. F. L. Bremner, sec., writes that the Clackmannanshire C.B.S. intend holding their show as usual on Dec. 5, open to members within 15 miles from Alloa.

Additional societies to abandon their open shows are: Winsford C.B.S., Preston O.S., Hull C.B.S., Newtownards C.B.S., Broughty Ferry C.B.S.

Mr. A. F. Fifield, press corr., writes that entries for the show of the Oxford C.B.S. will be accepted up to first post Monday, Oct. 19. The schedule is reviewed in this week's issue.

Owing to all the halls in Stirling being commandeered by the military authorities, we have been compelled to cancel our show fixed for Nov. 21st, writes Mr. J. Gillies, Sec. Stirling and Dis. C.B.S.

Mr. J. L. Heseltine, hon. sec. Hull C.B.S., writes that he has joined the colours, and all further communications should be addressed to the sec. (pro. tem.), Mr. Fernandez, 70, Belvoir Street, Hull.

The show of the Haltwhistle C.B.S., arranged for Nov. 20-21, has been postponed till the new year. Mr. J. Ewart, sec., writes that the show of Thrums C.B.S., fixed for Dec. 5, has been postponed, but the new date is not stated.

OBITUARY.

MR. T. THOMPSON (Derby).

It is with regret, writes Mr. F. W. Jordan, that I have to report the death of Mr. Tom Thompson, which took place on Oct. 1, after only a few days' illness. Mr. Thompson was one of the most prominent members of the Derby and Dist. C.B.S., serving on the committee for a number of years, and winning the Norwich cup three years ago. He was highly respected by all, and his loss will be felt by the whole of our members. He was buried on Oct. 4 at Chaddisden, Derby. Age 36.

All the birds during the forthcoming L. and P.O.S. show will be fed on seeds and other foods supplied by Messrs. Trower and Co., writes Mr. Chas. W. Law, the hon. sec. I think it most kind of them that they are willing to help during these bad times.

We hope members will not forget the annual show takes place on Oct. 29th, write Messrs. Burton Bros., hon. secs. New Cross C.B.S., and we shall be pleased to hear from members who wish to give a special, so that it may appear in schedule, which will be sent out shortly. Stewards are also wanted.

As I am leaving this country to take up a position abroad, I am compelled to dispose of my entire stock of Crest and Crest-bred Canaries, writes Mr. John Thomson (Broxburn). I was anxiously anticipating the show season, as I have bred some good youngsters. My entire stock is advertised under Crests this week, and I have also a lot of cages, show and stock, and other necessary appliances to dispose of.

The principal article in the October issue of "British Birds," Messrs. Witherby and Co., High Holborn, 1s. monthly, is a review by Mr. M. Vaughan of the 1913 inquiry on the increase and decrease in summer migrants. A list of marked (ringed) birds recovered is given, and the rest of the issue is filled with some very interesting "Notes," one of which, by Mr. J. H. Owen, records that of 34 Cuckoos' eggs found during the past season no less than 18 were in nests of the Hedge Sparrow.

In the Aviculture Magazine, the organ of the Avicultural Society, for October the Marquis of Tavistock concludes his very interesting "Hints on Parrot-Keeping." Among the other articles are "Some Canadian Birds," by Mr. H. B. Rathbone; "Birds in Autumn," by Mr. A. R. Williams; "Birds of New South Wales," by Mr. G. A. Heumann; and "English Names for the Parrots," by Dr. E. Hopkinson. The frontispiece is a beautiful coloured drawing of the Rufous-necked Laughing Thrush, by Mr. H. Goodchild, and notes are given by Mr. D. Seth-Smith.

The Bright Future of Our Hobby.

A HEARTENING MESSAGE TO BREEDERS AND EXHIBITORS OF BIRDS.

Enterprise of the Yorkshire Union of C.B.S. Splendidly Justified: Results that Should Set at Rest the Minds of Show Officials.

THE second show of the Yorkshire Union season, held on Saturday last by the Bradford East O.S., proved a thorough success and, best of all, afforded splendid justification of the stout-hearted action of the Council of the Y.U. in deciding for "Business as Usual" despite the grey outlook which the affairs of the Fancy took on in the initial weeks of the war crisis.

A Bogey Effectually Laid.

The opening fixture at Halifax provided abundant proof that the fanciers of Yorkshire and the immediate vicinity intended to uphold their hobby by every means in their power, and the show at Bradford is a triumph for the clear-sighted, hard-headed men of the County of Broad Acres, who have shown that the obstacles to the success of shows conjured up by the timid—difficulty of transit being probably the "bogey in chief"—have little or no reality when put to the test.

This is not by any means the first time that Yorkshiremen have given a lead to their brethren in the Fancy—they have always shone in matters of management and organisation—and we hope the officials and members of those societies that have still to decide the question of "to be or not to be" in connection with their annual exhibitions, will take heart from the results achieved by the Y.U.

Cheering Figures.

Remember that the cancelling of your fixture must inevitably mean that the Fancy to which you are devoted will slip back a notch in your district. Do not lightly dismiss the possibility of your show being a success financially and in every other way; that fanciers stand ready to support shows courageous enough to appeal to them we have never doubted, and recent happenings serve to strengthen us in that opinion. We can point, too, in further confirmation, to the fine entry secured by many of the classes at Bristol (a very early fixture and a "mixed" show) viz., 35, 21, and three of 17, with nine other classes well into double figures.

At Bradford East Show (the second Y.U. fixture of this year) there were more exhibitors and more exhibits than there were at the Windhill Show of last year (the second Y.U. fixture of 1913).

Further, there were more exhibitors at the present Bradford East Show (viz., 145) than at the show of last year (viz. 138).

These facts should serve to dispel at once the notion that there is anything in the state of things to-day necessarily inimical to the welfare of cage-bird shows.

We have decided, writes Mr. W. Adams, hon. sec. Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S., to hold our members' show as usual on Nov. 28, in the Parish Church Schools. Mr. Hardy, Oldham, will judge.

Mr. J. G. Torbett, sec. Muirkirk C.B.S., writes that since having his schedule printed he has received an additional novice medal from the B.F.C.C. Any member of B.F.C.C. competing with rung birds will be disqualified.

Can it be True?

"On September 30, at Himbleton, near Droitwich, I saw a Cuckoo flying in a southerly direction. It settled close to me, and called its note four times." So writes a correspondent in the "Birmingham Post."

Don't Forget It.

Exhibitors in the metropolitan area should remember that entries for the L. and P.O.S. Show (note advert. this week) close on Thursday next, Oct. 22nd, to Mr. C. W. Law, hon. sec., Brimley House, Woodhouse Road, North Finchley. This show deserves generous support, as all the entry fees are returned in prize money, not one penny being deducted for expenses, and there is an excellent list of special prizes. It affords fanciers a splendid opportunity of determining the merits of their birds in competition.

Over the Fence.

Of course, where the military necessities of the moment render impossible the obtaining of a suitable hall, fanciers have to accept the inevitable. But even this does not preclude the holding of what we may term "district shows," such, for instance, as the projected Welsh National Show, which we hope will come into being, and which has our hearty good wishes. The combination of several societies is, if every member loyally does his best, practically sufficient to ensure a successful show without even counting on outside help, although the latter will of a certainty be forthcoming.

These district shows should be open to all fanciers living within a certain radius, and classes should be added for novices, it being made clear that wins in this restricted competition do not affect anyone's novice status. Success should then be certain.

A Gentle Hint.

One further point occurs to us: We have often thought that the partiality of societies for crowding all the shows possible into practically two months (October and November) was not entirely in the best interests of all concerned. Well, this seems peculiarly a season when shows dated early in the New Year might look for success. We will leave the hint for societies interested to think over.

With regard to the outlook for the Fancy in general, in our opinion there is no need for the slightest despondency. It is better—much better—now than many people we have met seemed to think could possibly be the case.

The Silver Lining.

And that there is a bright future to look forward to we have not the smallest doubt. In this connection we would commend to our readers the following words, which appeared in a recent issue of the "Eastern Daily Press" (published at Norwich).

It may be of interest to fanciers and the general public to know that the war may have a direct bearing upon the breeding and exportation of Canaries from Norwich. For years the Germans have been the greatest competitors the city has had in the matter of Canary breeding, and have annually sent enormous numbers of the little songsters to America, where there is always a great demand for them. Lately a report had been prevalent that there would be no sale for English birds this year, but Mr. Jacob Mackley, one of our best known experts, is of the contrary opinion, and advises breeders to hold their birds as long as they possibly can, as his belief is that there must be a great demand for English birds in America in the near future, as the Germans will be unable to supply even a fraction of the number they have sent across the sea in past years.

We are in entire agreement with the above views. May the Good Times quickly come to pass.

Changes of Address.

We are asked to state that Mr. Thos. Bewick has removed from Belford Terrace to 44, Milton Street, N. Shields, and Mr. J. W. Robson, sec. of Burnhope C.B.S., from Mordue Buildings to Bell Houses, Burnhope.

Liverpool Needs Your Support.

The secretaries of Liverpool Show, Messrs. Metcalfe and Green (58, Brunswick Road, Liverpool) request exhibitors to be good enough to post their entries early, as there is occasionally some delay in the postal arrangements. They hope fanciers will give their show the fullest possible support, and so justify them in going ahead with the fixture. The prize money and the special prizes are very liberal.

Rally Round Abertillery.

Permit me to remind exhibitors of our show next Wed., October 21st, writes Mr. H. H. Mortimer, hon. sec. Abertillery C.B.S. We have secured the Gymnasium Hall, the best in the district, and Mr. Robson as judge. Fanciers can rest assured that their exhibits will receive every care at the hands of capable fanciers. I ask those who have not a schedule to enter from the advertisement appearing in this week's issue of CAGE BIRDS. We shall accept entries till Monday, first post.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Wisp. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

SUNFLOWER SEED AND BRITISH FINCHES.

By A. H. C. LEGG.

An instructive lecture given before the Porth and Rhondda Valleys C.B.S. (Concluded from page 163.)

EVERY one knows the bold Greenie; you can hardly visit a British bird fancier's room or aviary without seeing one or two. He seems to be everyone's favourite. The cocks may easily be picked out from the hens, the cocks being green and the hens grey, with just a faint yellow in the wings and tail. As a Hybrid breeder he is in great demand, either for pairing to other British hens or Canary hens. I have a Greenie hen that will sit, hatch and rear Canaries until out of nest.

The Greenfinch's staple diet should be in winter: a good supply of sunflower and safflower seed, and a mixture of 3 parts Canary, 1 part summer rape, 1 part winter rape. Oats and wheat I find a good thing in winter, and for green food in summer I give plenty of groundsel, chickweed, hardheads, and dandelion. At moulting time as much fresh gathered sunflower seeds as the bird will eat, also a little linseed. I use hemp very sparingly. Fresh sunflower seed is a grand colour-food and a Greenfinch moulted well upon this will be a blaze of colour. I am not an advocate of pepper feeding Greenies.

The Greenfinch to Show.

To select a Greenfinch for show, choose a yellow with a good natural colour (grass green), and of the same colour all through, not running light underneath as we find some of them, and with a good bold front and round head. The outer edges of the wings and tail should be a deep yellow; feather fine and silky. The show cage should be of the box pattern, enamelled a very pale blue inside, with wires the same colour, and black outside.

The Chaffinch is getting more popular every year, and some good ones are seen upon the show benches at our shows. It should be fed in the same way as the Greenfinch, excepting in the moulting season, when it should have a supply of insectivorous food and some live insects or grubs. Mix up enough of the food for the day, and add to this a quarter of a teaspoonful of tasteless pepper. Remember to give fresh sunflower seed as for the Greenfinch.

For an exhibition bird, select one as large as possible, with a good round breast, a large round head, and a bold eye; the wing bars as distinct as possible, and the blue upon the head as deep as possible.

The Goldfinch and the Siskin.

The Goldfinch to me is the handsomest of all our small British Finches, and you will hardly find any Canary breeder's room without one, for as a muler he is a jewel without price. His stock food should be two parts canary, two parts teazle, quarter-part summer rape, and quarter-part charlock, half-part linseed; hemp should be given now and again as a tit-bit. I also mix up the following as a tit-bit in equal quantities: thistle, dandelion, maw, jinga, and lettuce seed, and give a half-teaspoonful every other day in summer, and the same quantity every day in winter, also a small quantity of hemp. The best greenfood is groundsel, dandelion, hardheads and thistles.

A Goldfinch for exhibition should be large and cobby, and have a good square blaze free from guttering. This "guttering" is just what spoils a lot of our Finches. The back and breast should be a deep chestnut, the black on the head and back of head cut nice and clean, and the yellow in wings as deep as possible.

Of all our British birds I believe the Siskin is one of the easiest to settle down to cage life, and his diet is very simple. Canary seed, summer rape, teazle, and a small quantity of hemp are about the only seeds required as a staple diet. In spring and summer give any wild seed you can lay hands on, and during the moult don't forget a few fresh gathered sunflower seeds. I usually cut a sunflower head into eight pieces for the Goldfinch and Siskin, and give one piece each day, and nearing the end of the moult I add a little linseed. As a tit-bit, I give a little wild seed mixture (Baker and Spiller's), as there are about 20 different kinds of seed in it.

The Rock Pipit is an inhabitant of the sea-shore, where it lives on insects and small marine life left by the receding tide. It is not unlike the more common Meadow Pipit, but is darker (more olive) in plumage, and has a shorter hind-claw. The bird depicted won 3rd prize at the Crystal Palace 1914 Show for Mr. R. C. Tout, of Portsmouth.

The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe

By J. TOMLINSON.

How to Keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

PERSONALLY, I do not believe the foregoing process necessary, for I have not experienced any detrimental effects in placing the song cage direct into the cabinet. No closing of the doors should take place until the birds are thoroughly used to feeding and drinking in their new quarters. The doors can then be closed half-way for a commencement, and afterwards just a little each day, or on alternate days, until the complete closure takes place.

Letting in the Light.

For about two or three days after this closure the doors must be fully opened several times daily, and should any of the birds not be feeding properly when doors are closed they must be allowed a little more light until the defect is remedied. Afterwards, one hour's full light daily will be quite sufficient, and it will be advantageous to divide this period into two, or even three portions; the last but not the least important being in an artificial light.

This caging off may have the effect of stopping the youngsters from singing for a few days. Yet, as they have been bred for song purposes for so many generations, sing they must, and from now, until they have completed their song tours, will require a little watching. The breeder who has paid attention to the mating of the stock birds, and not mixed up the faults, and has also provided a suitable tutor, may reasonably expect to see some good return for his labour. Should any bird bring a fault that is not sung by tutor or stock-birds, it should be instantly removed from the training-room.

Whether such birds should be disposed of depends upon the rest of their song, and the way the other youngsters are singing. In the event of these others singing all the good tours that are sung by the bird or birds bringing this "foreign" fault then the latter can be sold off. I would advise the fancier to think, not once or twice, but many times before he disposes of a bird possessing some good quality that is lacking in his other stock, for the sole fault of its producing a faulty tour.

In your endeavours to establish quality, mate with nest sister, also with a good hen from another strain, or one slightly but not too closely related. The following year mate sire to daughters, also to another fresh hen to give you material to work on in the following year. The young cocks and hens bred from the two hens can be mated together. By working on these lines excellence can be established, and faulty tours eradicated. When you have a number of birds to work with you can choose for breeding and for training purposes, using only those that are the most suitable for your object, to maintain the quality, yet to diminish and eventually eradicate the fault.

A Section for Exhibitors.

Reader, I have led you through a little of the early history of the Roller, its song tours, and in as simple a manner as possible I have told how to distinguish these, how to purchase, house, mate for breeding, and how to train to produce good singers. If I have laboured any of those subjects, I did so purposely, to make them as simple as possible, knowing full well that some minds are quicker to comprehend than others. Little remains for me to say, excepting to give a few simple hints to those who wish to train their birds for exhibition, to give an up-to-date judging standard, and a few hints on how Roller Canaries are judged.

Birds for a show career should be as tame as it is possible to get them, and those that have trained in a living room will not experience much difficulty in this respect. It is difficult to say when they should be placed in the exhibition cages, because of their different temperaments. The change from the wire song cage to the shutter show cage will not affect some birds, for they will commence to sing immediately after the transfer, some object to the change by not singing, while others will not sing, and will sulk for days. The latter type must be kept throughout the show season in the show cage.

The difficulty of getting them to sing in different surroundings is partly overcome by getting them tame and indifferent to a person's presence in the vicinity of their cage. Some fanciers in their endeavours to attain this will frequently move the cage from one position to another, or from one room to another, and it is not an uncommon practice to take a bird when on a visit to fancier friends.

By "OLD HAND."

A practical article on the keeping of some of our most popular Softbills. (Concluded from page 151.)

GRAATED raw carrot mixed with the food is very good for them, also a little canary seed occasionally. Shredded meat, worms, caterpillars and any sort of insect life are much appreciated, and help to keep them in health, and therefore song, as an unhealthy bird rarely sings.

Always keep the cage floor well strewn with sand, and occasionally put in a shallow dish full of silver sand, or dust off the road if clean, as larks bathe in this instead of water. Do not coddle them at all but hang outside as much as possible. Should the weather be very frosty or wet it is as well to bring them indoors, but not in a room where a fire is burning, for when they are hung out again they may catch a chill. If looked after according to the above directions I think they will do very well; at least, mine have done so.

The Starling is a bird which one rarely sees caged in town, but in the country he is a general favourite. The glossy spangled plumage and its mimicking ways have much to recommend the bird. In their wild state they are very wary, but when caged make fine pets. About the fields and ploughed lands droves of them may be seen busily hunting for grubs and insects. About the end of March these droves break up and each pair begins to look for a hole in which to build its nest.

The Penalty of Plundering.

The Starling has not much song, but a clear, plaintive whistle, which begins at the top of the scale, runs down slowly, and very quickly up again. A jangle of notes is also emitted, which more resembles chattering than singing. If any are wanted for the cage hand-rearing is best resorted to, for old ones rarely settle down. They are best taken when the feathers begin to appear, for if left longer they will sulk and not gape. Should the nest be in the hole of a tree be very careful to see that the hole is large enough to admit the hand easily. I once put my arm into a hole just above the elbow and was two hours before I got it out, minus half the skin and with a sprained elbow.

Teaching to Talk.

The youngsters are best put into a box about six inches deep, half full of hay, as the nest is not easily removed. The method of hand-feeding is the same as with the other birds mentioned. Cocks as well as hens may be retained if wanted. The cocks are usually distinguished by being larger and bolder than the hens. Teaching them to talk should now commence, for it is in these early stages that they acquire most. I have heard of people cutting their tongues with the idea that they will talk sooner, but they ought to be served the same and see how much sooner they would talk. A few words at a time should be repeated until they are acquired, when some more may be added. Give each bird a name, and when the attention of the bird is required call it by that name. "Jacob" seems to be a name to which they will answer most readily, and will soon come to the wires on hearing it. With a little patience they may be taught various sayings, and whistle little ditties. I have heard some which one would take to be a Parrot unless they were seen. They will mimic anything, from the mewing of a cat to calling one of the family.

When they feed fairly well, the food should be gradually changed to some good packet mixture or the following: One pint of barley meal, and one ounce of ants' eggs mixed together. Mix just enough crumbly moist and make fresh every day. Snails, grubs, worms and a little shredded meat are appreciated, also lettuce and fruit. Green food of some kind should be given every day or two, as this is essential to keep them in health. A bath should be provided on bright days, as they love a splash, which is necessary to keep them in the best of plumage. Once one has succeeded in teaching a Starling a few words the time and trouble will never be regretted. After the first moult the beautiful spangled plumage appears.

Appeal for the First Fixture in South Wales.

Sir,—Allow me to appeal to all fanciers, and those in South Wales and Monmouthshire especially, to support Abertillery Show, on October 21st, this being the first fixture in South Wales. Then we shall not hear so much of the cancelling of shows. I may say that the Abertillery Society is guaranteeing the prize-money, and there is no cancelling or amalgamating of classes. They are a body of experienced and good fanciers, and the exhibits will get every care and attention. I am getting all fanciers around Blaenavon to exhibit; I may say there will be some 30 exhibits in Norwich, Yorkshires and Borders from here.

GEORGE BROOM.

The Scale of Prize Money at Y.U. Shows.

Sir,—Kindly publish the enclosed list of prize-money to be paid on the sliding scale at Yorkshire Union Shows in classes that range from 5 to 14 entries. It will serve as a guide to exhibitors, and save secretaries many explanations.

The Cancelling of Wimbledon Show.

Sir,—I have just received a card announcing a meeting of the Wimbledon C.B.S. and at the bottom is printed "on account of the war the Committee have reluctantly cancelled the open show in November." I consider the Wimbledon society has been in the past one of the best managed around London, and members, I believe, have always had a voice in the general business. I consider that before this show was abandoned a meeting should have been called for members and the secretary have explained the difficulties he was in respecting the holding of the show. Perhaps the secretary will be kind enough to let those members know (who are not in the know) the particular reason why the show is cancelled, whether it is difficult respecting a hall not being available, or what?

A MEMBER.

The Royal Horticultural Hall Show Will Positively be Held.

Sir,—Notwithstanding rumours to the contrary, I am now in a position to convey to the Fancy the following official information, "that the Royal Horticultural Hall will not be further requisitioned for military purposes, except in the event of a grave crisis arising which would necessitate the bringing to London of large bodies of troops." Consequently I appeal to the Fancy to make a note of the show dates, Nov. 26, 27 and 28, and to flatly contradict any reports that the show will not be held.

After a short respite, I have been again requested to accept the onerous position of show manager. It is now over 20 years since I first became acquainted with this work in the Fancy, during which time fanciers have never failed to assist me, and I trust my actions during that time have inspired further confidence and that I may again (for it is now more than ever necessary) rely upon their unanimous support to make this exhibition ("the triple entente") the largest of its kind ever held, more especially as the whole of the profits arising therefrom are to be devoted to the British Red Cross Society, for the purpose of alleviating the sufferings of our fellow men incapacitated while doing their duty. I am aware of the heavy drain on the public in many ways, but would respectfully commend this method of giving assistance; it is accompanied by a sporting element sufficient to render some pleasure to compensate for the many anxieties caused by the present unfortunate crisis.

With the laudable object in view I truly hope there will be no counter move to detract from the success of the undertaking, as the triple entente, viz., the N.B.B. and M.C., the F.B.E.L. and the L.C.B.A. have no desire to claim all the credit for any success that may be achieved, but are ready to mete out to every supporter (in whatever sphere, whether with entries, sale of admission tickets, obtaining adverts, and stalls, or contributing in any way whatsoever) their just claim in the participation of any success. Let us be able to send a substantial sum from the Cage Bird Fancy of the British Isles through the annual exhibition at the Royal Horticultural Hall. Let us cast aside differences of opinion and all work together with one common object for one common good.

Suggestions of methods to augment the fund in any way are respectfully invited and will be carefully considered by the Committee and carried into effect if practicable, and providing they are not contrary to the conditions under which the Hall is rented.

The secretaries of the respective clubs will be pleased to furnish every possible information concerning their own club's classification: Mr. A. Silver, F.B.E.L., 303, High Road, Streatham; Mr. Carr, N.B.B. and M.C., 45, Overdale Road, South Ealing, and T. Knight, 64, Chaplin Road, Wembley, or JOHN TYSON,

The Suggested Welsh National Cage Bird Show.

Sir,—I brought the subject of a Welsh National Show before the members of the Abertillery C.B.S. at our last meeting, held October 10th, and after a short discussion it was unanimously decided to support same. I think it is a very good idea, inasmuch as we have such a large number of exhibitors in Wales and Monmouthshire. I think Mr. Alf. Hutchings (Swansea) wrote a very sensible letter on the subject last week. I am very much in favour of his suggestions, and if a meeting should be called, I am sure the Abertillery C.B.S. will not be found in the background, as we should be pleased to send a representative.

H. H. MORTIMER, Hon. Sec.

Sir,—I thank Mr. E. Thomas for making it quite clear that the suggested Welsh National Show will not be run by the Cardiff C.B.S. It must be a National Show represented by every society in Wales. I would remind Mr. Thomas, however, that the National Show Committee will have to leave much of the detail each year to the society in whose town the show is to be held. That is to say—the local society and the National Show Committee would work together for success. I consider it would be a great honour indeed to breeders and fanciers to have such an event in their town as the Welsh National Show. I venture to say that it would do more for those breeders and fanciers generally than could be done by the local society itself in five years. It is for this reason that I ask all societies in Wales to pull together and make the first Welsh National Show a huge success.

THE GREAT NATIONAL CAGE BIRD SHOW

WILL BE HELD ON FEB. 5, 6, 8 & 9, 1915

I am arranging an informal meeting at Abertillery Show next Wednesday, Oct. 21st, which will afford an opportunity for all fanciers in that district to give their views. I am looking forward to the support of all well-known fanciers and exhibitors who are interested in this movement. I shall then call a meeting at Cardiff on Saturday, Nov. 7th, at which I hope all societies will be represented. Will Mr. Alf. Hutchings please note that on the 7th proximo Cardiff City meet Queen's Park Rangers? It is quite a good idea of yours, Mr. Hutchings, and you will be pleased to hear that Cardiff C.B.S. are having a show on Sat., Nov. 21st, when the City meet Bristol Rovers. The show, I believe, will be open to a radius of twenty miles, or, to all exhibitors who can bring their own birds, and it is being held solely to keep fanciers together. Whether Llanelly intend holding their show in Jan. or not, I sincerely hope Mr. John will endeavour to attend the meeting in Cardiff on Nov. 7th.

I enclose a very nice letter from Mr. G. T. Jones, the secretary of the Welsh Cage Bird Club, who kindly offers a guinea towards the expenses. There are dozens of other good fanciers in the Principality who can do the same thing, but, as Mr. Jones says, "they are very backward in coming forward."

E. J. BANKS.

Copy of Mr. Jones' letter.
Sir,—I am quite in sympathy with the suggestion re a Welsh National Show, and at any time prepared to do my share towards bringing same to an issue. I have felt for years that Welsh fanciers are "backward in coming forward" so far as a National show is concerned, and I am sure that if we are united success must follow our venture. It is useless to think of the phrase in this week's issue by Mr. D. John, of Llanelly, that for this season it is too late. I say, "Never too late to mend." Even if it is war, let us be up and doing with a heart for any fate! You can rely on me to do all I can to support the movement, and I would subscribe £1 to the funds. Therefore, friends, carry out your well thought out idea, and let us have a show that will go down to posterity.

BUSINESS BRISK AS EVER.

Advertiser asks us to 'Rescue Him from Would-be Customers!

SIR,—Will you kindly come to my rescue and thank all would-be customers who answered my advertisement last week in CAGE BIRDS. I had about 16 birds for sale (Foreign) and could have sold them many times over, several offering to take the lot, and others offering me a good price for odd birds. It is utterly impossible for me to reply to all, though I have done so in some dozen cases or more. Although it is just a week since the advertisement appeared, letters of enquiry are still coming in along with money orders!—G. E. CORNWALL.

"Pleased to tell you I have sold the Pomeranian Puppy this (Friday) evening before seven o'clock in my own parish through the advertisement in your most valuable CAGE BIRDS.—JAMES JEFFERIES (Bristol).

Norwich Plainhead Club Meets at Manchester.

Sir,—A general meeting of the Norwich Plainhead Club will be held at Manchester Show on October 31st, at 3.30 in the afternoon, when I trust as many members as possible will attend, as there will be some very important business on the agenda. In view of the fact that three of the shows to which we had allotted our patronage have been cancelled, some other arrangement will have to be made as to the allocation of the club's support. If any member has any scheme, and will not be present at the meeting, I should be glad if he would forward me particulars in order that I may bring it to the notice of the members present.

North Staffordshire Societies Decide on Inter-club Shows.

Sir,—In view of the fact that the local societies had considered it advisable to abandon their open event this season, the decision to hold a series of inter-club shows appears to be an excellent one, if interest in the Cage Bird Fancy is to be maintained until the country is in a more normal condition. A meeting of delegates was held at Stoke on Oct. 6th, Mr. C. J. Robinson, chair, Mr. Hulme, treasurer, Mr. Pitchford, secretary. It was decided that each show should be confined to bona fide members of the societies participating. Two shows to be held, one at Elgin Provides a Show for the North of Scotland.

Sir,—The Committee of the Elgin C.B.A. have decided to hold their Fifth Annual Show as usual, on December 25. The Committee hope that all fanciers in the North of Scotland will support them and help to make the show a success financially by sending as large an entry as possible. The show will be run on lines similar to last year, and we look forward with confidence to another successful fixture.

Old Shildon Show is Going Ahead.

Sir,—The Old Shildon Workmen's Club Cage Bird Society's Show will be held in the club hall on Fri. and Sat., Nov. 13 and 14, when there will be 21 classes for Canaries and six classes for British; judges, J. Stanger (Pelton Fell), and W. Reid (Sunderland). We ask the Yorkshire Federation to rally round us and give us a bumping entry. We have a grand hall, with plenty of light (electricity by night), and heated by hot water.

Llanelly's Show to Take Place in the New Year.

Sir,—One of the largest and most representative meetings of the Llanelly and Dist. C.B.S. was held at headquarters on Saturday evening last. The chair was taken by Mr. Jos. Owens, the president (Mr. Holmes) being unable to attend. The most important business before the meeting was as to the advisability of holding our show booked for January 12 next. After a free discussion by all the members it was passed that we hold our show as usual and that the proceeds be devoted to some deserving cause to be agreed upon at our next meeting. We then hope to make a start with our schedule. We trust that fanciers will remember the Llanelly Cage Bird Society with their entries. One cup was promised at this meeting, for the open Yorkshire section, to be won outright.

A Young Budgerigar that Talks

Sir,—Last year, with the valuable assistance of CAGE BIRDS, I started a garden aviary, stocking it with four pairs of Green Budgerigars, and by the end of the year had disposed of 32 young birds. This year 33 young ones have already been disposed of, and there are many more, unfledged and hatching out, now in the aviary. On April 26, 1914, I gave a young cock, then seven weeks old, to a friend living at Scarborough and about a week since I received a letter from him stating that the young Budgie now talks, says "Pretty Dick," "What are you doing," and I know not what else. As I believe a talking Budgerigar is of very uncommon occurrence, I should be much interested to hear the experience of any of your readers in this respect.

RETLAW.

[We have had a number of instances of talking Budgerigars announced in our columns. Curiously enough, I myself have one at the present moment that speaks very fluently.—EDITOR.]

FOR BIRD-KEEPERS JOINING THE COLOURS.

Generous Offer by a Well-known Lady Bird-lover.

A lady offers a temporary home for the pet bird or birds of men called away owing to the War. The birds will be fed and looked after free of charge by skilled fanciers until the end of the War. Any kinds will be taken in (Parrot tribe only excepted), insectivorous and fruit-eating British or foreign species having preference, though there will be room for seed-eaters and a certain number of Canaries as well.

A formal receipt will be given in exchange for each bird left or sent, which will have its owner's name and address attached to its cage, and the birds will be given up on production of the receipt at any time.

Anyone intending to forward birds to be looked after is requested to send a postcard, stating kind of bird or birds it is proposed to send, and whether they have been kept in a cold or a warm room; and immediately they receive an answer to say there is still accommodation available, the birds can be sent or brought to The Hon. Mrs. Bourke, 73, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, London, W.

An Amalgamated Show at Liverpool.

Sir,—The Liverpool and District Amalgamated C.B.S. Show will be held in the St. Andrew's Parochial Hall, Bootle, on Jan. 1 and 2. Mr. W. A. Cowgill will judge Yorks. and Mr. C. Houlton will judge remainder. The Green Canary Association have granted their novice scheme patronage and also to the Norwich and Yorkshires in the champion classes.

Table Show at headquarters, Oct. 6, a splendid array of 70 birds and a very large attendance, including many ladies. President Mr. Day, Hon. Sec. Mr. P. Brooks, and other officials showed a very practical interest in the proceedings. Special for best Canary was won by Mr. P. Brooks with a fine buff Norwich cock, closely pressed by a charming ticked yellow hen shown by Mr. Griffin. Mr. Stephens, who put down a fine team, won spl. for best British, with a bonny and rich coloured Bramblefinch. Mr. Willis sent a choice collection of Foreign, and annexed the special by the aid of a very nice Whydah. Spl. for best Mule or Hybrid was won by Miss Smith, with a Goldf-Bullfinch. There are no signs of decay in a Society which can muster 70 birds at an evening Table Show, secure the presence and interest of a strong bevy of ladies, and attract the attendance of some of the most acute and successful exhibitors. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged.

HASTINGS & ST. LEONARDS.

Final show of the season, Oct. 7, Royal Oak Hotel. Among those present were Mrs. Kirk-Bullock (a patron), Mrs. Crofts and Miss Kirk-Bullock, Hon. Sec. and Treas., Messrs. F. Wright (Tunbridge Wells), F. Slack (V.P.), A. E. Godden, Chairman of Committee, W. Turner (Battic), H. Pennells, W. Ellis (Bexhill), J. Stokes and Morris and Son. Apologies for absence were received from Mrs. E. M. Barrow and Mr. H. Howick. The show proved a great success and was the second largest this season. Only those members who had exhibited at three out of the five shows were eligible for the special point prizes. Winners of point prizes throughout season:—Yorks.: 1, Morris and Son (78); 2, Veness (70). Nor.: 1, Pennells (58); 2, Cragg (43); 3, W. Turner (37). Brit.: Relf (27). Trophies for best young bird throughout the season: Yorks., Veness; Nor., French. Mr. J. Stevens judged.

Exhibitors and members kindly note that owing to the war it has been decided to abandon the Open Annual Show, but the Annual Show for Members and Residents will take place as arranged, on Nov. 17 and 18. I hope all members will make a special effort to exhibit and attend the Annual Show and thus cause it to be a great success. All prizes will be given on prize distribution night, Dec. 9.—Irene Kirk-Bullock, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

Bradford East Show Grandly Supported.

A Record Gate and an Entry that "Topped all Expectations."

The Bradford East O.S. held its sixth annual exhibition on Oct. 10, in the Park Chapel Schools. The room is an ideal one and the staging is such that the exhibits are to be seen to the best advantage. The number of exhibits was 445, which topped all expectations. The President, Mr. E. Suddards, attended the show during the judging. The society has been very fortunate in getting such an able secretary as Mr. Wm. Cruise to follow Mr. Hill, whom they had for several years. Quality was quite up to the standard of Union shows. The strongest classes were the two unlighted classes for the Rose Bowl, no less than 34 yellows and 22 buffs competing for this trophy. The winner was shown by Mr. J. Helliwell, of Skelmanthorpe, a real beauty, not of the biggest, but for col. and feather is unbeatable. Mr. W. Cowgill (Bradford) judged, and gave every satisfaction. The Sec., Mr. Cruise, got through his duties in a very businesslike manner and was ably assisted by Mr. G. Rushworth. Show stewards, Messrs. Stables, Rushworth, Hudson, and C. Cowgill. Sales stewards, Messrs. H. Hill and G. Rushworth. Railway committee, Messrs. Walker, Wilkinson, White, Wise, O. Priestley, Spencer, Riley, Walker, Metcalfe, and P. Priestley. Considering it was such a large show, the stewards got through the work of packing and sending away the exhibits in good time. Prize money was paid out in the show room to all the winners present. There seemed to be a record gate, and the show was satisfactory to all exhibitors and those connected with the society.

MIDLAND COUNTIES Y.C.C.

Meeting, Crown Hotel, Birmingham, October 7. The Committee had no alternative but to decide, with great regret, to abandon all competition for 1914 owing to ten out of twelve Midland societies, who have applied for patronage, cancelling their shows. Members are respectfully requested to pay subs. for 1914 now due, to enable a larger list of prizes to be put up for competition next season.—W. Wells, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting and Table Show of British, Oct. 3. Nine birds were entered. Result: 1, 2, 4, c. Middleton; 3, vhc, hc, Pyrah. Mr. James Smith was elected a member. Owing to the very poor attendance the lecture that should have been given by Mr. J. Chambers had to be abandoned. Schedules for the Nov. Members' Show have been sent on; anyone overlooked please apply to me. I specially appeal to all members to support us at this show and help to keep up the enthusiasm that was shown before the outbreak of the war.—E. Norton, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (East End) O.A.

Meeting, Sept. 29, at 87, Old Dalnarnock Road, Bridgeton, Mr. A. McMillan presiding over a fine turnout of members, the business being in regard to our annual show, on Nov. 7, at above place. We are hoping to have a fine entry and successful show. Judges are: Scotch Fancy, Mr. J. Fulton, Partick, and Mr. A. Clark, Rutherglen; Nor. and Border, Mr. W. Haddock, Hamilton. We are purchasing a silver cup for Norwich section, and one for Borders; this is the first year that we have given cups towards each section. These are to be won annually by members.—D. Burnett, Sec.

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.C.

Meeting, Oct. 3, Pillar's Cafe, Pink Lane; Mr. J. "Stone" chair. A discussion took place re special competition, as there are likely to be no shows competing; this was left over for a month. Decided to hold a table show next meeting, five classes each section. Judges: Champions, Mr. W. P. Smith; Novices, Mr. T. Parker. Mr. W. Espie gave a very interesting lecture on the general breeding and management of the Border Fancy Canary. This proved very instructive. Mr. Espie answering all the questions at the finish to the satisfaction of all present. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Espie brought a pleasant evening to an end.—M. C. Polts.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting, Oct. 8, Mr. Crawhall chair. The principal item was the consideration of our holding a show, and after a lengthy discussion it was unanimously resolved that we endeavour to obtain a suitable hall and hold a members' show on Dec. 5, with competitions for challenge cup, Ramsden's cup, and other valuable specials. Decided to grant our patronage to Newcastle show Nov. 14, and to give a silver spoon to each section for best unlighted bird bred by a member. Competition for the Crawhall cup for closed rung birds will be held at all shows having our patronage. A table show will be held Oct. 28. Classification: A.V. Yell, A.V. Buff, A.V. Hen, A.V. Vell, Unlighted, A.V. Buff ditto, same in novice section. Mr. A. Holden judge.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting, October 8th, Mr. J. W. Lawson chair. All the shows where patronage had been granted have been cancelled, with the exception of Sunderland, and if they decide to run a show members are requested to support them, as we decided our competition to stand as previously given to them. Also to grant patronage to Newcastle members' show November 14. Cup competition as in previous years, and to give two silver spoons (one champion, one novice) for most points with three highest birds. A member kindly promised a special of 5s. for best young bird bred by a member, to be competed for Newcastle show, which I hope all members will support. Other competitions will be announced later, as we did not know definitely in regard to Gateshead show young bird cup. We are not having year books printed this season, but members will be notified of competitions held. Next meeting, October 28th; also a table show, five classes champ., five nov. Mr. T. C. Crawhall judge. The best thanks were given to the following who subscribed to cup fund: W. H. Butler, £2 2s.; E. Kennerson, £1; J. Pierson, 7s. 6d.; J. Morrison, 7s. 6d.; R. Topping, 10s.; W. McGinn, 5s.; F. W. Laidlow, 5s.; T. C. Crawhall, 5s.; J. W. Lawson, 3s.; H. Walsbury, 2s. 6d.; R. W. Smith, 2s. 6d. Yearly subs. are now due.—F. W. Laidlow, Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Meeting headquarters, 6, The Broadway, Oct. 5. Mr. P. Rorke presided over a good attendance. The sec. explained that as soon as Great Britain became involved in the war, a meeting of the committee was called, and they unanimously decided to cancel the open show arranged for November, and substitute a members' show, to be held early in the New Year. Mr. E. J. Whittome, Mr. F. Easterling, and Mr. E. G. Pegg criticised the action of the committee, and expressed the opinion that they had exceeded their powers as a committee, and that a general meeting should have been held to decide the matter. The chairman and Mr. H. Smith defended the action of the committee, and gave many reasons why they considered the committee had acted for the best. In the end Mr. Whittome proposed, and Mr. Easterling seconded, that the question of holding an open show be discussed at the next meeting, and this was carried. Letters from the judges appointed were read, and a statement with regard to the young bird show held in July (which showed a slight profit) was made by sec. Mr. Macpherson. Surhinton, was nominated for membership. The meeting confirmed the action of the committee in appointing Messrs. Newley and Pegg to be delegates to the London Fed. A Judging Competition followed, with an entry of 18 birds, and 18 members took part; Mr. Easterling final judge. Mr. Easterling's placings were: BRIT.: 1, 2, 3, Hobden. NOR.: 1, 2, c, Jay; 3, Bailey; vhc, Hobden; hc, Nash. YORKS.: 1, 2, Mrs. Wilks. A silver spoon was awarded to owner of best bird in the Nor. class. Points gained in the competition: Bailey 26, McPherson 21, Pegg 21, Mrs. Hobden 19, Wright 17, Whittome 17, Nash 15, Birch 15, Jay 12, Whiting 11, Hobden 10, Mrs. Wilks 10, Cooper 7, Smith 5. The others did not score. "Questions and Answers" followed, and proved extremely interesting, many members taking part in the discussion caused by the various questions. Sec. announced that Mr. Allen Silver, F.Z.S., had kindly promised to give a lecture at the November meeting. Votes of thanks to the chairman and Mr. Easterling closed the meeting. G. O. Smith, Sec.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Meeting, headquarters, Mr. Suttoa chair, and a large attendance. Decided to have four open classes for local non-members, one Yorks., one Norwich for champions, and the same for novices, the proceeds of the show to go to the war fund.—E. Rone, Sec.

SOUTH MOOR C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 10, Mr. A. Dawson chair, and a fair attendance. Mr. R. Coates, Beamish, was made a member. Several specials were promised for annual show, including silver medals for best British, best novice Canary, and special for most entries. Members please turn up at next meeting.—G. F. Bates.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 3, Co-operative Hall, Low Westwood, Mr. Geo. Barkess chair. New schedule was drawn up; classes: Nor. 4, Yorks. 3, Bord. 3, Crest or C.B. 1, Mile or Hyb. 1, and 10s. Sell., Brit. 7, For. 2. Decided to put show back to Nov. 28 instead of Oct. 31, to give members more time to get a few specials. Next meeting Nov. 7, when we shall be pleased to see all members attend to arrange stewards, etc., for show. Subs. due.—Jameson and Johnson.

BOOTLE C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 6, Mr. Skilling chair, and a fair attendance. One new member was elected. Schedule for annual show, Dec. 12, was drawn up; four natural-colour classes were added. Decided to omit Cinnamon-marked classes, they being a failure in previous years. Messrs. Metcalfe, Evans, and Skilling promised specials for show. The following were elected on the committee: Messrs. Croft, Critchley, Bracken, and Wilson. Owing to our secretary being at the front, all communications should be addressed A. E. Huyton, 2, Byron Road, Blundellsands, Liverpool.

MIDDLESBROUGH & TEES-SIDE

Meeting, Crown Hotel, Oct. 3. Mr. J. Carr presided over a good muster, and a good deal of business was got through. We have arranged a members' show for November 21st to keep the interest of our hobby to its usual pitch, as we have had to cancel our annual open show. We drew up a schedule, and everything looks well for success. 19 classes are provided: 11 Canaries (2 Nov.) and 8 Brit. (1 Nov.). Judges, T. Wright, Can.; F. Marwood, Brit. This ended up a good meeting. One of our old and respected members rejoined, Mr. A. Wake. Plenty of room for more; all welcome. Meetings first Saturday in month.—C. W. Watson, Vice-Chairman.

CINNAMON-MARKED Y.C.C.

At a Committee meeting on Oct. 10 at Bradford East Show it was passed that all points scored by novice members of the above club in novice classes at Yorkshire Union shows with cinn. tkd. or cinn. mkd. birds shall count in our Novice Competition. Novice members please note this, and if any member counted points at Halifax with cinn. tkd. or cinn. mkd. birds they should let me know. I noted points scored at Bradford East Show. Novice members should be very careful to mark their entry forms C.M.Y.C. opposite all entries of cinn. mkd. or cinn. tkd. birds. It would be well if members pressed their Society to make at least two classes for cinn. mkd. novice birds. Personally, I am certain these classes would fill better than do the Norwich novice classes.—R. Garnet, Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting Oct. 12, at The Church Institute. Mr. T. L. Sayer was voted to the chair; 25 members present. Members were grieved to hear of the sudden and serious illness of our esteemed hon. sec., Mr. V. Wynn, and a unanimous vote of sympathy was passed, with hopes for a speedy recovery. Letters were read from the Hon. Mrs. Booth (presenting a handsome volume on "Birds of Britain," illustrated with coloured plates as a special for annual show), Mr. F. Knight, and Mr. J. C. Birch, hon. sec. London Federation. The feature of the evening was a washing exhibition by our popular member, Mr. A. W. Curtis, who demonstrated with two birds, and fully explained his mode of procedure. He brought a drying cage of his own invention, heated by a hot water tank, which greatly interested the members. A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Curtis for his kindness.—F. Thynne, Assist. Hon. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting, Oct. 5. Secretary reported replies from Hanley and Burslem Societies in favour of inter-club shows this season. Messrs. Pitchford, Bagshaw, and Bowers were appointed delegates to arrange details with the representatives of other societies. A number of suggestions were made, conducive to the success of the scheme. At adjourned meeting, Oct. 12, the delegates reported arrangements to hold two inter-club shows, one at Hanley on Nov. 7, and one at Burslem on Dec. 12, and the members expressed their satisfaction, and feel confident the scheme will prove of great benefit to the local societies. Decided to allot 15s. in special prizes at each show, to be competed for by the Stoke members as follows: 2s. 6d. for best champion Nor., 2s. 6d. best champion Yorks., 2s. 6d. best champion Mule or British; the same value was also allotted to the novice members. Next meeting, Oct. 26, when we hope to have arrangements completed. New members may be enrolled.—J. Pitchford, Hon. Sec.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

NOT SINGING (Josey).—The bird is not likely to resume singing while it continues to drop its feathers. Keep it in a fairly warm and equable place, free from direct cold draughts. If it does not seem to have made a fairly complete change of plumage, give, in addition to its usual seed diet, a morsel of bread and milk dusted with flowers of sulphur and finally sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water five drops of syrup of saffron and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece. But if it seems to have made a fairly good change, omit the above and begin at once with the following: Give a morsel of bread and milk as above, but without the sulphur, every second day for a fortnight or so, and on the alternate days a small piece of banana or some green salad. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats. In the drinking water during the same period give 20 drops of chemical food every second day. Bathe the feet once daily for two or three days in a quite warm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of the acid in a saucerful of warm water. After bathing a few minutes, dry carefully, and anoint all over with a drop of pure olive oil.

FEEDING ROLLERS FOR CONTESTS (Tiger).—For purely contest singers you need to reverse the proportions of your staple dietary, i.e., make it two parts good summer rape to one part canary. But you should make this change gradually now the birds have grown accustomed to your present dietary. In addition to this, give a small teaspoonful of egg food, or an equivalent quantity of bread and milk once a week; a similar quantity of mixed seed once or twice a week; and a morsel of green salad or fruit three times a week. The quantities and frequency of these extras must be chiefly regulated by the song and vigour of the birds. If they appear to be getting too loud, or "sing madly," on a full allowance of extras you must reduce them until the song is kept within reasonable bounds. As regards books, there is the No. 10 Nutshell on the Roller, 21d. post free, and you will find a special chapter on the Roller in House's "Canary Manual," 1s. 2d. post free, both from this office. There is also a brochure on the German Canary, by Rettich, which our Manager would probably procure for you, price about 10d., and there is the series of articles which have been appearing in our pages for some time past, which might help you.

GOT THE PINE? (Novane).—I'm afraid I do not quite know what is meant by this term. Your letter is altogether too vague to form any decided opinion upon. You ought to have described the appearance of the birds, and any symptoms of illness they exhibit as near as you could. Anyway, I am inclined to think there is not much wrong with the birds, but you may give each a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days add 20 drops of chemical food to the drinking water. If they still appear to be out of condition at end of that time, write again, and give full particulars about them.

ALWAYS GAPING (Roathite).—I suspect the bird is in an advanced stage of bronchial trouble, which may be due to exposure to cold draughts, as by hanging its cage in or near a window, sudden extremes of temperature, or to heated and impure air, as in the vicinity of burning lights in the evenings. See that any or all of these exciting causes are removed, and keep bird for the present in a fairly equable and comfortable place.

Oxford C.B.S.—Old Masonic Hall, Alfred St. Judge, J. Robson. 33 classes: Nor., open 3 (3 unlighted); Amat., 2 (1 unlighted); Yorks., open 4. Amat. 2 (1 unlighted); Dutch Frills, 1; A.O.V., 1; Mules, 3; Brit. 8 (1 Amat.); For., 2; Sell. 2 (the limit in amateur classes is £2). Prizes, 10s. 5s., 2s. 6d. Fee 1s. 6d. Ent. close 11th Oct. Judge, C. F. Halliday, 58 George Street.

Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give in addition a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and a morsel of banana or green salad three times a week. In the water add twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn for three consecutive days, and after this give five drops each of oxymel of squills, tincture of lobelia, ipecacantha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a fortnight.

A WEAK GRIP (F. Cooper).—It is not very unusual for birds to show some weakness of grip on the perch at some stage of the moult, and it is due to tenderness owing to more or less peeling of the scales rather than rheumatism, as you fancy. Bathe the feet once daily for a day or two in a warm solution of boracic acid—a small teaspoonful of the acid in a saucer of warm water. After bathing a few minutes, dry, and anoint gently with Lanocyllin ointment. This will quickly remove the apparent weakness. You may also dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea in its drinking water for two days.

YORKSHIRES DYING (E. Hight).—A post-mortem is really the only certain means of eliciting the true cause of death after the event. The symptoms you name are very suggestive of broncho-pneumonia, which might arise from a chill due to a sudden change of weather, or even, at this season, in certain birds, from too vigorous bathing. Assuming this was the cause of your birds' deaths, you could have done very little for them. The only rational treatment would have been to remove birds at once to a quite warm temperature, offer a diet of bread and milk, with a little maw seed, add 30 drops of brandy to each ounce of drinking water, and leave the rest to Nature. The outlook is rarely hopeful in these cases.

A WINTER LAYER (Craig Hill).—It is not very unusual for a hen to go on laying at intervals during the autumn and winter, and the present autumn is not likely to reduce the number of these prolific specimens. In reply to your questions: (1) It is merely a phase of abnormal prolificacy. (2) It depends upon the individual and the amount of excessive production whether it is harmful. It is not often that harm would accrue in a strong, robust hen. (3) Put on a quite plain diet, give plenty of space for exercise, add a pinch of Epsom salts to the water occasionally, keep all nesting facilities and material out of reach, and, preferably, keep hen out of sight and bearing of male birds.

CANARY SEED (R. C. C.).—The sample of canary seed sent is very clean, well ripened and sweet, and of good quality throughout except in size, which is very small indeed. Still, it is quite suitable for any class of stock, the only drawback of its small size being an undue proportion of husk when using large quantities, which renders it less economical.

VARIED (Threë Queries, C. A. Y.).—(1) I take it the birds were quite through the moult when you moved them to the new house, which is probably a little colder than the one they were accustomed to previously. The following treatment will, in that case, soon stop the renewed moulting. In addition to your staple seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana and half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats. Also dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry (two tablespoonfuls), add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give twenty drops of this mixture in the drinking water every second day. Continue this treatment until a few days after the birds cease dropping feathers. (2) Yes, it will be quite safe to cut back the overgrown tip of the upper mandible to a normal length. Hold bird's head securely between the thumb and first finger of left hand and nip off the overgrowth with a sharp pair of nail or embroidery scissors held just up to tip of lower mandible. (3) The value of linseed in a seed mixture for Canaries, if for regular use, is negative, when not actually harmful. During the latter part of the moult it is useful in small proportions in a mixture intended for occasional use, as it helps to repair the extra drain on the system, and tends to add lustre and polish to the new plumage. Used similarly, it is also sometimes useful for birds kept in cold places during exceptionally severe weather. But for general or regular use it is best left alone, being far too oily and fattening.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

THRUSH IN AVIARY (J. Brocks).—You omitted to send your address, according to rule; perhaps you will let us have it on a post-card. The breeding of insectivorous birds in confinement has not been attended with a great deal of success, chiefly because of the difficulty experienced in giving them suitable food to rear the young. Although birds in captivity feed readily upon farinaceous food, they require a considerable quantity of live insects to induce them to rear their young successfully. If you think you can manage the feeding, there is no reason why you should not have a try to breed them. Remember your chances of success are influenced more by the behaviour of the hen bird than the cock, so I would advise you to secure a young hand-reared specimen, and keep her as tame as possible during the winter months. A rough bundle of branches will do admirably as a site for the nest; place it in a quiet corner of the aviary and put in an old Thrush's nest, at the same time giving moss, Grass stalks, etc., for building purposes. If you decide to have a try to breed them and require any further information you had better write again in the early spring.

EXHIBITING WHITETHROAT AND BULLFINCH (A. W.).—The Lesser Whitethroat makes quite a nice bird for exhibition purposes, but its chances of success are not particularly rosy if it should be unfortunate and have to compete against much rarer birds, but you should not be disappointed if you possess a good specimen, he would be sure to get noticed somewhere. Some judges are rather partial to them. The Lesser Whitethroat is a very active bird, and I always fancy he shows himself off in a fairly large cage, say, one 14 inches long, 11 high and 6 deep. The food and water vessel should be inside, and be on swing doors let into the front rail. The colour of the bird and interior should be a rather bright one, midway in tone between the very dark and the light. I have seen one bird exhibited in a cage with a dead white background, and although they appear large against it. It is at the expense of loss of colour and gives seeming harshness to the feather. (2) If your Bullfinch is a genuine house mounted bird you must exhibit him in the class provided for them. The fact of his legs being dark is not unusual in a first year house-mounted bird; they will get lighter each succeeding year. You should also remember that no stands a much better chance of success against house-mounted birds than against field-mounted, especially in the early part of the season. You can rely upon the judge recognising your bird as a house-mounted specimen.

BIRDS BARE OF FEATHERS (F. C. Lockwood).—In your letter you say your birds have failed to grow their feathers and are "hopping about quite naked." If this is a literal statement of facts I must say I have never met with a case quite like yours. Some time ago I was called in to see a collection of birds that were bare of feathers in certain parts; naked looking, but not quite naked. Upon catching one of them I found it infested with grey lice, which were destroying the feathers as they grew; and I fancy this must be your trouble, for although birds may bath freely they cannot get rid of them, as they hide in the down of the feathers; and when a bird bathes it is only the exterior parts of the plumage that get wet. If you find I am correct your best plan will be to catch up the birds, two or three at a time, and thoroughly wash them with soap and water, as is done for exhibition, and then place them in perfectly clean cages, keeping them away from the others until all have been treated, when the aviary should receive a thorough cleaning either by scrubbing with soap and disinfectant or by fumigation. (2) Your feeding appears to be quite in order as regards staple food, but a little mixed seed twice a week would no doubt be acceptable and make a nice change for them. Sunflower is also a capital food for birds flying in an aviary.

WHAT SEED? (Tug).—I am sorry I am unable to give you the name of the seed of which you send a sample. I notice it among the collection of wild seeds that I purchase for my birds, and will look out for it when I am collecting in the fields, and should I detect it I will include it in my answers; perhaps you will watch these notes. In examining the seeds left by the birds I do not notice any similar to those you sent, so it is evident they are fond of it. I should think a spoonful to each bird given two or three times a week would be quite sufficient.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

GOING BLIND (A. M. Walker).—This is a case which can only be dealt with after an examination, especially as the bird has already lost the sight of one eye. There is nothing for you to do but call in some local vet. to make an examination to ascertain whether the sight can be saved or not. If the sight cannot be saved then you had better let the vet. destroy it for you. A cold in the eye or local inflammation can be dealt with through the post, though not such a case as yours. Perhaps it would be better for you to take the bird to some vet. who has made actual study of bird diseases, and I should be interested to know his dictum, if you will kindly drop me a line per the Editor.

LOST ITS FEATHERS (S. W. Smith).—Before I give you a full reply I must ask you for more details, such as: how long has it been in this condition? Is its condition the result of either feather-eating, or feather-pulling, or do the feathers merely drop out and are not replaced? If you have given me the whole of your dietary it is not varied enough, at the same time you must not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, nor yet any kind of animal food. Supply, in addition to the seed-mixture, ripe fruit (any kind it will take), nuts (shelled walnuts as good as any), stale crusts or biscuit, a little plain cake—either of the three last items may be thinly spread with Scott's Cod-liver Oil Emulsion. Grit, cuttlebone, and pieces of wood with the bark on should be regularly supplied. Put one teaspoonful of Dinnford's magnesia into the drinking water and repeat the dose after an interval of three days. When writing again state what kind of Parrot yours is.

GREEN PARROT (N.S.).—I am afraid you must let a vet. see your birds if the growths are on the side of the tongue, but you give me no idea of their extent. If they are only sores in the form of small spots, full of matter, treat them by putting in its mouth a little honey and borax once or twice daily till they disappear. The honey and borax can be administered either by letting the bird bite it from the end of a stick, or smearing it on the tongue with a feather; whichever is used it must be cleansed each time before putting it again in the mixture. The bird's system is altogether out of order, and the heat and inflammation of the legs and feet are the result of this. Give one teaspoonful of Dinnford's magnesia in the drinking water, sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving freely without there being any appearance of chronic diarrhoea. Half a teaspoonful of syrup of hypophosphites in the drinking water on the days you are not giving the magnesia will help the bird. If you can handle the bird bath its legs and feet in quite hot water, dry with a soft cloth, and then paint with brandy or whisky; a mop camel-hair brush is best to use for the purpose. Do not give tea, coffee or milk-sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food. Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, pieces of stale household bread, plain cake and biscuit, form a sufficiently varied dietary for most groups of Parrots. Report progress in about a fortnight, and then state whether your bird has a long or short tail—I shall then know which group it belongs to.

LEAVING BIRDS OUTSIDE (Mowgli).—The birds you name will be quite safe outside for another week or two in any case, and before I answer your query I must ask you to give a short description of your aviary, size of flight and shelter separately, and also the aspect of the aviary. It is quite impossible to give you a helpful reply without the above details. However, I think it would be safer to take indoors the Cordon Bleus and Lavender Finches and keep them in a roomy cage, at any rate for this, their first winter in this country.

FEATHER-PICKER (M.D.).—I am afraid you have made a very bad bargain in purchasing such a bird, for once a bird becomes confirmed in the habit (vice) of feather-pulling it is but seldom a cure is effected, and in any case it is a long and trying operation. Diet the bird as advised in the "Nutshell." Every fourth day put one teaspoonful of Dinnford's Magnesia in the drinking-water, and on other days half a teaspoonful of syrup of hypophosphites. Paint the bare parts with Spratts' "Pennaqura," but only put on lightly, not using sufficient to run among and materially grease the plumage. If the bird will eat either a piece of household bread, biscuit, or plain cake, lightly moisten with chilled water whichever it fancies most, and then dust with flour of sulphur; give it a piece so treated twice a day. Also supply a piece of either of the above thinly spread with Scott's Cod-liver Oil Emulsion once a day if you can induce it to take it. Treat it so for about a month and then report progress.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

R. V. Wagner.—We quite appreciate your point of view, but we are afraid the "treatment" you mention would be of no service in the great majority of cases.

Manco.—Birds travelling on approval are at the risk of the owner. If a death or deaths occur owing to any delay or neglect on the part of the railway company, he can claim up to 5s. per bird from them; more, of course, if the birds were insured to their full value. The person receiving the birds on approval must naturally use care in returning them—i.e., properly pack and label them, and forward by the best route; in neglect of doing so he could be held liable to pay the value of any birds lost.

POST MORTEM.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

J.E.C.—Budgerigar was egg-bound, but in addition had extensive pneumonia lesions. There was no sign of infectious disease.

P. Linn.—Canary died as the result of liver disease. This organ had undergone fatty degenerative changes, was soft and friable. It is sometimes of dietetic origin, sometimes of a contagious nature, excrement of affected birds carrying the contagion, the latter cause I rather suspect from the previous history of the case. I would advise you to institute a method of disinfection, and to isolate any apparently affected birds, whilst paying particular attention to cleanliness.

Loose netting, specially knitted for bird catching, same as used in above nets, 2in. mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Specially strong netting, for use on rough ground and making Sparrow nets, 2in. mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 ins., 1/2; ditto, 18 by 14 ins., 1/4 each, post free. Please note, my net traps have no old-fashioned board arrangement about them, they are by far the most effective traps on the market, and can be baited for hard and softbills at same time, and call-bird may be used inside them if desired; single trap cages, 6d.; double ditto, 1/-; treble ditto, 1/3 each; the above trap cages all have separate compartment for call bird in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each; genuine Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to catch and hold any bird to Rock size in every weather, 1lb. 6d., 1lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 3d.; all post free. Sparrow nets, on 19 feet bamboo poles, 6/6 complete; flint pegs, 8d. each, post free; absolutely everything required by catchers always in stock; send stamp for complete list, which also gives hints on net making. Practically every professional bird catcher in the kingdom gets his living with articles supplied by me, and what they think of them the following letter will show:—"Sutton Rookery, near Long Sutton, Wisbech, Sept. 9.—Sir,—Last season I caught 400 cock Linnets in 5 hours, and averaged 107 cocks per day right through the season, and every bird was caught in nets supplied by you. I have had other nets for 16 years, but they are useless compared with yours. I can catch more Linnets in one day in your nets than I can in any other I have (and I have several makes) in a month. Your nets do not frighten the birds like others do and I get my living during catching season with nets, so I require the best. Yours are the best that are made, and not only best but cheapest. I shall want another in about a week.—Yours, J. C. Ball." (Mr. Ball claims to be the largest catcher in a county noted for its catchers (Lincolnshire), so he certainly knows what he is talking about.—W. Gore.) The above letter may be inspected here at any time, and I offer £10 to anyone that can prove that this or any other testimonial I have ever published is not genuine and unsolicited. (1828)

A few good birds at reasonable prices on show in selling classes at L. and P.O.S. Show, Lambeth Baths, next Wednesday and Thursday.—J. W. Ramsden, Brixton. (Advt.) Mr. J. Ainsworth, the new hon. sec. of Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.S., writes that schedules for the open show, to be held Nov. 13, 14, are now ready, and a copy will be sent on application. Mr. Ainsworth's address is 13, Vaughan-st., Shildon.

Please state in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, that owing to the War all meetings of the Southend and Dist. C.B.S. will be held at Mr. Cundy's house, 5, Priory Avenue, Prittlewell, until further notice; as our headquarters close at 9 o'clock.—G. Deer and F. Cundy, hon. secs.

Bird lovers in the London district should not forget the London and Provincial O.S. Show next Wed. and Thurs. in the Lambeth Baths, Kennington Rd., S.E. The hall is readily accessible by bus and tram, and there will be a pleasing display of high quality birds.

In connection with the Purley Literary Society, writes Mr. E. C. Last, a lecture is to be given by Mr. A. Silver, F.Z.S., in the Lecture Hall, High Street, Purley, on Tuesday next, Oct. 27. It will be illustrated by some 30 odd lantern slides, entitled "Birds with Character," and is quite free. Any fanciers will be welcomed.

A Prominent Fancier Volunteers. Mr. Geo. Oglethorpe, chairman of the Cockermouth Society, has volunteered for service in the 5th Batt. Border Regt. His two sons and his brother are also in the forces. It is hoped by the local fanciers that Mr. Oglethorpe's services will be available on the day of the show, Nov. 28.

Room for More. Respecting my offer to take in birds (note announcement on this page—Editor) it is most kind of you to help me, writes the Hon. Mrs. Bourke. Birds are coming in, a few, but I have room for lots more, and hope to be of some use to those who are forced to go away from home, but who do not want to disperse their birds.

Deserving Manchester. For the one-day show on Oct. 31st, the Manchester and N.C.O.S. puts a grand classification (88 classes) before fanciers, and we trust this will meet with the generous support it so clearly deserves. All sections are well catered for, and there are 6 special amateur classes in both Yorks. and Nor. The prize-money is liberal, and three good judges officiate, while extra judges will be engaged if the entry warrants. Make your entries at once to Mr. F. Hayward, 21, Marlborough Avenue, Manley Park, Manchester.

WONDERFUL SUCCESS OF SHOWS CONTINUES

Liverpool puts up a Great Record, and Skelmanthorpe has More Birds than Ever Before.

It is extremely gratifying to be able to record the fact that those shows which have been courageous enough to boldly face the situation arising-out of the deplorable war crisis continue to be magnificently supported by exhibitors. At Skelmanthorpe (the 3rd Yorkshire Union Show of the season) the society had more birds staged than ever before in its history. To-day, just as we go to press, comes the following cheerful telegram from the officials of Liverpool Show:—
Our Record Broken. We have 1,250 entries. Norwich and British sections wonderful. Our sincere thanks to all who have stood by us.—Metcalfe and Green, show managers, Liverpool O.S.
Keep up the good work, exhibitors. Remember that the societies are doing their best under circumstances of unusual difficulty to help fanciers and the Fancy. Do your part by sending them entries.

Mr. Thos. Holt, Rochdale, asks us to notify that he has removed from Osborne Street to 11, Sharrocks, Newbold Street.

Additional societies to cancel their 1914 shows are: Dunfermline and W. of Scotland O.S., Gateshead C.B.S.

Members of the Newcastle-on-Tyne C.B.S., writes Mr. J. W. Reed, Sec., should note that there will be another special meeting at Shield's Cafe, Bigg Market, on Oct. 29, for final selection of judges and to receive overdue subs.

All prize money to non-members at our recent show, writes Mr. T. J. Hose, Hon. Sec., Clapham C.B.A., has been paid, and we desire to thank all fanciers who, by sending their birds and attending the show, helped to make our venture such a grand success, our only regret being that we were unable to hold our usual annual two day show.

We hear that owing to a severe accident to Mr. Capell, Messrs. Hudd and Robert have undertaken to carry out the arrangements for the 5th annual members' show, at Public Hall, George Street, Croydon, Nov. 4. All communications should be addressed to them at 41, Rymer Road, Croydon. Every effort is being made to obtain a record entry and attendance, and it is to be hoped this object will be achieved, as part proceeds from sale of tickets will be devoted to War Fund.

At our next meeting, on Tuesday, Oct. 27, at headquarters, Textile Dining Room, Shaw Road, writes Mr. J. Cope, sec. Oldham C.B.A., we shall be pleased to see all fanciers as it is time we had a proper meeting. Seeing that our show is so near at hand we are desirous that all fanciers will put their shoulder to the wheel and try to make it a success. Schedules will be ready for next meeting.

Mr. Tyson, having accepted the position of show manager, and Mr. Dewhurst having undertaken the staging of the exhibits, they have decided to relinquish their appointments to judge at the Royal Horticultural Hall Show. Mr. J. Robson has been appointed in place of Mr. Tyson, and Mr. A. Silver will take Mr. Dewhurst's classes.

I have decided to accept entries for the L. and P.O.S. show on Oct. 28 and 29, up to last post on Saturday (24th) writes Mr. C. W. Law. As copy for catalogue will be in printer's hands first post on Monday morning, all entries received on Monday will be returned. Entries coming in well; expect very big show. All visitors may obtain luncheons and teas, at reasonable prices, and in a private room (on mentioning bird show) at "The Hercules Hotel," opposite Westminster Bridge Tube Station, about three minutes' walk from Lambeth Baths.

FOR BIRD-KEEPERS JOINING THE COLOURS.

Generous Offer by a Well-known Lady Bird-lover.

A lady offers a temporary home for the pet bird or birds of men called away owing to the War. The birds will be fed and looked after free of charge by skilled fanciers until the end of the War. Any kinds will be taken in (Parrot tribe only excepted), insectivorous and fruit-eating British or foreign species having preference, though there will be room for seed-eaters and a certain number of Canaries as well.
A formal receipt will be given in exchange for each bird left or sent, which will have its owner's name and address attached to its cage, and the birds will be given up on production of the receipt at any time.
Anyone intending to forward birds to be looked after is requested to send a postcard, stating kind of bird or birds it is proposed to send, and whether they have been kept in a cold or a warm room; and immediately they receive an answer to say there is still accommodation available, the birds can be sent or brought to the Hon. Mrs. Bourke, 75, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, London, W.

Twitterings.

Mr. H. Jackson, sec., writes that the Gainsboro' and Dis. C.B.S. will give the proceeds of the annual show to the Belgian Relief Fund. At a meeting of the Middleton C.B.S., Oct. 12, writes Mr. Jas. Hutton, Sec., it was decided to ask Mr. Wm. Hardy, of Oldham, to judge our Backend show, Dec. 5. We have fixed our annual members' show, with an open Linnets class included, for Nov. 28 and 29, writes Mr. R. Charleson, sec. Leigh C.B.S. Mr. Chas. Houlton, St. Helen's, judge. Schedules for the show of the Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. Show, Nov. 6-7, have been sent out. Anyone overlooked should apply to the sec., A. Freestone, 79, Clarendon St., Leicester.

OBITUARY.

MR. J. CROWTHER (Halifax).
It is with regret, writes Mr. A. Sutcliffe, Sec. Halifax C.B.S., that I report the death of one of our members, Mr. Joe Crowther, of New Pelton, Halifax, at the age of 55, which took place very suddenly on Oct. 14. He was taken home from his work and died within an hour. He was interred on Oct. 17 at Mount Tabor. Mr. Crowther was very highly respected by all, and his loss will be felt by all our members. To Mrs. Crowther and family every member will, I am sure, extend deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

The Bowling and Dis. B.F.A. will hold its first old bird show on Oct. 24, at the Napoleon Hotel, Wakefield-road, judge, Mr. C. E. Walker. Birds staged at 3, writes Mr. Joseph Nicholl, Sec.

There are more people writing me for schedules than I can reply to, writes Mr. Thomson, Sec., Larkhall C.B.A. The show is confined to members only, except for the one open class mentioned in the advt. in this issue.

Easy Money From Mealworm Breeding.

Another Profitable German "Side-line" We Ought to Annex.

LAST week we expressed the opinion that the present season would turn out to be an excellent one for British bird breeders, as, owing to the dislocation of German trade, there would be a vastly increased demand for English song-birds (especially Canaries) to supply the American markets.

We see no reason why this should not be permanent, for the average English Canary is a very much more taking bird than the average German Canary—larger, more pleasing in colour, and with a song that does not tend to monotony, like the artificial trills of the cheap German songster. Our view is that once the English singing Canaries get well-known abroad, they must on their merits more than hold their own.

Always out for Money.

It must be candidly admitted that in more ways than one British fanciers have allowed the Germans to get ahead. It would, perhaps, be fairer to say "keep" ahead, for that they always have been ahead in Fancy matters—particularly so as regards fostering and encouraging the Fancy as a profitable industrial "side-line"—cannot be questioned. The German peoples have ever been great bird fanciers and breeders, and they have brought the art of keeping and breeding birds to a high pitch of perfection. We would emphasise, too, that they have developed the money-making (i.e., trade) side of the hobby to an extent which fanciers on this side of the North Sea do not fully appreciate.

As an instance, we have the fact that the live ants' "eggs," which the majority of our dealers sell during the summer come to us from Germany; the same with large quantities of our dried ants' eggs. It is safe to assume that we pay over a nice little profit out of our pockets for these indispensable items.

The Case of the Mealworm.

A much more extraordinary example, however, is supplied by the manner in which Germany dominates our supply of mealworms. The importance of these larvae to bird-keepers needs no pointing out by us; that they materially affect other branches of live-stock keeping, too, is made clear by the remarks of Mr. D. Seth-Smith, F.Z.S., M.B.O.U. (a curator of the London Zoological Gardens), which, at the conclusion of our own observations, we have printed as they appeared in our contemporary, "The Field."

The business in mealworms is to our knowledge a considerable one. Yet we leave it in German hands practically in its entirety. The result at the moment is just what might be anticipated—a "famine" in mealworms. Dealers cannot get them; consequently fanciers cannot get them.

We are receiving many letters from bird-keepers, asking where mealworms are to be bought. We cannot give any certain reply; frankly, we do not know. If anyone who reads this has any quantity of mealworms for sale, we advise advertising them; a remunerative price is to be obtained. We heard recently of 12s. being paid for one pound; normally the price is 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d.!

We will return to this subject next week.

Mr. D. Seth-Smith's Views.

One of the most useful articles of food in a collection of insectivorous mammals, birds and reptiles, is the small grub known as the mealworm, which is about an inch in length, with shiny yellowish skin. It is the larva of a small blackish-brown beetle known to entomologists as Tenebrio molitor. It occurs wherever meal of any kind is allowed to lie undisturbed for a length of time.

The flying beetle appears and lays its eggs amongst the meal, and from these hatch minute larvae which feed upon the meal, be it oatmeal, barley-meal, wheat-meal, or even biscuits. In a cool temperature they grow slowly, but warmth appears to accelerate growth considerably. When full grown they change into pupae, which in turn emerge into beetles.

A Luxury Not to be Resisted.

This little beetle in its larval state forms, as is well known, useful food for almost any animal that is naturally insectivorous. It is a luxury that cannot be resisted even by such creatures as monkeys, while for the insectivorous birds and reptiles it forms a food that the shyest feeders will readily take. Hence the amount of mealworms that are annually consumed in England alone is very large, since the number of those who may be termed "amateur menagerie keepers" is constantly increasing, and considerable quantities are required by public zoological gardens.

One result of the lamentable European war is the complete stoppage of the supply of mealworms, for it appears that the stock in this country was all "made in Germany." The Germans have long been experts in the production of foods for cage birds, and realising the value of the mealworm, they set to work to cultivate it under artificial conditions, with the result that they established a large and doubtless very lucrative business.

A mealworm farm in Germany, which paid its proprietor very handsomely, has been described to me. It consisted of a number of sheds or barns, artificially warmed, which covered an area of no less than 10 acres. Each barn was furnished with a series of large bins or boxes, in which was placed a quantity of bran and various kinds of meal. This was formed into layers between pieces of sacking and paper.

An All-Year-Round Supply.

A quantity of mealworms was placed in each bin, and these soon went through the pupal stage to that of the mature beetle, which laid numbers of eggs, which in turn produced a large number of mealworms. The worms mature slowly, as stated, some months elapsing, under the most favourable conditions, between the hatching of the worm and its attainment to full size, when it is ready for market.

I am told that the German breeders are able to arrange, by starting the various bins in succession, so that a large supply of the full-fed mealworms is available every week in the year. They sell at about five shillings a pound over here, a price which is considerably below that demanded some few years ago, but one that still leaves a large profit for the producer.

Surely now is the time for some enterprising Englishman to start a mealworm farm. The demand is constant and considerable, and the profits should be large.

"Lights Out" in London.

A Suggestion to Show Officials.

SIR,—I am glad to see that the Horticultural Hall Show is to be held as usual. I should like to make one suggestion to the authorities, namely, that they close the show not later than 8 o'clock on the last day, so that the exhibitors may be able to remove their birds at a reasonable hour. I notice that the L. and P.O.S. close their show at 7.30 p.m. on the last day. With the "Lights Out" order in force, and London practically in darkness after 10 o'clock, I think it is to the interests of all concerned that the show be closed by that hour. I am sure that an announcement of early closing will result in an increased entry.

Splendid Help from Liverpool.

SIR,—At our meeting held Oct. 7 we decided to help your scheme (Canaries to cheer our wounded soldiers in hospital) and six of our members each offered a Canary and cage, and at our next meeting we hope to be able to place a few more at your disposal.

It was our members' wish that these Canaries should be distributed, if possible, at our local hospitals, as we have many wounded soldiers at Fazakerley. Our members only want to contribute through CAGE BIRDS.

The North Liverpool and Dis. C.B.S.

[We are deeply indebted to the members of the North Liverpool C.B.S. for their very generous assistance of our scheme, and we shall, of course, endeavour to carry out their wishes respecting the disposal of birds.—Editor "C.B."]

Do Elder Berries Make Birds Drunk?

SIR,—During the present moult I have been giving my birds a fairly free supply of elder berries (especially the Blackbirds, Thrushes, Starlings and Bullfinches), and they both like them and moult out well on them. Therefore I was greatly surprised to read the following in the nature notes of the "Manchester Dispatch." Can any reader offer any opinion as to the truth of the statements, personally I think it a lot of nonsense.

A curious effect of the elderberry upon the Wood Pigeon is recorded by a gamekeeper in Denbigh. In passing through a clearing of a wood he found a couple of Wood Pigeons lying apparently dead under an elder tree.

He picked up the birds and found they were alive, but both suffering from the effects of what he termed "berry poisoning."

This is by no means a new discovery, for the doping of birds by the berries of this shrub has been recorded on many occasions, Blackbirds and Thrushes being the greatest sufferers.

The berries have been plentiful, and their rich ripe juice is a morsel which very few birds can resist. Over indulgence produces a state of affairs similar to that of alcoholic drinks upon human beings.

Wood Pigeons, especially in districts bordering upon the moorland, eat the berries greedily and pay the penalty by falling easy victims to passers by.

What Are the South Country Specialist Clubs Doing?

SIR,—I should like to ask: What are the Southern specialist clubs doing? Have they all abandoned their programmes, patronage to shows, etc.? Personally I have failed to see any notice in the press or received intimation that such is the case. I think, with many others, they should give some encouragement to their members; also support shows and societies who are endeavouring to keep the Fancy going during these depressing times. As a suggestion, why not give money specials to their members supporting these shows, which I am sure would be to our mutual interest, thus encouraging societies to "Business as Usual"? I should like some of your readers to express their views on this question.

"BUSINESS AS USUAL."

Good News for Bucks Fanciers.

SIR,—At the meeting of the High Wycombe and Dis. F.S., last Saturday evening, it was unanimously decided to continue with the business appertaining to our annual show on Dec. 29, open to the County of Bucks and 20 mile air line of Wycombe Town Hall. Our section will have 16 classes, and Mr. Geo. Gardner was elected to place the awards. As this seems practically to be the only show in the country this season we trust members and other exhibitors in the radius, will rally round and give us a bumping entry again.

T. BOWLER.

80, New Street, Aylesbury. Gateshead Will Run a One Day Show.

SIR,—At our meeting, held Oct. 14, we cancelled our annual show, but decided to run a one-day show instead on Dec. 19. We hope to get the support of the Fancy. Our members will reap no benefit, as there will be no members' classes, (we find that we cannot get a hall large enough) so you will see

The Welsh National Cage Bird Society.

SIR,—If you will refer back in your valuable journal (of which I have carefully kept each issue from the first to date) you will find that there is already a Welsh National C.B.S., and successful shows (as shows) were held under that title. Further, I have by me a receipt as loan (unredeemed) value £10, also another somewhere about £2, and though I have been unable to mix with the Fancy for some time, I have yet to learn that the original Welsh National C.B.S. has been disbanded.

HARRY CREEBER.

The Curious Record of a Norwich Hen.

SIR,—It may interest your readers to know that one of my Norwich Canary hens had six nests this year. She laid four eggs in her first nest and hatched out one young one on Monday, April 4. When the young one was two days old the cock bird killed it. She quickly went to nest again, but all the eggs were clear. I thought I would try her once more, but she deserted the eggs about two days before she was due to hatch. Being annoyed, as they were a good pair of birds, I gave the cock bird away as a singer, and I lent the hen to a man who had only one bird, a cock. She quickly went to nest again and hatched four young ones out of four eggs. After that she laid four eggs again, and hatched three young ones. Still she went to nest once again, and laid three eggs! The last nest hatched out on Monday, September 14th, so she reared ten young ones, and she laid 23 eggs. D. R. SAPPWELL.

Paisley to Hold Its Scots Fancy Show.

SIR,—You might oblige by stating that the Paisley and Dist. O.A. Scotch Fancy Show will be held, although cancelled on Oct. 3. The Committee have decided to hold it on Nov. 28. Particulars will appear later in your advertising columns, so Scotch fanciers keep your eye on Paisley.

A Show for Mid-Derbyshire.

SIR,—The members of the Alfreton and Dist. C.B.S. have decided to run the show on Oct. 31, as agreed upon, in spite of difficulties. Prize-money will be on the sliding scale, and entry fee 1s. per cage. As this is the only society holding a show in Mid-Derbyshire, we are expecting a good entry. Entries close Oct. 28. Aberdeen Will Carry on as Usual.

SIR,—At a meeting of the Aberdeen Amalgamated C.B.S. held on Oct. 13, it was decided to cancel the young bird show (Nov. 28) but to carry on the open show as usual, on Dec. 18 and 19, with the judges as formerly selected, viz., Mr. James Smeaton (Musselburgh) and Mr. Wm. Bishop (Stirling). I appeal to fanciers to give us their whole-hearted support, without which we cannot hope to make it a success. After paying all expenses, all money left over from the show will be handed to the Red Cross Society.

Glasgow's Big November Show.

SIR,—At the meeting of the Glasgow and Dist. C.B.A. on Oct. 13, Mr. J. F. Park presiding over a good attendance, the sec. reported that the military authorities would not guarantee use of Drill-Hall. Various halls had been under consideration in view of this eventuality, and it was decided to hold show this year on Nov. 20 and 21 in the Union Halls, West Nile Street, Glasgow. This hall, though not so large as Drill Hall, is very comfortable, lighted from the top, and is within two or three minutes' walk from Glasgow's principal stations. The classification is on similar lines to last year—20 Nor. classes, 5 Crests, 10 Bord., 10 Yorks., 7 Mule and Hyb., and 22 Brit. and For. The Association has been successful in obtaining the patronage of all the specialist clubs, except the Crest Club. Prize-money as formerly: 30s per class, 2s. entry. The Committee trust and hope that the Fancy in general will second their efforts in their endeavour to keep going "Business as Usual" in these strenuous times.

A Food Recipe Wanted.

The Rung Bullfinch Caught Near Pickering.

Sir,—I had a cutting from CAGE BIRDS given to me with the report of a Bullfinch having been caught near Pickering wearing an Aberdeen University Bird Migration ring, number 228.M. It may be of interest to the catcher to know that the bird, a young one in the nest, was rung at Thornton Dale on the 5th of June. I should be much obliged if the catcher could furnish me with the following information: Where was the bird caught, and on what date?

It might be of interest to readers of CAGE BIRDS to know that a Lesser Tern, rung at Kilssea, near Hull, in July, was captured in the South of Portugal early in September.

V. G. F. ZIMMERMANN.

Do Parent Birds Poison Their Young?

Sir,—I would like to say in reference to "Do parent birds poison their young?" that I have at this moment a young Blackbird which was caught just as he "fell" out of the nest for the first time, and put in a large box cage and hung up in the wood, when the old birds reared him (not poisoned him). Now he has nearly finished molting and is turning out to be a fine cock. The reason the young ones die is that those who cage them forget that young birds of all species start to pick about the floor of the cage at a very early stage. If they cannot find anything else they will pick up their own droppings. Put food and water in to them when they are very young, change that food and water at least every day, and no one will have the slightest trouble in getting reared almost any British bird which is kept in a cage.

E. J. SOUTHWOOD.

Going Light and its Cure.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Robson. I do not claim the following treatment to be the "one and only way" of combating "going light," and I may add "wheezing," but since I adopted my present system of feeding, those two scourges of some bird rooms have left mine severely alone. After various experiments, the details of which I need not trouble to relate, I feed as follows: I use a seed mixture which is supposed to contain 15 varieties. But I should advise anyone who adopts this treatment, to adhere to, at least for a commencement, the seed they are in the habit of using. Scraps of bread I rebake and put through a coarse mill, and to each quart of crumbs add two table spoons of cod liver oil. Mix thoroughly and store in a glass or earthenware vessel. Take equal measures of seed and crumbs (as prepared), mix well, and stand for 7 or 8 days if not required for immediate use. Place sufficient of the mixture for one feed in a clean vessel, add sufficient milk to just cover the mixture; stand for 24 hours and feed ad lib. I give my birds (Canaries) dry canary seed, but they eat very little of it. Whether this food would suit "tip-top" show birds I am not in a position to state. However, where health and vivacity are paramount I have no hesitation in recommending it.

STEPHEN C. RHODES.

Sir,—If Mr. G. Robson writes us we will give him some information that will lead to curing his birds when going light.

Bradford National Date Altered.

Details of the Classification.

Sir,—The Committee of the Bradford National Charity Show have decided to stick to Britain's motto, "Business as Usual," and run their show, realising that the need at the present time is even greater than in former years. Seeing that all the proceeds of our show go to alleviate the suffering of poor and destitute children, and in some measure provide for their needs, we are hopeful that the combined efforts of the many may benefit the few. Manningham and Bradford West Societies having relinquished their show, it has been arranged to take their date, Nov. 21, and their judges, and have a one day show this year. The revised classification is as follows:—Open Yorks. 20 classes, including two stock bird classes; 4 Yorkshire Green, under the patronage of the Green C.A.; 4 open novice Yorks., 12 novice, confined to members of the Yorkshire Union (10 Yorks and 2 Nor.); 5 British birds and Hybrids; and 3 selling. Full prize-money to be paid—10s., 6s., 4s., and 2s.—also a splendid list of specials, including silver cup for best Yorks. in show, and a special, value £1 1s., for most points gained by an exhibitor outside Yorkshire. Judges: Open Yorks. and Yorks. Greens, Messrs. P. Mason and H. Sutcliffe; Mr. R. Halliday, open novice and selling, and Mr. W. Mundell, Y.U., novice and British and Hybrids. I hope that this first class Yorkshire classification will meet the wishes of exhibitors, and that the show may greatly benefit this very worthy object.

SAM MINGLEY, Hon. Sec.

The Bright Future of Our Hobby.

A Few Hints About Shows.
Sir,—I heartily agree with your remarks under this heading. There is yet plenty of time for those societies that have had to cancel their open shows to hold a show confined to their district. In order to keep the Fancy going I would beg of all societies not to hold a members' show, but to throw competition open to all living in the district, or within a certain radius. Club cups, etc., could, of course, be confined to competition amongst members. I am informed that Continental Finches and German Canaries will be conspicuous by their absence this season. There should, therefore, be a good demand for Britishers and singing Canaries. An extra stock class, with a 3d. or 6d. entry fee, and no prize money, should be added to every classification, to give fanciers an opportunity of disposing of their birds to the best advantage. The hour for closing the shows on the last day should be an early one, especially in London, on account of the early closing or "lights out" order.

J. W. RAMSDEN.

The Suggested Welsh National Show.

Sir,—There must be some Welsh fanciers left. They cannot all have gone to the front. Let us hope that the secretaries of various Welsh societies have been communicating with Mr. Thomas, of Cardiff, and that we shall hear something from him on that point presently. Meanwhile, let others voice their "pros" and "cons" through the medium of CAGE BIRDS. Personally, I am strongly in favour of a Welsh National Show, and will do all I can to help it.

W. F. LLOYD-JAMES.

Sir,—Having read Mr. Banks' suggestion re a Welsh National Cage Bird Show, I think it a grand idea, and trust he will have the necessary support. Though only a novice, I will do my best to support him, as there is no society here. I was astonished to read of the losses which occur at cage bird shows, and it will be up to Mr. Banks to alter it. I should like to recommend to him Mr. Alf. Hitching's suggestion, especially re a weekend show, as it is a shift which is badly needed. The railway company would run an excursion for a football match, and by being able to travel by excursion fare we should all be able to do our little part by paying the show a visit.

J. WILLIAMS.

The Scheme of the Carlisle Fanciers.

Sir,—At the meeting of the Border City (Carlisle) O.S., held at headquarters Oct. 6, a fair number turned up, and the desirability of holding a small show in place of open one—cancelled—was put before the meeting. Last New Year's day we held a local show (confined to our own city and members), and had about 120 cages to place before the judges. This was very satisfactory, and it was proposed that we do the same this year. An amendment was proposed that we make the show open to Cumberland and Westmoreland. On discussion it seemed hard that some good fanciers on the Borders who have supported us in all our last five open shows should be left out, so to the amendment was added, "and a 30-mile radius of Carlisle." This was carried. Therefore all exhibitors in the two counties and those from such places as Haltwhistle, Aunan, Langholm, Lockerbie and Ecclefechan will be able to compete. The prize-money and entrance-fee will be the same as last year, viz., 6s., 3s., 1s. 6d., for 1s. entry; members 9d. entry. With the extension of the radius, of course, the classification will be extended, and we hope to receive the Border Fancy C.C.'s patronage. We decided to allot 8 classes for Borders, and Norwich have 6 classes. The Yorks. classes were left undecided until we hear from secretary of Cumberland and Westmoreland Yorks. C.C. Hybrids 1 class, Brit. 5 classes, and For. 1 class. This should make a creditable little show if fanciers will rally round. It will be held in the Assembly Rooms at our headquarters. The judges were left over to the next meeting. Members note that at September meeting the sub. was reduced to 2s. 6d., and is now overdue.

JOHN BELL, Hon. Sec.

A New Fanciers' Society for Sacriston and District.

Sir,—A meeting was held Oct. 17 on the Woodside Allotments, Sacriston, to form a fanciers' society of poultry, pigeons, rabbits, and cage birds, with a radius for membership of five miles; subscription 2s. 6d. per annum. Silver cups were given for best birds in poultry and pigeon sections shown by a member. Officials: Chairman, Mr. J. Rodgers; treasurer, Mr. Wm. Wright, junr.; hon. sec., Mr. Wm. Dodd; and the committee Messrs. A. Sutherland, J. W. Thirkettle, Jos. Jacobs, Jonathan Kell, Wm. Wright, senr., J. Cambell, and T. Liddle, with power to add. A meeting will be held on Saturday, Oct. 31; time and place in next week's issue. As we have received two good specials, we hope this will greatly help to increase our membership. At our next meeting we will fix a date for our annual show in 1915. I shall be glad to receive names and addresses of fanciers desiring to become members.

The Dogged Determination of the Glasgow and Dist. C.B.A.

Sir,—While so many societies have been compelled to abandon their annual fixtures, and others are endeavouring by various means to carry out shows with a view to keeping up the interest of the Fancy, it will come as a most pleasing surprise to the exhibiting fraternity to learn that the Glasgow and Dist. C.B.A. have, by sheer, dogged determination secured a suitable hall, and will hold their annual show on the usual dates, i.e. the 20th and 21st Nov. The hall (the Union Hall) is very suitable and situated within a few minutes walk from all the principal stations in the city. Few of the champions have had an opportunity of meeting this year yet, and this event will (through the absence of the City Show) be attended with real interest. It is sincerely to be hoped that such an indefatigable body of fanciers as constitute the management will receive the unlimited support they have striven so long and well to merit.

Hamilton's Show in Aid of the War Funds.

Sir,—The fanciers of Hamilton and District, at a meeting held in the Town Hall on Saturday last, decided to run an open show for cage birds on Saturday, the 12th of December, the whole proceeds of which will be handed over, one-half to the Belgian and the other half to the local War Funds. A large Committee representative of the various Fancies has been appointed, with Mr. Walter S. Wilson, "Glendyne," South Park Road, Hamilton, as secretary. Entry money fixed at threepence per bird, and admission to show is by subscription ticket, threepence each, which will entitle each holder to a chance of winning a prize out of a gift class. Decided to make a strong effort to secure prizes for the gift classes and also for the open classes if at all possible, as in consideration of the object in view no money prizes will, of course, be given. Schedules of classification with judges' names, etc., will appear in due course. The Secretary is open to receive contributions of any kind from all fanciers disposed to assist in making this laudable object a real success.

Members held another musical evening, Wed., Oct. 14, when an enjoyable time was spent. Mr. H. James, chair, thanked those who had assisted, and mentioned that a members' show would be held in November, specials being offered in nearly all the classes arranged. The following members and friends assisted towards the success of the evening: Songs, Miss Mantell, Miss Parsons, Messrs. H. James, A. Soble, E. Loomes, B. Burden; gramophone selections, Mr. J. Meeting, Oct. 14. Decided, owing to meeting room being used for Army recruiting purposes on Wednesday evenings, to hold our meetings on alternate Tuesdays. Also schedule of last year to be repeated, with exception of Nor. and Yorks. Greens. We should like to see more members attend meetings, as it is hardly fair for four or five of us who do attend to have the placing of specials left to us to decide. What few members attend are determined to do all in their power to make this show a success, and exhibitors can depend on receiving prize money on Saturday of show.—H. Whitney, Assist. Sec.

Meeting held Thursday evening, Oct. 15, to make final arrangements for Annual Show, Nov. 7, and to put the finishing touches to washing exhibition and competition, at Headquarters, Alhambros, E. India Dock Road, Oct. 29, when Mr. J. Wyatt will give his lecture and exhibition on "Washing Birds for Exhibition," after which a competition has been arranged, open to novice members; no entrance fee; competitors to bring their own birds. Mr. Wyatt has kindly promised a special for the winner. Roll up and make this a success. Friends and fanciers will be heartily welcomed.—F. H. Marhoff, Assist. Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Meeting Marlboro' Hotel, Oct. 14, with a very fair gathering. Mr. Willmott chair. Resolved to ask Mr. Wells to judge the Young Stock Show on Nov. 7, birds to be staged not later than 3.30. The silver cups of the society are for competition at this show; rules and classification as per Young Bird Shows. Arrangements are being made to have a washing exhibition at next meeting, by Mr. G. Russell. The chairman hopes all members will attend. Agreed to have the usual members' show on Dec. 26, Mr. Roe to be invited to judge. Specials will be reserved for this show, and a record lot will be given as well as many novelties to attract entries.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

LEITH O.S.

Meeting, Liberal Club, Hope Street, Oct. 10, Pres. Mr. Lumsden, chair. Arrangements for the working of the forthcoming show on Nov. 14 were made. Agreed to advertise the show in CAGE BIRDS of Nov. 7. Members have been fairly successful in the past breeding season, and everything points to having a grand show, as the birds have moulted well. A novel feature at the show will be the president's little girl dressed in a costume made with CAGE BIRDS' plates, and collecting on behalf of the War Relief Fund. It is hoped fanciers and friends will turn out and support "Good Old Leith," as they can depend on seeing something to speak about. Judges: Scotch Fancy, Mr. J. Carson, Dalkeith; Mr. J. M. Lennan, Edinburgh. Nor., Mr. J. Holmes, Edinburgh. Bord., Mr. T. Arnott, Kirkcaldy; Mr. J. Patterson, Chirnside, Brit., Mr. M'Quiston, Ayr.—George W. Brown.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Special general meeting, held October 7th, at Crown Hotel, Hill Street, with a good attendance, to decide whether the open show should be held. Mr. Broadhurst chair. After a slight discussion, the Chairman proposed that we hold an open show and his proposition was carried practically unanimously. The financial side of the question was then gone into, and the Vice-chairman gave an estimated cost, based on last year's figures. He pointed out that he did not see how we could make the show a success on the old lines this year, owing to the war and consequent difficulty of disposing of admission tickets, etc., but proposed that we charge entry fees of 1s. 6d. for first, and 1s. each succeeding entry from each exhibitor, giving prize-money on sliding scale of 1s. each entry, the odd sixpence to expenses; further to give not the profits, if any, to the Prince of Wales's Fund, but all the gate and admission ticket moneys. In his opinion we should be selling tickets under false pretences if we promised the profit money, because we had yet to make one on an open show. He gave the maximum loss on above plan to be £10, and said the society could stand the expense, and would reap a big reward for its enterprise, if only as an advertisement. The averages per class last year were: Nor. 12s., Nov. 17s., Yorks. 13s., Nov. 17s., Bord. 12s., Sell. 26s., Mules 7s., Brit. 12s., For. 8s., or 17s. throughout the show (47 classes) 12s., so that in several classes exhibitors should gain more prize-money for 1s. entry than previously received for 1s. 6d. The proposition was considered by many members to be too tall, and the vice-chairman withdrew the "100 per cent. admission fees to P.W. Fund," to enable the question of sliding scale to be voted upon, and the result was for the sliding scale. The Vice-chairman then proposed the 100 per cent. admission fees again, but an amendment was carried by a big majority to give 50 per cent. to the P.W. Fund. The same classification as last year was decided upon, but making a £1 limit for Crests and Crestheads. Mr. J. Robson to judge, and Messrs. W. G. Wells and A. Shirley show managers. The Roller members then wanted a turn, and it was carried that a separate open show be held Saturday, December 19th, with seven open classes. Next monthly meeting, Nov. 4, at 8; there will be a lot of business.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec.

Meeting, Y.M. Halls, Oct. 17, President in chair. Final arrangements were made for show. Nominations closing date for young bird cup was extended till closing of entries for this year. Next meeting, Oct. 28, Y.M. Halls. Entries will be taken from 7 p.m. Subscription sheets to be in that night.—A. Thomson, Sec.

CUMBERLAND AND WEST-MORLAND Y.C.C.

Committee meeting, Collee Tavern, Maryport, Oct. 14, a good company present. Decided to grant the patronage of the Union to Carlisle and Whitehaven societies, on condition that they adhere to the Union rules. Also carried that we hold a show at Maryport, on Dec. 26, and that the cup be competed for at Maryport. J. S. Head, Hon. Sec.

COLINTON & CURRIE PARISHES.

Meeting, Village Hall, Juniper Green, Vice-Pres. (Mr. M'Chie) in chair. Sec. had some samples of medals for members to choose from for the Annual Show, and a selection was made. Sec. intimated that Mr. and Mrs. McPherson had kindly consented to present the prizes at the annual show, and a number of special prizes were intimated at the close of the meeting. Jas. Napier, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 8, Mr. Havenhand chair. Unanimously decided to hold our Annual Show as arranged, on Nov. 21. Messrs. G. Browning (Canaries) and P. Walsh (British) being elected to judge. Result of Table Show: Yorks.: 1, 3, Blunt; 2, 4, Eason. GR.: 1, 2, 3, Eason. BRIT. HARDBILL: 1, be, Bearer; 2, 3, 4, vhc. Duce. SOFTBILL: 1, 2, 4, Darlow; 3, Buckley. NOV.: 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc. Jones. Mr. J. Perry judged.—E. Johnson, Sec.

GLASGOW AND W. OF SCOTLAND

Special general meeting, Oct. 8, Nelson Temperance Hotel, Mr. W. Wood (Vice-Pres.) in chair, and a large attendance. The question of having open classes inserted in schedule of Club Show, Nov. 28, was considered. It was the unanimous mind of meeting that open classes be added as follows: Crests: 2, C. Bred 2, Nor. 6, Bord. 5, Yorks. 9 (Yorks. classes under patronage of Y.C.C. of Scotland), Mules 2, Brit. 5; with three money prizes on sliding scale. Entry fee 1/-. Prize cards free.—W. Hutchison, Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Meeting, Graunge Park Hall, Oct. 5, Mr. Bartlett chair. A washing competition was held, and a good muster turned up to this good old annual event. Of the several members who competed each seemed to use a different method, which, however, proved very interesting, and gave rise to a good deal of discussion. The birds having been allowed to dry, Mr. G. East was pronounced the winner. Mr. B. F. Forse acted as judge, and members accorded him a vote of thanks. A number of specials were given for our annual show.—A. W. Farmer, Hon. Assist. Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

General meeting, Oct. 5, headquarters, 21 members present, Mr. Etheridge chair. The question of purchasing cups this year was gone into, and it was unanimously decided to purchase a challenge cup, to be put up for the best unfledged bird of the year (bred and exhibited by a member) and four smaller cups: Best champion Canary, best novice Canary, best British or Mule, and best Foreign. Members regret very much that we are unable to hold our Open Show, but it is impossible owing to the fact that there is not a single hall available. Mr. H. Norman will judge our Members' Show, and I know there will be some good birds on view.—W. L. Page, Hon. Sec.

GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting Oct. 14, Mr. Holden presided over a fair attendance. Decided to cancel our Annual Open Show and all arrangements made in connection with it. A discussion arose whether we should run a Members' Show or have a one day show, and we decided on the latter and to put on 44 classes, and pay 14s. per class for its fee. The show to be held on Dec. 19. Sec. was instructed to write re judging same to Messrs. T. C. Crawhall, J. Johnson, T. B. Tomlinson, G. Dobson, and J. Bertram. The final arrangements were left over until a special meeting, Oct. 27, when rules, etc., will be drawn up. I now appeal to all members, to rally around the society and make this one of the best shows in the annals of the "Palace of the North." Members please note change of meeting night, and also that subs. are now overdue.—W. Curry, Sec.

OPEN NORWICH PLAINHEAD C.C.

Meeting, Market Tavern, Bradford, Oct. 17. Decided to grant patronage to Manchester and Northern Counties O.S., and Huddersfield O.S., making the patronage shows as follows: Manchester and N.C.O.S., Oct. 31; Halifax O.S., Nov. 20, 21; Huddersfield O.S., Dec. 12; Doncaster C.B.S., Jan. 9. We have a few vacancies where we can allot patronage; if societies would like same please apply early. Decided to give four specials in each section: Open and Amateur. If only the above shows were held under the patronage; cups, bowls, etc., competitions would have to be abandoned for this season, but providing we could get a few more societies to accept our patronage we can have all competitions as usual. Members please watch CAGE BIRDS for any alteration or additions.—F. Rhodes, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Meeting, Oct. 14, Lockhart's Cafe, Newcastle. Letter was read from Newcastle C.B.S., applying for our patronage for its members' show, Nov. 14. After a discussion as to whether we should give our patronage to members' shows, it was decided to give three medals to keep the interest of the Crested variety going, as there is only one society having an open show under our patronage. There will be medals for best old bird, best young, and best novice, open to all members of the N.C.C., whether members of Newcastle C.B.S. or not, so don't be afraid to send your entries along. There are eight classes. Should Gateshead C.B.S. not be holding an open show, it was decided to hold our cup patronage in conjunction with Newcastle East End C.B.S., on the same condition as the members', open to all members of the Northern C.C. There are still a few subs. to come, which I would like to receive.—Geo. Dobson, Sec.

CLAPHAM.

A Satisfactory Entry and an Excellent Gate.

Clapham C.B.S. held its Seventh Annual Show, Oct. 15. The first of the London shows this season, naturally the result of the venture was awaited with considerable interest. Entries numbered about 400, which considering that all birds had to be delivered and fetched away by hand, must be considered satisfactory. Some classes were poorly supported, notably the Champion Nor. and Bord.; perhaps the majority of the birds are not yet fit. There were some well filled classes of Yorks., both in champions and novices. We thought Mr. H. Neighbour's bull the pick of the novice section, it was very much admired. Mr. Gedgo staged a grand marked yell. Norwich in the novice section, and Mr. Leech sent a real good buff. British birds came up well, and the majority of them looked exceedingly fit. The foreign section was not large, but very attractive, and especially interesting by the presence of a nice team put down by Mr. Frost, among which was a very perfect Jackson's Whymal and a Dumont's Grackle (Mynah). The latter is a first appearance on the show bench. Mr. Maxwell's exquisite pair of double-collared Sunbirds attracted the attention of everyone. There was a good gathering of London fanciers, who were as keen as ever over the exhibits. The management should do well over the venture, and we have no doubt other societies who have kept going will do equally well. The show committee consisted of the following well known fanciers: Messrs. Phillips, Allen, Snook, Hathaway, Silverthorne, Vale, Yeoman, Warley, and Whitmore, while Mr. T. J. Hose acted as secretary in his usual efficient way, and Mr. A. R. Coo made a splendid and hard-working show manager. Mr. Robson judged Canaries, and Mr. Silver the remainder.

SKELMANTHORPE C.B.A.

Annual exhibition in connection with the Yorkshire Union, Oct. 17, Working Men's Club. The room is an ideal one, being nicely heated and free from draught. The exhibits numbered 274, a record for Skelmanthorpe, and quality was quite up to the standard of Union shows. The Pres., Mr. J. Helliwell, was congratulated on winning the silver cup for best unfledged bird, the winner being the Bristol bowl and Bradford East rose bowl winner, thereby doing the hat trick at the first three Yorkshire Union Shows. Mr. Fred Allen (Cleckheaton) judged and gave satisfaction. The Sec., Mr. Hampshire, assisted by Mr. P. Taylor, got through his duties well, and we understand that all prize-money was paid in the room to winners present. The stewards, led by Messrs. L. Jehson and Hirst, got through the work in a most businesslike manner, all exhibits being returned home in good time. The show was visited by a great number of visitors, and gave great satisfaction to the exhibitors present, and to the society. The novice cup was won by W. Crowther (Halifax).

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of, must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

BUSINESS WITH ME

is not a matter of bubble and squeak; there's no question of cutting down quality to price. My one aim is to supply thoroughly serviceable articles at prices consistent with highest quality; so that intending purchasers may assure themselves of this fact, I send everything I sell on approval on the understanding that if the article is in any way misrepresented by me, or that a better article may be purchased elsewhere at anything like the same money, my goods may be smashed up or destroyed in any manner, and I undertake to refund the whole of the purchase money. Clap nets, made from superfine 3in. mesh netting, 3 yards long, 5 1/2 feet deep, and 4 feet ply, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed of above measurement, and are fitted complete with pegs, poles, and lines, ready for immediate use. Loose netting, specially knitted for bird catching, same as used in above nets, 3in. mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Specially strong netting, for use on rough ground and making Sparrow nets, 3in. mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 21 by 18 ins., 1/2; ditto, 18 by 14 ins., 11d. each, post free. Please note, my net traps have no old-fashioned board arrangement about them, they are by far the most effective traps on the market, and can be baited for hard and softbills at same time, and call-bird may be used inside them if desired; single trap cages, 6d.; double ditto, 1/-; treble ditto, 1/3 each; the above trap cages all have separate compartment for call-bird in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each; genuine Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to catch and hold any bird to Rock size in every weather, 1lb. 6d., 1lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 3d.; all post free. Sparrow nets, on 19 feet bamboo poles, 6/6 complete; bird pegs, 8d. each, post free; absolutely everything required by catchers always in stock; send stamp for complete list, which also gives hints on net making. Practically every professional bird catcher in the kingdom gets his living with articles supplied by me, and what they think of them the following letter will show:—"Sutton Rookery, near Long Sutton, Wisbech, Sept. 9.—Sir,—Last season I caught 400 cock Linnets in 5 hours, and averaged 107 cocks-per day right through the season, and every bird was caught in nets supplied by you. I have had other nets for 16 years, but they are useless compared with yours. I can catch more Linnets in one day in your nets than I can in any other I have (and I have several makes) in a month. Your nets do not frighten the birds like others do and I get my living during catching season with nets, so I require the best. Yours are the best that are made, and not only best but cheapest. I shall want another in about a week.—Yours, J. C. Ball." (Mr. Ball claims to be the largest catcher in a county noted for its catchers (Lincolnshire), so he certainly knows what he is talking about.—W. Gore.) The above letter may be inspected here at any time, and I offer £10 to anyone that can prove that this or any other testimonial I have ever published is not genuine and unsecured. (1828)

REPEATING ADVERTISEMENTS.

Owing to the number of announcements received we cannot guarantee to repeat advertisements unless the previous issue, Page, and Column are stated by the advertiser.—ADVT. MANAGER, "CAGE BIRDS."

The Shows.

LONDON & PROVINCIAL O.S.

Held in the Lambeth Baths Oct. 28 and 29 this show proved quite a success. The entries, considering the depression of war time, were splendid, numbering over 400. Quality was really first-class all through. In the Norwich classes there were some exhibits which were quite equal to top form, and this was the case, he it noted with pleasure, in the Novice classes. In the Crest classes there were some splendid exhibits. Yorkshires made a fine collection, there being birds of all quality, many of them likely to be heard of again. Considering the "dampier" that has been pressed down upon all our fanciers it was pleasing that such an array of beautiful specimens could be brought together. Borders and the varieties were well presented, and British and Foreign birds were not to be denied. Of course, this may have been expected, for the L. and P.O.S. do not do things by halves. Their list of specials and their interest and management are always a guarantee that exhibitors will rally to the standard. Mr. Geo. Crabb, the time-honoured president, notwithstanding his weak health—now, we are happy to state somewhat materially recuperated—was present, taking a deep interest in the show. The old faces were conspicuous, such as Messrs. T. Heath, J. W. Ramsden, J. Frostick and many another. The Committee one and all did their utmost. The ladies, including that indefatigable worker Madame Madewell, added grace to the proceedings, and the advantages of a fine show room gave completeness to the whole. These notes would not be complete without a reference to the hon. sec., Mr. C. W. Law, whose efforts for the welfare of the society and its shows are recognised by the whole of the members. To keep up the patriotic element of the proceedings several gentlemen, Belgian refugees, attended the show during the opening afternoon, and took an intelligent and delighted interest in the proceedings. By the time this report reaches the reader a prize money list have been paid to the successful exhibitors. A special word of praise must be accorded to Messrs. Day, Harris, Huggins, Geo. Ramsden, J. Oldaker, R. J. Pretty, and several others who assisted in the staging and care of the exhibits.

The judges were: Nor., Mr. J. Hodder; other Canaries, Mr. T. Heath; Mules and Brit., Mr. A. Silver; For. and Novice, Mules, and Brit., Mr. H. J. Fulljames.

WALSLEY.

Annual exhibition of Canaries, held Oct. 24, in the Central Board Schools. The rooms are the finest in the district, free from draughts, nicely heated, and with plenty of light. Each exhibit could be seen without handling. The entries totalled 260, which would have been increased considerably if the Committee had only advertised their show in CAGE BIRDS. We heard a great many fanciers say they would have sent entries if they had seen an advertisement. The show was very well managed indeed, and all the birds were well looked after. The cream of the Yorkshire Fancy was here, and competition in the classes very keen. Messrs. Dykes, Ogden Bros., Bennett, Mason, Radley, Towers and Goodwin put down fine teams of birds in the Champion Section, and in the Novice section Messrs. Boulton, Taylor, Radley, Ratcliffe and Thomas were the principal winners. The Secretary, Mr. E. Grange, worked very hard for the success of the show, and our old friend, Ned Denton, was a hard-working steward. The judge was Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford).

FOR BIRD-KEEPERS JOINING THE COLOURS.

Generous Offer by a Well-known Lady Bird-lover.

A lady offers a temporary home for the pet bird or birds of men called away owing to the War. The birds will be fed and looked after free of charge by skilled fanciers until the end of the War. Any birds will be taken in (Parrot tribe only excepted), insectivorous and fruit-eating British or foreign species having preference, though there will be room for seed-eaters and a certain number of Canaries as well. A formal receipt will be given in exchange for each bird left or sent, which will have its owner's name and address attached to its cage, and the birds will be given up on production of the receipt at any time. Anyone intending to forward birds to be looked after is requested to send a postcard, stating kind of bird or birds it is proposed to send, and whether they have been kept in a cold or a warm room; and immediately they receive an answer to say there is still accommodation available, the birds can be sent or brought to the Hon. Mrs. Boujke, 75, Gloucester Place, Portman Square, London, W.

Meeting, Oct. 15, 81, Kilbowie Road, Mr. Morton presiding. The schedule for annual members' show was drawn up. Classes: Young Birds: Nor. 6, Bord. 5, Yorks. 2, Crests 1, C.B. 1, A.O.V. 1, Nor. Fed 1, Nov. 1, Light Mules 1, Dark 1. Old Birds: Same classes. Goldf. or Bullfinch, Linn. Greenfinch, Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite, Bramble or Chaffinch, Lark or smaller, Larger than Lark, Hen Bullfinch, Hen British, except Bullfinch, For. Goldf. or Bullf., Gift Class. Messrs. J. Blyth and A. Roberts were elected members. Next meeting, Nov. 19. Arrange stewards.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Meeting, Oct. 17, Victoria Hotel, Charterhouse-st., E.C. R. J. Pretty presided over a good attendance. Mr. A. Hutton, Penze, was proposed as a member. Proposed the Secretary buy new red material for the staging of the coming autumn show. The most important item of the evening was the washing exhibition by Mr. W. Shakespeare, during which he fully explained the way to hold the bird and how to wash it. He then acted as judge for the washing competition. The first three were R. J. Pretty, W. Gilbert and H. Bell. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Shakespeare for the way he gave his instructive and interesting exhibition, and for acting as judge brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—W. Gilbert.

NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE C.B.S.

Meeting of delegates at Stoke Oct. 21. Further arrangements for the inter-club shows to be held at Hanley and Burslem were made. For the Hanley fixture, held Nov. 7, Messrs. F. Bate and W. Bowyer were appointed as judges. Decided that all pay for admission. Owing to the absence of several delegates an adjourned meeting was held Oct. 22, at which it was decided that there should be two collectors at door at each show. Also decided that entries for the Hanley show should close Tues., Nov. 3. Members can obtain schedules from their respective secretaries. Entries to be sent to the show secretary, Mr. C. Beckett, 32, Hamilton Road Birchies Head. Decided to approach the local Roller societies with a view to them participating in the Burslem fixture. There will be another delegation meeting at Hanley Show at 7 p.m.—J. Pitchford.

LAISTERDYKE BOWLING AND TONG COMBINATION.

Meeting, Oct. 22, Hand and Shuttle Inn, Mr. C. Atkinson presiding. The committee decided to give one gold medal value £1, one silver value 12s. 6d., for open section, and one gold value 15s., and one silver value 7s. 6d. for novice section. We think the above is very satisfactory, with only 6d. per year contribution, and only three shows. Decided that Mr. Uttley's special be given for most points at next two shows, all birds to count. We are calling a meeting for all members, and intending members on Nov. 6, at 8, when all entries must be made, and we would like a splendid entry, seeing that the Union have no show on this date. Show Nov. 7, at Napoleon Hotel, Wakefield Road; judge, Mr. F. Self-Clayton.—J. E. Hudeon, Sec.

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 20, with a fair attendance. Two new members made. After general business, upon a suggestion to hold an inter-club show in place of cancelled open show, a good discussion arose, and ended with the society agreeing to it, City of Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Walsall to be invited to join. Schedule: 7 champ., Nor., 4 mule, ditto Yorks., 1 A.O.V., 2 sell., 6 Brit., 2 Mule. Prize-money on sliding scale; fee, 1s. 6d. first entry, 1s. each entry after; 6d. per exhibitor deducted towards expenses. The committee trust members of the above societies will rally round them, and give them a record entry, and so uphold the Fancy in the district during the crisis we are at present passing through. It is proposed that 25 per cent. of all tickets sold and gate money be given to Prince of Wales' Fund.—W. G. Andrews, Hon. Sec., 1, Hayes Street, W. Bromwich.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Special general meeting, Shield's Cafe, Bigg Market, Oct. 15, Mr. T. C. Crawhall chair. Mr. A. Ender elected a member. Decided that at our show, Nov. 14, Co-operative Hall, Darn Crook, admission be: Members free, non-members 6d. Judges were nominated. (Note: Subs. must be paid before the show to entitle to compete.) Letter read from our esteemed asst. sec., Mr. James Craig. I have still some of his birds to dispose of. Members of specialist societies can only show in those classes to which their respective societies have given their patronage; of course, if they are members of our society they can show in any section.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A.

Meeting, and lecture by Mr. Cutmore, of Liverpool, St. Thomas's Schools, Ardwick, Oct. 6, before a large gathering, Rev. C. E. Gaul chair. After usual business, Mr. Cutmore read a paper on Heredity and Pedigree Breeding, telling us that it was written both from theory and practical knowledge, and illustrating to us by diagrams how different species have evolved. He pointed out how we could build up a strain from an ordinary singing Canary and one well-bred bird. Of course, he said, some breeders preferred to make a straight cut by buying the ready-made article, but he would like some of us at least to try and build up a strain, if only for the experience of such a step. He gave some very useful hints regarding the breeding in of type and quality, explaining how best to introduce new blood into our strain; also how we could best improve our stock. After showing us diagrams of different species of birds and animals, and giving some good information regarding their different points, the lecturer said he would be pleased to answer any questions. Several were asked, and Mr. Cutmore answered in a very able manner. Time came all too soon, and a vote of thanks was passed for such a very instructive lecture.

Meeting, Oct. 20. We are sorry to have to report the loss of our president, Dr. S. J. Twigg, who feels compelled to resign on account of his growing practice. We are sorry to lose so good a member, who, although he could not attend as often as he wished, yet was always with us at heart, and always ready to give us a helping hand; he has our best wishes. Arrangements were made for our forthcoming open show, when we are hoping to have a bumping entry. We are giving very liberal classifications, and we hope fanciers will rally round. Next meeting Mr. Spencer (see.) will give a washing demonstration, deputising in place of our chairman, Mr. Robinson, who is unable to come through business reasons; anyway, we are hoping for a good time. Members please note.—R. Booth, Press Correspondent.

SHETTLESTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Good Templars' Hall, Oct. 14, Mr. Wood presiding over a good turnout. Date of annual show, fixed for Dec. 12, in Hill Street Hall, as everything looks well for success this year. There are some very handsome specials to be competed for. Schedule was drawn up. Crests and C.B. 4, Plainheads 11, Bord. 9, Yorks. 8, Scotch Fancy 4, Miles 1, Britt. 12, For. 2, Amat. 1, Gift 1. Decided that members wishing to compete must have their annual subs. paid by next meeting, Good Templars' Hall, Nov. 11, at 7.30.—A. Bury, Sec.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Meeting, Village School Room, Alexandria, Oct. 20, President W. B. Gillies chair. Hall Committee gave in report stating that every available hall suitable, including Co-operative Hall, which had been engaged for annual show, had been commandeered by Royal Scots Fusiliers, who were here for rifle practice at the ranges. They had got the offer of Dalmonach Hall, Bonhill, for annual show, as, being part of Dalmonach Works, and in use during each week, the hall cannot be commandeered, so it was agreed to take same, and thereby allow members the opportunity of competing for the club trophies.—A. H. McLean, Sec.

PENICUIK O.S.

Meeting Oct. 24, Cowan Institute, Mr. Richard Monteith presiding over a good gathering. The principal business was to consider the advisability of holding our show this year, and members agreed that we should hold it, but that they wouldn't take up a general subscription, in view of the present crisis. Several specials have, however, been offered, and we hope to be able to give a little prize-money from our membership fees. The patronage of the B.F.C.C. has been granted, which will go to make the competition keener. Mr. Wm. McAdam, Lasswade, has been appointed to judge the Canary section, and the judge for the other sections will be announced as soon as appointed. The show will be held on the 21st November, and, judging by the enthusiasm shown at the meeting, our first venture is going to be a success.—Jas. Weir, Hon. Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 17, Mr. Allsopp presided over a good attendance. The date of the members' show was altered to Nov. 28. Mr. J. Robson was elected to judge; resolved to have 36 members' classes and four open classes; birds to be staged by 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, or they may be staged on the Friday night, so as to enable members to show who will be engaged in business on the Saturday. Admission threepence. Mr. E. J. Banks reported he had secured the Glamorgan Buildings, Frederic Street, Stock Room, for the Show. Mr. E. J. Davies gave a washing exhibition, and invited other members to show their method. Messrs. H. C. Snaith, E. James, W. Stocking, R. L. Brown, also washed a bird each, and Mr. A. Deere, a novice, made his first attempt at washing. I was pleased to see the interest that was taken in the meeting, all the members seemed full of hope. I trust all members will attend next meeting as I want all stewards, etc., elected for the show. Mr. P. Brailie was elected as a member. Will members who have specials send on to me not later than Nov. 7.—E. Thomas.

NEW CROSS C.B.S.

A washing demonstration and competition took place, Oct. 1, a good number of members and friends being present. Mr. J. Hazell kindly came from Plumstead to show us his methods of washing, and soon proved he was no novice. He first showed how to handle a bird and impressed upon us that confidence was the greatest asset in washing birds. He always used Sunlight soap, as he found it cleaned the feathers better than other sorts. He then proceeded to tub the bird, using three waters with plenty of lather, and after mopping as much of the water from the bird as possible with an old muslin cloth, he finally rolled it in a piece of flannel, all of which movements being closely followed by all present. Messrs. Culham, Joplin, Fuller, Martin, and Cooper then tried their hand at washing their birds. Mr. Hazell criticised their methods, pointed out their mistakes, and finally awarded the silver spoon to Mr. Joplin, who, in Mr. Hazell's opinion, had washed his bird best. Mr. Culham being the runner-up. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Hazell.—Burton Bros., Hon. Secs.

LANCASHIRE & LIZARD F.A.

Meeting, Newmarket Hotel, Oct. 17, with a very fair attendance. Mr. E. Fuller chair. Much sympathy was evinced in regard to the serious illness of Mr. Naylor's wife, and I am sorry to have to record that he has since lost her. I am sure members will accord with me in tendering our sincere sympathy with Mr. Naylor in his bereavement. The Secretary announced that Bradford National had given us the cold shoulder, as they only intended running a Norwich and Yorkshire show. In face of so many shows throwing up the sponge, it speaks well for the grit and sporting spirit of those continuing to hold their shows. Much criticism was shown in regard to the new scheme the Manchester and N.O.S. intend using in regard to the prize-money, etc. General opinion was that in making 12 as the least number for full prize-money, and cancelling classes with less than 6 entries, they were likely to stop entries rather than encourage them. Yet seven entries in a class spells a profit. Members should make a note of London C.B.A. show, as this is the only open show where our trophies will be competed for after Manchester, as Gateshead have decided to drop their open show. An effort will be made to run our usual members' show. Next meeting, Volunteer Hotel, George-st., Oldham, Nov. 14, the date of Oldham C.B.S., in St. Domingo Street Schools.—J. Rukin, Hon. Sec.

Honley and Dist. C.B.S. has been disbanded owing to lack of membership, writes Mr. Fred. Castle, late hon. sec. Most of the members have now joined Huddersfield.

Will members and friends interested in the Richmond Dist. C.B.S. please attend a special general meeting at St. John's Hall on Nov. 2, at 8 o'clock.—H. Birch, hon. sec.

Another Magnificent Lancashire Show.

It is pleasant to be able to announce, following on the splendid success of Liverpool, that another exceptionally fine Lancashire Show is due this week end (Oct. 31st).

MANCHESTER'S ONE-DAY SHOW HAS OVER 1,100 ENTRIES!

Keep up the good work, fanciers. The Societies which are going ahead with their annual exhibitions are deserving of your generous support.

Wolverhampton C.B.S. has decided not to hold an open show, though hoping, however, to hold a members' show in November, also to have a few inter-club shows.—W. Harrison, Sec.

All meetings of the Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S. have been suspended for the present, owing to so many of our members being unable to attend on account of the war, writes Mr. F. Botell, hon. sec.

I was greatly surprised to see the sketch of my variegated yellow cock on the "page of honour" of CAGE BIRDS. I think it does your artist great credit. I wish your paper every success.—P. Gedge (Poplar).

The Border Fancy Canary Club have granted us their patronage, and both the open and novice medals will be competed for at our New Year's Day show, writes Mr. John C. Bell, sec. Border City (Carlisle) O.S.

OBITUARY.

I am indeed sorry to have to announce, writes Mr. John Rakin, that one of our members of the L. and L.F.A., Mr. G. Naylor, has had the misfortune to lose his beloved wife, who died on Oct. 23. I understand she has had a severe illness. My society tenders to Mr. Naylor its sincere sympathies in his sad bereavement.

Mr. T. G. Etheridge, hon. sec. Woolston F. and F.A., would be glad if fanciers willing to guarantee classes at the show of Dec. 16-17 (see letter in correspondence columns) will communicate with him. His address is The Nest, Weston Lane, Woolston.

At the 12th annual Industrial Show at Tenby, Nov. 4, there are seven open classes for cage birds. Proceeds of the show will go to the Prince of Wales War Fund, and schedules may be obtained from the sec., Mr. E. Davis, 2, Ventnor Houses, Tenby.

Mr. W. G. Andrews, hon. secretary, writes that the West Bromwich C.B.S. has decided to hold an inter-club show in place of open show, as they are wishful to keep the Fancy going in their district. It is hoped that members of the societies invited to join will give their best support.

Splendid Reception of Our Scheme.

Singing Canaries for Convalescent Homes and Hospitals Meet With Instant Acceptance and Appreciation.

Will You Help Us, Reader, to Provide Cages?

WE are sure that our readers will learn with the greatest of pleasure of the splendid success of our scheme—in which they have so generously co-operated—to send singing Canaries to such convalescent homes and hospitals as have our gallant fighting men under their roofs recovering from honourable wounds received in the titanic struggle proceeding on the other side of the North Sea.

We have been in communication with the authorities of a large number of hospitals, etc., and in almost every case the offer of a Canary and cage has met with instant and appreciative acceptance.

In our next issue we purpose publishing a lengthy list of the complimentary comments which appear in the letters we have received. For this week, however, owing to pressure on our space, the following must suffice—it well illustrates the kindly and gratifying tone of the whole. It is from the Principal Matron of the National Hospital, London, W., who says:

"We shall be delighted to have the gift you mention of a singing Canary. I am quite sure it will be a source of great delight to our wounded soldiers and other patients. I think it is very kind of you and your readers to offer us one."

So enthusiastically, in fact, has our scheme been received, that we are under the necessity of making a further call upon our readers—a call for more promises of suitable living cages. Of birds we think we have an adequate supply; and, as previously announced, Messrs. Capern, Ltd. (Bristol) have promised to provide all the necessary seeds and Messrs. Trower and Co. (London) all the bird-sand, quite free of charge.

The necessity for more cages arises in this way: Some of the hospitals have told us they should be delighted to have more than one Canary (in some cases four). We intend to see that this very gratifying desire is met to the fullest extent; and we are sure that readers of CAGE BIRDS will generously and promptly back us up.

The Principal Matron of the 3rd Western General Hospital, Cardiff, puts the case this way: "We shall be delighted to have a Canary here, especially as there are no conditions attached to the gift. I know quite well it will give great pleasure to the soldiers and sailors in our hospital. The difficulty will be to divide a Canary into four sections."

We intend to wipe out all such difficulties as this. And we confidently appeal to our readers to help us. It is only a lack of cages that can prevent every section of every hospital receiving its singing Canary. Will you post us your promise of one at once? We do not ask for expensive cages—only that they shall be of fair size and in good clean condition. They can be either of all wire, or of box pattern (wood, with wire front). They should be fitted ready to receive the bird (i.e., with perches and food and water vessels).

Gifts of one cage will be welcomed just as warmly as those of a larger number. The names of all donors will be inscribed on a card sent with each bird and cage.

Post your promises to The Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Our hall is still in the hands of the military, but we shall be holding a members' show on Saturday, Nov. 28, 40 classes, Mr. J. Robson judge, writes Mr. E. Thomas, sec. Cardiff C.B.S.

Owing to the grand entry at Manchester show, the officials have engaged Mr. W. Booth as an extra judge, and he will officiate over the Norwich Plainheads. The entry in Nor., Yorks., and Lizards is quite exceptionally good, we are informed.

The London and Counties A.C.B. is holding its annual autumn show on Nov. 7 at the Victoria Hotel, Charterhouse Street, corner of Farringdon Road, E.C. It is accessible by trains, buses and trams from all parts of London. Show opens at 5.30, and admission will be twopenny.

Will members of the Leeds C.B.S. note that Mr. Wilkinson, of Roundhay, is giving a special for most points scored in the Linnet classes, and also Greenfinch classes, Nov. and Boxing Day shows to count, writes Mr. E. Norton, the hon. sec. As the letter notifying me does not bear the address of the sender, I should be very pleased if some member could furnish me with it, so that I may communicate with Mr. Wilkinson.

The October issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, is full of interesting matter. A coloured plate, by Mr. Goodchild, depicts eight species of Parrot Finches, and there are some good pictures of outdoor aviaries. Among the articles are the conclusion of "Some Experiences of Cockatoos," by the Marquis of Tavistock, and a most interesting chapter by Dr. L. Lovell-Keays on Aviculture in Ancient Rome.

On Monday, Nov. 2, Mr. A. Silver, F.Z.S., lectures before the Wimbledon C.B.S., at headquarters, 6, The Broadway, Wimbledon, at 8 p.m. His subject, "Birds of Character," will be illustrated by lantern, and we are sure that all fanciers who pay Wimbledon a visit on this occasion will pass a very instructive evening. Visitors are heartily welcome. The club-room is opposite Wimbledon Railway Station, and trams and buses pass the door.

THE NIGHTINGALE'S MELODIOUS RIVAL

AN APPRECIATION OF THE BLACKCAP WARBLER. By "COUNTRY FANCIER."

THE bird-lover has no difficulty in identifying the Blackcap Warbler. He is a blue-grey bird, with a black cap, from whence he takes his name. The Blackcap is a summer migrant. Although an insectivorous species he feeds largely upon fruit. A most delightful songster, some consider him to be quite the equal of the Nightingale. He is certainly an incessant performer, and will sing more or less the whole of the day.

When once accustomed to captivity the Blackcap is a very delightful bird to keep for singing. But he should be caged singly, not turned in with other birds. A Blackcap when tame will sing much more freely than a Nightingale, and will settle down to cage life in a very few days. Indeed, it is one of the easiest of our Softbills to steady, and he will delight his owner with song for seven or eight months in the year. The Blackcap seems to be a bit of a mimic, too, for he will frequently introduce into his song passages of the song of some of our larger birds.

The nest of the Blackcap is a slightly built structure, placed in the dense undergrowth, usually not far from the ground. It is generally made of grass and fine roots, and lined with hair. The eggs are four or five in number, and they are dirty-white in ground colour, clouded with olive-brown and have a few dark brown markings.

Rearing from the Nest.

Young Blackcaps can be reared from the nest in just the same manner as Nightingales. A good mixture for them is the following: Crushed biscuit, ants' eggs, and hard-boiled egg in equal parts. Moisten this and give round to the nestlings as required. When they are able to peck feed on one of the better class insectile mixtures as a stock food and supply live food now and again in the shape of gentles and a few mealworms, while a piece of ripe apple or pear, or if these are not available a piece of banana, should be given every day.

The ordinary (grocers') currants should form a large portion of his diet. They should be soaked in water overnight to soften their skins. The currants should be mixed well into the insectile food. In addition they should have a constant supply of ripe fruit when available, such as raspberries and strawberries, in addition to the apples, pears and bananas. The latter he never appears to tire of, and as these can be obtained all the year round they are very useful. Hang one of them up in his cage and turn back a piece of the skin every day. He is also very fond of elder berries, privet berries, and the like. The latter are a very good "conditioner," if a sprig or two be given every day.

Although Blackcaps may be easily kept in a large Warbler's cage they make even better inmates for an aviary; the reason for this is that as their plumage is so hard (brittle) it is rather a difficult matter to keep them in good and perfect feather.

They are fairly hardy birds and can be kept in a sheltered outdoor aviary, or in an unheated building throughout the winter, but if the weather is very sharp it would be advisable to take them in for a time till the frost has passed.

Breeding in Captivity.

As regards the breeding of the Blackcap in captivity I have never tried as yet, but have a pair, so I hope that I shall be successful in rearing a brood of young ones. I should be very glad to find out if anybody else in the birdy world has been successful with them.

In trying to breed birds in an aviary care should be taken to provide the right nesting material, as near as possible that which Nature provides for them; also to "decorate" the aviary suitably. An aviary with thick brambles, etc., growing at the bottom affords the hen many places to select from in which to make a nest, and it also affords a screen for her when nesting, privacy being one of the things they most need.

In choosing a Blackcap for exhibition the main points to consider are size and shape, a dense black cap, richness in colour, nice full eye, also good wing carriage. A bird that is chosen for exhibition must needs be a very large one, as it is well known that "A good big 'un will beat a good little 'un," therefore size should be practically the first point to consider; after that I should put shape and colour. Needless to say the bird must be in the best of health and condition, if he is to "shine" and win. And when the bird comes home with his honours thick upon him, I don't think you will say that all your care and attention have been wasted.

The Master Singer of the Canary Tribe

By J. TOMLINSON.

How to keep the Roller Canary in health, to breed for pleasure and profit, and train for exhibition.

PERSONALLY I prefer to place them about face high, and where members of the household are continually passing. This, however, is only necessary in the case of a shy singer. The procedure I usually follow is worthy of experimentation, I place the birds on the table whilst having a meal, or when writing. After a few such lessons ordinary movements will have no effect on their tranquillity.

In view of the fact that Roller Canary shows are not extensively advertised, a little information may be useful to those who may not be versed in the procedure of making entries. Sometimes the only intimation of a forthcoming show is the announcement in the club report of the show promoters; and approximate dates are usually chosen year by year. Schedules are usually sent out by the club's secretary to members of the British Roller Canary Club, and to other known fanciers. A post card to the secretary of the club, about a fortnight previous to the show taking place is all that is necessary to procure a schedule and other information in connection with the exhibition.

The secretary, soon after receiving your entries, will send an address label, and either one or two gummed labels. Attach one of the gummed labels to the outside of the left-hand shutter, and the other to the front rail, that is, the strip of wood immediately below the punch-bar front of the cage. Take care that the edge of the label does not project in such a manner that the bird can reach it, or it will probably be chewing paper when it might be better employed in singing. When only one label is received for each cage, this should be placed on the front rail.

The water fountain should be placed at the right-hand side of the cage, that is, in the aperture nearest to the cage-door, and the birds should arrive in the show room early on the day of judging, or, which is better, one the previous evening, so as to allow of a rest to the birds before they are required in the judge's room. In case the conveyance is made through a railway company the carriage must be paid; at present those companies that I am conversant with will only accept the carriage for the outward journey; it is also advisable to insure them. It would be a great convenience if the various railway companies would accept payment for carriage and insurance both on the outward and return journeys.

Reader, I am going to grumble at the food sometimes given to some birds at a show—not at any particular one, for I am not giving what may be termed a sly rub at any individual show, but I am "grousing" at the person who supplies to birds while at a show a different variety of food to what they have been used to receiving at home.

The Food at Shows.

This passage is often to be found in the show schedules: "a supply of food, of the kind the birds are accustomed to receiving should be placed by the owner in his exhibition cages before dispatching his birds to the show." The interpretation of that passage is that birds will be fed whilst at the show on the particular diet which will be found in the bird's cage. A sudden change of diet is apt to upset a bird's stomach, or, with individual specimens, the length of time that the cage is opened while at the show, together with an unsuitable diet and the excitable surroundings, will tend to have a detrimental effect on the bird's song.

When birds are placed in your charge, feed them on that variety of seed you will find placed by the owner in the cage; whether it be only German rape, or a mixture of rape and canary. The owner is in a better position than you to understand his bird's peculiar temperament and the variety of food best suited to it. Canary seed will make some birds' song rank; on the other hand, a whole diet of rape seed will have the effect of making the excreta foul and watery in some specimens, and canary seed has to be added to balance its laxative properties.

"BUSINESS AS USUAL."

Blantyre O.S. Holds Annual Show.

SIR,—We have decided to have our annual show on the 7th Nov., in Mr. Struthers' Hall, High Blantyre. Judges, Mr. R. Lambie (Whitburn) and Mr. J. Sinclair (Paisley). Next meeting Oct. 31, at 7.30 p.m.

Pontypridd F. and F.S. Surmounts War Troubles.

SIR,—The war has played havoc with the fixtures in South Wales. We intended holding our annual show on Nov. 25, but owing to failure to book a hall we at one time thought that we would have to cancel for this year. However, after difficulty, I have engaged a hall, but the show must be postponed, and we have fixed on Wednesday, Jan. 6, 1915, when we hope to have a continuance of the grand support we have had in the past. I have received a host of applications for schedules; these applications will be filed and schedules sent out when ready.

A. A. GORDON M'LUKAS, Sec.

The South of Scotland C.B.A. Will Hold Show at Dumfries.

SIR,—At our meeting held Oct. 16 in the Fountain Café Restaurant, Dumfries, Mr. Edgar presided over a large attendance, and it was decided to hold the second annual show on Nov. 28, the surplus funds to be handed over to the War Funds. A gift class will be provided also, the exhibits to be sold by auction, proceeds to go to the War Funds. The Committee hope that all fanciers in the South of Scotland will support them; make the show a success by sending as large an entry as possible so that a substantial sum may be handed over. Mr. Pattie (Hon. Pres.) has kindly consented to give his hall free of charge for the show, at which 33 classes will be provided, and prize-money the same as last year.

A. McHOLM, Hon. Sec.

Enterprise at Whitehaven.

SIR,—We intend holding an open show for Yorkshires on Dec. 19, 9 champion and 3 novice classes, under the patronage of the Cumberland and Westmorland Y.C.C., also 2 classes for Linnets, house and field moulted. The show will be confined to Cumberland, and prizes on the sliding scale. The Committee will require two entry fees out of each class for expenses, that is, we will suppose, there are 12 entries at 1s. 6d. (18s.), 3s. will be taken for expenses, leaving 15s. for 1st, 2nd, 3rd prizes, at the rate of 8s. 6d. 1st, 4s. 3d. 2nd, 2s. 3d. 3rd. This is a show run for the benefit of exhibitors; we have

If you will look over your show schedule you find that no one is allowed in the judge's room unless in some official capacity, so it is the privilege of the few rather than the many to see how the birds are judged. Lend me your attention, imagination, your eyes and ears, and I will give to the many an imaginary peep. You see the judge sitting with his back towards the window, while on the table before him are three or four birds placed so that none of the birds can get a view of each other, yet all are in full view of the judge.

Listen! one of the birds has commenced to sing, and the eyes of the judge are at once fixed on the bird. The bird has stopped singing, but the judge has not removed his pencil from the table. How is that? Why has he not taken the points? Because he considers that the bird was simply playing with its song, a trying of the voice before it commences to sing properly.

Valuing the Song.

Hark! the bird is now singing again, and the judge's eyes are again upon it. When it has stopped singing you may notice the judge placing figures in the squares on the sheet, but he may only put them in, say, three squares. Well, then the bird only sang three tours, and while they were being sung the judge was valuing and memorizing them. Look; the one that has just ceased singing is now feeding, and the judge, knowing that it will not commence to sing again for some little time, has turned his attention to another just commencing to sing. The tones are recollected and valued, and when the song has ceased the points are entered on the sheet. The first bird is singing again, and the points are entered up. So on the business goes until the song of three of the birds has been heard, valued, and recorded.

taken a good hall with good light during the day and lighted by electricity at night, but it is rather out of the way, therefore we don't expect a big gate, if any. Should we be fortunate to get any, it will be divided among the classes, along with any balance left from what we are keeping for expenses. We are doing very little printing, but we will send an advert to CAGE BIRDS, also a review of schedule a week before the show, from which we expect intending exhibitors to enter. All birds will be sent home on Saturday night, or as requested.

Metropolitan C.B.A. Extends Its Classes.

SIR,—A committee meeting was held last Thurs., and it was decided to hold the annual show and extend the classification, so as to give members a chance to enter all the different varieties. The committee hopes all members will rally round and send in as many entries as possible. We have one of the best halls in West London, situated in Kelvedon Road, near Walham Green. The date, Sat., Nov. 7, as far as I can see, does not clash with any other London show. So, members, do your duty.

JOHN JEFFREY, Press Sec.

Woolston and District F. and F.A. to Hold Its Show.

SIR,—At a meeting at the Alexandra Coffee Rooms, Woolston, on Oct. 14, the members decided to hold the annual show on Dec. 16 and 17, as previously arranged, open to Hants, Wilts, Dorset and Isle of Wight. The whole of the members present were in favour of a show being held, so the order is "carry on," and with the hearty co-operation of each member it is trusted that the show will be a tremendous success financially. Any surplus cash will be given to the local funds. It was also suggested that three classes for eggs be given (no entrance fee), the eggs to be sent immediately after the show to our brave wounded soldiers at Netley Hospital, who have done so much on the Continent, in conjunction with our Allies, to uphold Old England's honour. Those able to do so should make those classes overflowing. For schedules, etc., apply to me, Rung Bullfinch Caught Near Pickering.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. Zimmerman's letter, the bird was caught at New Bridge in the early part of September. New Bridge is about a mile from Pickering and four miles from Thornton Dale. I should be pleased to hear how many birds in the nest were rung.

Date of Reading Show.

Sir,—Through an error in printing, our entry forms are wrong in date of show, and time of entries closing. It should read "Show Wednesday, November 11th." Entries close Wednesday, November 4th." As I had sent out nearly all schedules before error was noticed, it may prevent exhibitors sending entries in time. The schedule is correct, so I trust all will go by that.

What Are the South-Country Specialist Clubs Doing?

Sir,—Mr. Whitton has touched on a matter which is troubling the minds of a good many specialist club members. There are undoubtedly a number who are not only willing, but anxious, to show. But beyond the possibility of getting into the tickets, they quite naturally desire some further little encouragement, and, having paid their subscription, they have a perfect right to expect it.

Novice Norwich Classes at the Great National Show.

Sir,—I am glad to see that the Great National Cage Bird Show is to be held as usual, as we novices were rather disappointed Mr. Ramsden's autumn show had to be cancelled through the war crisis. I hope when the time comes round we novices will have the pleasure of seeing two extra classes in the Norwich P.H. section—clear yell. and clear buff. I think a marked bird has an advantage over a clear. I hope we are not asking for too much, seeing how well the classes were filled.

Amalgamated Members' Show at Nottingham.

Sir,—At a meeting of the Nottingham and Notts O.S. it was suggested that the Nottingham Permanent C.B.S. and the Hyson Green C.B.S. should be approached with an idea of holding an amalgamated members' show, in consequence of our annual open show being abandoned. As a result of that suggestion the two local clubs have fallen in line with us, and we shall hold an amalgamated members' show on Nov. 14. We have engaged a well-lighted room at the Mechanics' Institute, appointed Mr. W. Vardy to judge, and are providing 14 classes for Norwich (including 5 novices), 8 for Crests, 1 A.O.V., 7 for British, Mule and Foreign, and 4 Selling. We trust that every member of all the societies will do his utmost to make this show a thorough success, both as regards entries and the sale of tickets, also in help both before and on the show day. Entries close Nov. 11. We shall be glad if members will endeavour to obtain some special prizes to be competed for, and communicate with their secretary or the undersigned.

Great Battle in Lancashire!

Enemy Routed on the Banks of the Mersey!

Sir,—There has been a great battle in Lancashire. A handful of fanciers girded up their loins and went out arrayed in all the panoply of war to slay the latest enemy of the Bird Fancy—the German Eagle. This enemy isn't exactly a new variety of bird, but has been lying dormant for close upon fifty years. Now it has suddenly swooped down from its eyrie like the great bully that it is, flapping its enormous wings, exuding fire from its eyes, and croaking its call note of two syllables that make a sound something like "culture."

The Fancy has almost fled in panic. One or two societies have stood their ground to meet the onslaught of the enemy, amongst them these few brave men—trained soldiers all, and courageous—who have carried the trenches until the Eagle (proving to be nothing more than an Owl or a Cuckoo) has turned tail, and left the banks of the Mersey to try to strike panic into some other part. In a word, the enemy has suffered a rout, for 1,253 birds turned up to show societies that there was no necessity for the panic, and that the Fancy still has confidence in its own prowess to put to flight even stronger enemies. "Strong men will not surrender all they hold dear without a struggle."

Liverpool are to be congratulated on their great venture. As I have said, they are a plucky handful, but they are a proof of the axiom of birdlore that neither bird shows nor birds can do without "grit." Those two indefatigable workers, Messrs. Metcalfe and Green, were in the thick of the fight, and I heard a whisper that the twain were to be mentioned in despatches (to CAGE BIRDS). Mr. Metcalfe was kept busy paying out prize-money (when he wasn't raking in sales money), while Mr. Green kept an eye on the door to see that no one paid twice. We noticed a new show manager in Mr. Walker, and he has evidently graduated in a good school, for he handled the reins like a skilled driver. In fact, all were workers, and deserved their success. This society is one of the few who can boast of efficient lady stewards, and it isn't the good fortune of every fancier—as it was the writer's—to have two ladies help him pack his birds and escort him to the door to keep the police from nailing him. But then, it isn't every fancier who is so hand—, eh?

We knew that it could be done, even at a time like this, and it has been left for the Liverpool fanciers to show others the way in Lancashire; and some of the societies who bent a retreat at the first sign of the enemy must by now be weeping, wailing and gnashing their teeth over what they have missed.

SUB ROSA.

An Albino Linnnet Caught.

Sir,—On Sept. 24, on Cheshunt Marshes, I caught a Linnnet (on full song) which is pure white—no sign of any dark feathers on it. It has white legs, pink eyes and amber beak. I think this is a very rare specimen, and should like to know if such a specimen has been caught before.

B. MATTHEWS.

The Welsh National C.B.S.

Sir,—I would point out to Mr. Creber that the proposed Welsh National show is to be national in every sense of the word—that is, representative of all the societies in Wales and Monmouthshire. Was this the case in regard to the society he refers to? As to the failure of this society, Mr. Creber could have stated the facts had he wished to, seeing that he lives in the district the shows were held in. What is Mr. Creber's point? Does he expect the new show to pay the debts incurred by the Welsh National Cage Bird Society?

The London and Provincial O.S.

Collection of Stuffed Birds.

An Appeal for "Dead Warriors."

Sir,—Whilst thanking you for your kind assistance in previous years, I again, on behalf of the London and Provincial O.S., crave a little of your valuable space to thank the donors who have, since the issue of my last appeal, sent me birds for the above collection, and at the same time, now that the birds are getting through the moult and in good feather, to appeal again to bird-keepers to send to Messrs. Edward Gerrard and Sons, 61, College Place, Camden Town, N.W., any birds in good plumage they may have the misfortune to lose. Messrs. Gerrard and Sons have my instructions as to stuffing.

There are now almost 200 birds in the collection, but I am still open to receive many more. At present not a single class in Greens, Borders, Scotch Fancies, or Belgians is properly represented, and only one class each in Cinnamons, Lancashires, and Lizards is complete. Many classes of Hybrids and British birds are unrepresented, and I still want legions of foreign birds. A number of Canary classes are now complete, and various other classes may be represented, but in some cases perhaps the stuffed bird has not given me satisfaction, consequent on delay in receiving specimens, or from other causes, and so I am still open to receive birds in such classes.

Notwithstanding the fact that during the present time everybody's mind is taken up with the war which is progressing, I think this laudable object should be kept in view, otherwise opportunities might be lost of securing rare and special birds for the collection.

G. CRABB.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

Liverpool Returns Thanks.

Sir,—We beg to tender our sincere thanks to all fanciers who assisted us in making the 1914 show a record, not only in numbers, but for quality. Our thanks are also due, and are hereby tendered, to the local fanciers and friends who, as usual, rallied round us and worked with a will both on the arrival and at the despatch of the exhibits. Their names are legion, and it would be invidious to mention any in particular—they had only one aim, to be "up and doing."

The Proposed Welsh National Cage Bird Show.

An Enthusiastic Preliminary Meeting.

Sir,—A very successful meeting was held at Abertillery show on Oct. 21, H. Campion, Esq., the esteemed President of Abertillery C.B.S., very kindly presiding, and this gentleman is now taking a very deep personal interest in this matter. There was a very large and enthusiastic gathering of fanciers from different parts, including the secretaries of Abersychan, Abertillery, Cardiff, and other societies whose names I could not get. Messrs. G. T. Jones and Teastone, of Brecon, unfortunately could not wait for the meeting, which had to be postponed for two hours owing to judging not being completed. But both these gentlemen expressed themselves as being delighted with the prospects of a Welsh National show, and promised their support, as also did Mr. S. J. Nicholas, of Swansea, who whispered something about a silver cup. So great was the enthusiasm that most fanciers wanted to go full steam ahead. Certain names were proposed to fill the office of sec., chairman, etc., but, as this was only an informal meeting, that business had to be left over until the next meeting.

Some of the objects of a Welsh National show put forward were:—

(1) The revival of some of the now nearly extinct varieties of Canaries and British birds so seldom seen at any of our Welsh shows, viz., Crests, Cinnamons, Scotch Fancies, Belgians, Lancashires, and Lizard Canaries; also the smaller varieties of British and Foreign birds.

BEDLINGTON.

Annual Show, Co-operative Hall, Bedlington, Oct. 24. An ideal room, well lighted and free from draughts, and the exhibits are seen to the best advantage. Entries totalled 350. The strongest classes were the Norwich and Borders. Spl. Seely Bros. Mr. Chas. Fuller performed the Secretarial duties in a skillful manner and was backed up by a strong Committee: Messrs. J. Stephenson, J. Orange, J. Locke, W. Dear, W. Tippet, P. Scott, J. Douglas, G. Brown, T. Thompson, A. T. Thompson, B. G. Collingwood, R. Metcalfe, G. William-on, T. Young, J. Aston and J. Hudspeth. The Stewards got through their work of packing exhibits in good time. Messrs. J. Stanger, Durlam, and J. Hands, Ryton, judged, and gave every satisfaction.

NOR., CL., ETC.: 1, Robson and March, cl. buff, good col., full of subs., bold breast, stands well on perch, wings and tail perfect; 2, Morrison, cl. yell., very smart, wonderful col., good wing carr., plenty of sub.; 3, Russell and Teardale, cl. buff, hot one, good head and neck, not the subs. of winner; vhc, Smiles; he, Armstrong; c, Archbold and Leslie; UNELL, YELL.: 1, Morrison, cl. yell., real model for type and qual.; 2, Wilson, cl. yell., good col. and type, must have pers. cl. hard; 3, Dixon, yell., varieg., good type and qual. of feather, takes spl. for best members Nor. BUFF.: 1, Smiles, mkd. one wing, good head and neck, plenty of subs. and feather; 2, Thompson, buff varieg., a nice type and qual.; 3, Lee, inclined to be on the long side; vhc, Armstrong; he, Calloway; c, Yates. HEN.: 1, Russell and Teardale, cl. yell., good head, neck, col. and qual.; 2, Rowell, cl. buff, good type, not so clean cut behind as winner; 3, Thompson, cl. yell., good type and col., not the size of winners;

(2) To increase the classification and introduce as many new varieties as possible; also to encourage "local" classes.

(3) To help the novice as much as possible and introduce amateur classes.

(4) To increase the prize-money and make six cash awards instead of three, in addition to cups, trophies and specials; also one magnificent cup for the best bird of the year.

(5) To introduce more Welsh judges.

(6) To help small societies in Wales and Monmouthshire who through no fault of their own have had to close down—probably owing to lack of support from exhibitors and the public.

In regard to the working arrangements of the show the following suggestions were made. The National show should be supported by all the thirty-six societies in Wales and Monmouthshire, and also by every individual fancier who is not affiliated to any society. The annual subscription to be paid by each society is two guineas. The committee would be made up of one or not more than two members from these societies. Each society would elect its own representatives. The voting would therefore be equal—the small societies having the same influence in the management of the show as the larger societies. It is suggested to split up Wales and Mon. into seven districts and hold the show each year at that particular town where the railway facilities and other arrangements for the birds, exhibitors, and a "gate," are the best. The show would be held North, South, East and West. Say, Swansea, Brecon, Cardiff, Wrexham, Newport, Llandudno, Llanelli, and so on.

I am arranging a meeting at the Law Courts Hotel, Duke Street, Cardiff, on Saturday, Nov. 7, at 3.30 p.m., when I hope to see all the thirty-six societies represented, and also as many fanciers present as possible. If it is decided to go on with the show, officers will be elected pro tem., and a further meeting arranged to fix venue and date of the first show. I am writing all secretaries throughout Wales and Mon. whose addresses I am taking from CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, but should I have omitted anyone I should be glad if they would kindly acquaint me of the fact at once.

Liverpool's Crushing Answer to the Croakers.

All Records Broken: Over 1,250 Entries: A Really Brilliant Achievement.

The seventh annual show of the Liverpool O.S. held October 23-24 in the St. Martin's Hall, was supported by the enormous record of 1,250 entries, an object lesson indeed to those societies who through the war years have cancelled their shows. That the show was held was, we understand, due to the dogged determination of about a dozen members, and the success achieved should be a matter of pride to them all.

Mr. J. Walker, the highly esteemed show manager, seemed to be always doing the right thing at the right time. The stewards proved themselves a band of the right sort, with them to think was to act. The careful and judicious manner in which they dealt with the varied and many duties that an open venture entails deserved praise of the highest order. Here are those who kept the house in order: Messrs. W. C. Robinson, R. P. Roberts, A. Parsons, W. Richardson, J. Lloyd, F. and J. Handley, J. Thornton, W. Jones, W. Dornier, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Jones, Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Handley. Mr. H. Boothman (late sec. Manchester O.S.) also rendered most useful help.

The worthy secretaries, Messrs. J. W. Metcalfe and G. Green, appear to thrive on work, and undoubtedly the success of the show must be booked as full credit to them.

The hall in which the exhibits were so finely staged is most suitable, being lofty, spacious and cosy to a degree. Draughts are conspicuous by their absence. At night time the room is magnificently lighted by electricity.

Norwich were a feature of the show. A finer collection of the "short thick" ones we never remember seeing at this well-known fixture. In the champion section were 129 in the six classes, and in the novice section 114 in four classes, 243 in all, an average of over 24 birds per class; a most excellent record.

Hot as Mustard.

Quality was great; competition as keen as "Colman's," as might be expected when such notable stables as Messrs. S. Cook, A. Hirst, J. Thomas, W. Crawshaw, J. Beswick, F. F. Lawson, W. N. Turner and W. Dornier were represented. We did not envy the judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes, the task set him. So close was the merit in many of the classes that two or more sets of winners could have been selected.

Many envious eyes were turned towards the magnificent cl. yell. cock shown by Mr. W. Crawshaw, also to the cl. buff cock owned by Mr. S. Cook. Another full worthy of special mention was the cl. yell hen the property of Mr. J. Thomas. In the novice section Messrs. J. Davies, O. D. Gell, J. N. Buxton and G. H. Cookson benched beauties.

Border Fancies were of a most meritorious description. We have seen larger classes here but never better quality. Real "knock-outs" were exhibited by Messrs. G. Greenwell, J. Johnson, R. Gentlemen, J. S. Wilson and J. Nicholson. Cinnamons were not in abundance, yet most of the "cream" were present. Nice birds were shown by Messrs. W. Dornier, Mrs. Tweddle, A. Bentley, and J. E. Hartup. Lizards as pretty as paint one saw, Messrs. J. Rukin, F. Hamer, W. P. Barnes and E. Ollershaw putting down some of the right stamp.

Norwich Greens contained several very taking birds, sound in colour and of good shape. Biggest plums were captured by Messrs. S. Woods, G. Johnston, A. Parsons and H. Stead. Special for best Green went to Mr. G. Greenwell, his Buff Green border doing the needful. That for best novice Green fell to a real good Yell. Green Nor. owned by Mr. A. Parsons. 21s. special most points went to Mr. J. W. Metcalfe.

The Green Yorkshires were a fine lot of birds. Great improvement has been made in this variety the last two or three years. The yellows, cocks and hens, are slim, good in feather, and well up on leg. The unlighted birds were the pick of the lot. Mr. Smith's unlighted yell. should, with care, make up into a real good bird. In the Novice Section we liked Mr. Steinart's yellow; this won sp. for best bird shown by a novice. Messrs Metcalfe, Handley, Benson and Young, Skilling, Jen s, Smith and Robinson staged some grand birds. In the clear or ticked Yorkshire section were some of the cracks from Yorkshire. Messrs. Dykes, Ogden Bros., Norton and Radley put down fine teams. The Norwich Cinnamons were not a good lot; they show too much feather and have heads like Crestbreds. Would that we had a Quinton, a Thackrey or a Naylor back again, then we should have type and quality with lovely carriage. Many of the birds are wild and will not show themselves; more time should be spent in training.

Great Value for Money.

The Selling and Stock classes contained some marvellous value for money, and quite a run of sales was made. Mules and Hybrids were simply overwhelming in numbers and varieties of crosses in the two classes provided, and extra prizes were given. Many last year's cracks were present and gave a good account of themselves. In one or two instances notable champions were not quite up to their best form, notably Martin and Archer's Clear Linnet Canary (Perfection), his inner wing flights not being quite drawn up and settled yet; he will improve. Also the sensational "Snowflake" Canary-Bullfinch (Parlett) was cardless owing to his having lost the outer wing flights of one wing. Almost every cross was to be seen, and there were too many for each cross to get in the cards. Exhibitors had sent from England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales and the Isle of Man, both in Hybrid and British classes. The British classes were simply superb. Such quantity and quality never before assembled at Liverpool Show. Exhibitors deserve the very highest praise for making the show such a glorious success in such trying times. Goldfinches were fairly forward in the moult, and competition keen, but some of the best will take higher places when colours have developed. Linnets were very forward and only birds of the highest grade could get in. The Siskin, Redpoll or Twite class was a regular knock-out; 36 of the very best; extra prizes were given, and the Show Managers promise next year to give separate classes for this group; fanciers should please remember this.

The attendance of fanciers was great and sales were numerous. Catalogues were on sale early, and prize-money was paid on the first day of show to all winners present. On the Saturday all railway birds were dispatched before 5, and the entire room was cleared by 6.30. Extra prize money was given in all classes over 30.

Messrs. W. Mundell and W. Cowgill judged Yorkshires, J. C. Barnes Norwich, G. Large Borders, A. Wellings Lizards, and C. Houlton Brit. and For., and their awards were well received.

Mr. J. C. Barnes' Classes.

NOR. GREEN SELF YELL. (6): 1, Abbot, grand shape, subs., and car., magnificent col., teeming with qual., a charmer; 2, Handley, plenty of size, superb feather, rich tone of col., longer in build, yet a good one; 3, Lomax, nice qual. and col., neat head, neck and chest, inclined to be heavy behind; 4, Lawson, shapely, nice size, capital col., in pen around head and neck, should look well shortly; vhc, Woods; No. 5, Hitchen, w.c., foul wing. BUFF (13): 1, 4, Lawson, leader a monster, rattling shape and car., beautifully clothed, rich col., gem, 4th exquisite col. and feather, neat head and neck, jaunty, hardly the subs. of winner; 2, Barker, heaps of qual. and col., grand shape, delightful car., clean cut, pressed hard; 3, Woods, cobby, A1 col., silky feather, worth its place; vhc, Lomax; hc, Howe; c, Handley. FOUL YELL. (7): 1, c, Walker, wonderful qual. and qual., rare shape, massive in build, neat car.; 2, Lawson, foul tail, shapely, good subs., rich feather, moves well, beaten a little in col. only; 3, Abbott, foul tail, good in body, nice wing car., all there for col. and qual.; 4, Ball, foul wing, somewhat on the small side, yet capital shape, feather and col., in the pink; vhc, Thornton; hc, Woods. BUFF (15): 1, Barnes, foul tail, short and thick set, well up in size, beautiful qual. and col., still a great exhibit and close up; 3, Dornier, foul tail, rare subs., splendid col. and qual., bit fat on front which detracts from the outline, still a good one; 4, Thornton, for col. and qual. all one need desire, neat head, neck and wing car., not the thickness through as those above; vhc, McAndrew; hc, Sykes; c, Walker. YELL. HEN (7): 1, Johnston, self, lovely type and qual., col. superb, dainty car., good subs.; 2, Thornton, foul tail, grand shape and feather, nice size, capital wings, beaten in tone of col.; 3, Ball, self, A1 col. and qual., good subs., longer in barrel, wings and tail, neat car., a little "good 'un"; hc, Mrs. Tweddle; c, Handley. BUFF (13): 1, Woods, self, very massive in build, grand shape and qual., superb tone of col., fine car., in rare trim; 2, Thornton, self, true type, teeming with qual., nice size, lacking a little in col., yet not far behind; 3, vhc, Handley, self, richly clothed, A1 col., neat head expression, might be deeper fronted, fights well carried; 4, Lomax, foul tail, good feather, nice col. and size, bit loose behind, which tells against it; hc, Walker; c, Barker. CHAMP. NOR. YELL. ETC. (23) Rare class and easily two sets of winners could have been selected: 1, Crawshaw, mld. wings and eyes, one of the best we have seen for many a long day, near on perfection, will take some stopping, beautifully staged; 2, Cook, ablaze with col., exquisite feather, wonderful head, neck and chest, delightful car., wee bit longer in build, yet quite capable of beating more than beats it, gem without doubt; 3, hc, Thomas, grandly shaped cl., plenty of subs., unique for qual., rare character, good 3rd; 4, Turner, monster of a cl., red-hot, soft silky texture, jaunty car., deficient in tail, when properly through will be amongst the "nuts"; vhc, Beswick; c, Leigh. BUFF (28) A class containing many well worthy of a 1st prize: 1, Cook, cl., extraordinary merit, great subs., feathered to perfection, fed to a nicety, and for shape might unheatable, an eye-opener; 2, 3, Crawshaw, former mld. wings and eyes, smooth as polished marble, true type, shows to perfection, might have wee bit more colour, latter var., hot enough to fire his "happy home," lovely feather and shape, well up in subs., full of action, clean cut away; 4, Hirst, massive var., capital feather, good shape, with more col. would want beating; vhc, Johnson; hc, Thorpe; c, Thomas. YELL. HEN (17): 1, Thomas, charmingly clothed cl., rare size, rich col., best of car. throughout; 2, Cook, sweetly moulded cl., superb qual. and col., dainty in movement, not a feather wrong, beaten in size only, gem; 3, Beswick, cl., type, qual. and col. predominates, not a glances, but bewitching, and should do well; 4, Nixon, cobby, beautiful feather and col., tight as a Java, smart car., very catchy to the eye, still not overdone with size; vhc, Thorpe; hc, Woodward; c, Marsh. BUFF (18): 1, Cook, cl., wonderful qual., col. and shape, plenty of subs., rattling car., an easy win; 2, Thomas, cl., built on colossal lines, grand outline, gowned in richness, scarcely so gaudy in col.; 3, Beswick, massive cl., lovely shape and car., A1 qual., paler in tone, still bonny; 4, Dornier, cl., full of col., teeming with qual., lovely shape, neat car. of flights and tail; vhc, Barnes; hc, Miss A. Scott; c, Norman. UNFLIG. YELL. (22) Very choice lot: 1, Lawson, superbly feathered and delightful fed cl., great subs., slashing type and car., with luck has a great future, claimed at catalogue price, £5; 2, 4, Crawshaw, a brace to be envied, leader a beautifully shaped cl., well up in subs., capital qual. and col., neat in car., extremely promising, 4th red-hot cl., short and thick set, A1 qual., full of true characteristics; 3, Dornier, rare size, shapely, wonderful cl., not yet tightened up, should want reckoning with, worthy of this position; vhc, Parlett; hc, Boothman; c, Thomas. BUFF (22): 1, Norman, model of a cl., smooth as a mirror, exquisite qual. and col., well up in subs., clean cut away, promising; 2, Lawson, cl., lovely type and feather, good size and car., well across perch, hardly so rich in col., still a gem; 3, Thorpe, cl., lovely symmetry, teeming with qual. and col., not overdone with size, but should come on with time; 4, Fielding, cl., very shapely, A1 qual., nice subs. and car., little pale in col., still beauty; vhc, Cottam; hc, McEarlane; c, Yates. NOV. GREEN YELL. (4): 1, Parsons, foul tail, fine tone of col., shapely and good size, would not disgrace itself in the "upper circle"; 2, 4, Stead, foul tail and self respectively, both nice col. and feather, but could do with more subs.; 3, Lester, self, full of col., rich qual., bit slim in build. BUFF HEN (4): 1, 4, Stead, both foul tail, winner a nice one, 4th little free in feather, yet nice col., wants a bit more subs.; 2, Lester, self, good qual. and col., shapely, on the small side; 3, Parsons, self, colour nice, size lacking. NOV. NOR. YELL. (15): 1, Davies, cl., round as a ball, tight as wax, grand col., feather and car., capable of doing good service in champion section; 2, Cook and Son, var., well up in subs., capital col., shapely, bit wavy in feather, still very bonny; 3, Fides, mld. wing and head, ablaze, superb feather, good size, bit longer in barrel flights and tail; 4, Curphy, bonny shaped var., A1 qual., paler but neat; vhc, Roberts; hc, Webber; c, Howarth. BUFF (32) Grand class: 1, Gell, mld. head, rare size and shape, silky feather, rich col., moves nicely, extremely taking; 2, Cook and Son, cl., nice symmetry, rattling col. and qual., not the subs. of above, still pressed hard; 3, Webber, cl., capital shape, superb qual., neat car., hardly so rich in tone of col., good 3rd; extra 3, Cookson, mld. wings and eyes, full of col., rattling feather, nice shape and size, good car.; 4, Nicholls, well up in subs., superior col., shapely, hardly so rich in texture, yet one we liked; ex 4, Davies, lovely col. and feather, nice type and car., not quite the subs. of above, still pretty; vhc, Warburton; hc, Smalley; c, Marshall. UNFLIG. (44) Biggest class in show, and a leader to deal with: 1, Buxton, very meritorious cl. buff, magnificent shape, delightful col. and qual., well up in size, smooth as glass, grand car.; 2, Goring, cl. yell., sweetly moulded, richly fed, good in qual., nice size, clean cut away; 3, Underwood, cl. buff, feathered to perfection, lovely col., true type, nice subs., full of action, close up; ex 3, c, Bennett, cobby var., red-hot, silky texture, good in shape and car., well worth the extra prize; 4, Tipping, shapely cl. buff, rich col., neatly frosted, sweet expression throughout; ex 4, Proctor, cl. yell., capital feather and col., true type, not of the biggest but of the best; vhc, Chilton; hc, Wilson. HENS (23) Nice col. class: 1, Cookson, richly fed cl. yell., lovely outline, nice size and car., extremely graceful; 2, Steele, current year cl. buff, tight as a Java, superior qual. and col., nice subs., clean under, close up; 3, Chilton, neatly shaped cl. yell., A1 qual. and col., grand flights and tail, again close up; 4, Marshall, cl. buff, good shaped body, bit weak in head and neck, superb feather and col., in the pink; vhc, Davies; hc, McConaghe; c, Cook and Son.

ABERTILLERY ONE HUNDRED BIRDS UP.

"Fanciers Are Still Alive!" Writes Our Reporter.

This show, held Oct. 21, at Gymnasium Hall, proved highly successful, four hundred birds being staged, an increase of one hundred over last year's total. This should encourage other show committees not to be too hasty in cancelling their fixtures, as it is evident that fanciers are still alive, and not all panic-stricken, as some people would have us believe. The hall was excellently lighted from the roof the exhibits in every part of the room being easily seen. Yorks. and novice classes were the features of the show, every class being well filled and containing in nearly every instance a double set of winners. The two classes of Borders (open) were well supported, as also were the novice classes in this section. British were not up to usual numbers for a Welsh show, it being rather early yet to have them in full bloom. The exhibits throughout were of high order, many notable winners being put down. The Show Manager, Mr. W. Newell, had everything well in hand and was well supported by a hard-working band of stewards, Messrs. G. Thomas, A. Parfitt, R. Richards, W. Cooper, W. Terrett and O. Russell. The Sec., Mr. H. H. Mortimer, is a very obliging and courteous official, and though we understand this is his first venture as Secretary, he carried out his duties very successfully. Mr. Jno. Robson judged.

OXFORD HAS A RECORD ENTRY.

Third Open Show of the Oxford C.B.S., held Oct. 22. Entries came up well, totalling about 330, a record for the Society. In Norwich there were 147 entries in 10 classes, 19 being in the unfledged birds, Messrs. Stubbs Bros winning with a clinking bird. Several were overheard to say that they had never seen such a collection of Norwich, and there were many birds without cards that would have won at most shows.

Yorkshires were not quite so numerous, 57 birds in 6 classes. Messrs. Hawes Bros. were well to the fore with some of their well-known birds, securing 3 firsts out of 4 classes. In Hybrids entries were again good, 29 birds in the 3 classes. No doubt the pick of this clinking lot was Mr. Parlett's well-known and much discussed "White Rose," the noted light Canary-Bullie. British were not quite so strong as usual, probably because most birds are not ready yet, but Mr. Parlett secured the silver medal for the best British bird with a grand Linnet. In the small Foreign bird class Mrs. Longden secured first with a topping Violet-cared Waxbill. Three birds among the Amateur Norwich were claimed, and in the Open Norwich a grand yellow hen, exhibited by Mr. Collings, was claimed at £10. The Secretary, Mr. Holliday, had everything well in hand, and was assisted by a hard-working Committee. Mr. J. Robson judged.

NOR. YELL.: (14): 1. Hathaway, grand type, teeming with qual.; 2. Houghton, very large yell., must have pressed; 3. Dearlove, large, typical bird, fails a bit in wing car. to winner; vhc. Collins; he. Lees; c. Lovegrove; really grand class, not a bad one amongst them; two sets of winners could easily have been found. BUFF: 1. Hathaway, large and thick set, grand head and front, wonderful subs., stands well away; 2. Houghton, loses in size and subs. to winner, but a nice one; 3. Litchfield, useful bird, good qual., nicely feathered, well across perch; vhc. Miles; he. Irons; c. Silk. TKD. (15) another grand class: 1. Houghton, the noted saddle mkd. buff, grand head and front, rare subs., real short typical Norwich all over; 2. Irons, stout typical buff, loses only in col. to winner; 3. Hathaway, good head and front, fine feather, well shown; vhc. spl. Lewin, close up; he. Midgley; c. Irons. HEN. YELL. (10): 1. Collins, grand hen, good head, short and cobby, teeming with qual., claimed at catalogue price, £10; 2. Follwell, not quite the subs. of winner, good shape, nice feather, qual. all over; 3. Lewin, good head and front, the right stamp to breed with; vhc. Midgley; he. Philpot; c. Lovegrove. BUFF (14): 1. Lovegrove, good head and neck, rare subs., very typical, wins; 2. Wood, typical, not so short and chubby as winner, otherwise a very useful hen; 3. Houghton, good size, fine cond., lovely col. and plumage; vhc. Gough and Loach; he. c. Dearlove. UNFLIG. YELL. (7) splendid class, many good birds cardless: 1. Howe, large and typical, good head and front, nice qual.; 2. Collings, the Bristol winner; 3. DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

- (1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems.)
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must, of course, be sent to the Editor.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Borders, Scotch, or any other variety of Canary, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

HEAVY BREATHING (Bronco).—First see that bird is kept under healthful conditions, and is not exposed to direct cold draughts or frequent extremes of temperature, and do not allow it to hang near or over burning lights in the evenings, high up near the ceiling, nor in or very near a window. Then treat as follows for a month or so: Give a mixture of three parts Canary to one part summer rape as staple diet, and during the first week supplement this only with a spray of water-epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice. After the first week give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every third day, and on the intervening days give first half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and maw seed, and next a morsel of banana or some green salad. In the water every second day for a fortnight add five drops each of oxymel of squills, glycerine, ipecacuanha wine and sweet spirit of nitre.

SHOW CAGE FOR CRESTS (Tyro).—(1) The size of show cage for Crests should be 13 ins. long, 12 ins. high, and 5½ ins. deep, i.e., from back to front. (2) No, it should not have a bow front; just a plain flat front is all that is needed. In some patterns, however, the wooden top of cage is made to reach only about two-thirds the distance from back to front, and the wires of the front are bent to an angle at the top and extended to and inserted in the edge of the wooden top. Thus about a third of the top of cage is wired as well as the front. This type is not absolutely essential, but it is very useful in helping a judge to fully examine and appraise the value of a good Crest. (3) Three-eighths of an inch is a good average distance to allow between the wires. (4) The colour should be black outside and blue inside.

CONTINUALLY SNEEZING (E. Harding).—You are probably keeping the bird in an unfavourable position, where it is exposed to cold draughts, frequent extremes of temperature, or the fumes of burning lights. Any or all of these conditions must be removed before you can reasonably expect the bird to recover. See reply to "Bronco" in this issue, and treat your bird the same for a month or so, which should set matters right, if it is not already beyond relief.

NOT MOULTING (A. E. P.).—As the bird appears in good health and full song, if you keep it for singing only, I would advise you to leave well alone, and not endeavour to force on a moult which Nature is evidently not ready for. In all probability the bird may have moulted last spring or in the early summer, in which case it will follow the same course next spring, and if it is kept only as a singer this should be no detriment. But if you want the bird for breeding next season you may bring about a moult by giving a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and then sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a week or so, and on the alternate days add to the water 20 drops of whisky and five of syrup of saffron. After this, move the bird to a decidedly colder room for a few days, but be careful not to expose it to cold draughts, rapid and frequent extremes of temperature, or damp.

TO FIGHT THE FOE (Colin Brown).—Red mites undoubtedly undermine and permanently injure the health of birds which are being constantly bothered by them. It should not be at all difficult to thoroughly exterminate them in a single small cage. Remove first to a temporary cage, and thoroughly clean the infested one, burning all rubbish from it immediately. Then well saturate the cage all over inside and out with a solution of camphor in methylated spirit—an ounce in half-pint—using a small brush to work it well into the joints. Allow cage to remain empty and repeat this operation on each of the two following days, and remember on each occasion to deal thoroughly with all the appurtenances of the cage, and the position it has occupied. After this re-varnish and distemper cage, and when quite dry the bird may be returned. Allow bird to bathe freely. The above solution will destroy the varnish on cage. If you object to this you may use turpentine instead of spirit, but the spirit solution is quite the best.

LOSS OF VOICE (S. L.).—The loss of voice may be simply due to the effect of the moult, in which case it will gradually assume its full power again in the course of a few weeks even without treatment. Otherwise it is due to exposure to cold or damp, perhaps whilst the bird was barely clad. In any case, you may give a morsel of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and finally sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give the squills mixture as advised to "Bronco" in this issue. If the bird is not well in that time write again and repeat particulars.

SITS ON FLOOR (Mrs. Hamilton).—You should have repeated particulars about bird, as I cannot remember details of all I receive. Examine the bird's claws, and if they are much overgrown trim them back to a proper length. Then try what the following treatment will do for it. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition give twice a week a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and broken groats, and once a week on one of the intervening days a small teaspoonful of egg-food or bread and milk. Give a spray of water-cress four times a week. Every second day for a week dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, in the drinking water, and add ten drops of lemon juice, and afterwards give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

THE CASE FOR PAINT (Silliv).—Really, I know of no valid objection to the use of paint for the insides of breeding cages, provided only it is allowed to become thoroughly dry before birds are introduced. It certainly is used in breeding cages, though not so generally as in show cages, and this is probably partly for the sake of initial economy, which is no real saving in the end, and partly because a thorough overhaul and re-distemping every season is undoubtedly on the whole, a better safeguard against insect pests than even the most careful washing and disinfecting can be. Still there is no reason why you should not use paint as you purpose. If given a thin coat once a year afterwards I should say it would be decidedly better than distemper. As regards colour, it is difficult to advise definitely, as makers of different enamels and distempers call quite different colours by similar names. But the tint I like best for Canaries is a pale green, called "electric green" by the makers of a certain enamel.

A GOOD RESULT (F. H. Sale).—Many thanks for your letter reporting result of the treatment advised, and your kind remarks about "C.B.," which I am sure the Editor will appreciate. Am very glad to know the bird has made such a good recovery.

BEAUTY AND SONG (Clicher).—(1) I am afraid you cannot have the best in song and the best-looking bird combined in Canaries. The trained Roller is far and away the best songster, but it is quite the shabbiest-looking of the Canary tribe. Therefore, you will have to choose between something worth looking at and something worth hearing. A cross of Roller and Yorks or Norwich will give you a better-looking bird, but an inferior songster, though still a very fair one. (2) No, I have not found that spraying birds with quassia essence and water affects the eyeight. If not used excessively strong I do not think it would have any effect at all in this way. Personally, I am not in favour of spraying birds at all except in cases where it seems absolutely necessary, and such cases are very few.

HOW TO HAND-REAR (Nemo).—Given the necessary time, and plenty of patience and application it should not be at all difficult for you to hand-rear the young if the occasion should arise for someone to undertake this duty. If the hen will sit on the young and keep them warm without maltreating them, it will considerably lighten your task to allow her to do so. Otherwise you must keep them in the nest in a snug place covered lightly with a fold of flannel or woolen until they are getting well fedged. Reduce the usual egg food to the consistency of cream by the addition of a few drops of water, whilst the birds are very young, and gradually increase the consistency as they get older until it is about the same consistency of butter in warm weather. Moisture only sufficient at a time to last a few hours, to avoid any possibility of giving any stale or sour. Begin feeding soon after daybreak, and continue until dusk in the evening, and in the early morning offer food about every half hour, and again for an hour or two before ceasing feeding for the night feed as about as often, and give as much each time as the birds will gape for readily. During the day about every hour will be sufficiently often to feed them. No water will be necessary. During the morning, and again in the afternoon, each day add a little finely minced green salad, such as lettuce, to the food for two or three "meals." Pop the food in sufficiently small morsels for the birds to swallow well in the throat as the birds "gape," using a tiny chip of wood trimmed to a spatula shape for the purpose, or you can buy a small appliance called a "flup" feeder for the purpose, which you will often see advertised in our columns.

FOUR IN HAND (T. O. M.).—(1) Yes, where old mortar is difficult to procure, a mixture of cuttlefish, gravel, egg-shell, and powdered oyster shell, spread liberally on the cage floors should be all that is necessary to assist the hens to secrete plenty of shell-forming material. (2) One drop of castor or salad oil on the vent, and two drops of equal parts brandy and glycerine in the beak is very helpful. Steaming may be continued for ten or fifteen minutes at a time, due care being taken to avoid scalding. Afterwards wrap up bird or put in flannel-lined small cage and keep in a quite warm place until egg is laid. (3) In real egg-binding, there is always evidence of distress. The hen you mention showed it clearly enough when she left the nest.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

WOULD BE BREEDER (Novice).—I am sorry I am unable to decipher all your letter, but I gather from it that you wish to know if it is necessary to pair the birds together before placing them in the aviary. The usual method is to make a selection of birds and allow them to choose their own mates, because it is impossible to regulate them in any way when they are flying loose. In some cases where two birds are required to pair together, if these are kept in the same cage until the spring, and then turned out they will sometimes mate, especially when they have shown a particular liking for each other's company while caged. Generally a free breeding cock bird is the parent of the majority of the young. (2) Finches are destructive to trees placed in an aviary, Canaries and Hybrids more so than British birds.

MAKING BIRD LIME, ETC. (Pool Park).—I am sorry I am unable to give you directions for making bird lime. It is many years since I attempted its manufacture, and it is such a sneaky concoction that I need to buy what I required, and I would advise you to do the same. Occasionally a recipe is printed in CAGE BIRDS, and if you have any old copies by you you could possibly look it up. (2) Feed your fresh caught linnets on a supply of mixed seeds, including wild seeds, and let them have a pot of soaked teazel and rape always in front of them, also a little cracked hemp seed. After a time the soaked seed can be gradually left off. When they have been caged live or six days, give them a little Epsom or Glauber Salts in the drinking water. If the weather is suitable, so that you can collect a bunch of shepherd's purse and other wild food, it will assist them. (3) Freshly caught larks require a little fresh soft food daily, a liberal allowance of insects, canary seed, grouts, and a little crushed hemp, and a spray of green food. Many birds are put straight on to soaked bread and crushed hemp, but I think the Skylark is worthy of better fare, and would advise a good brand of insectile food for a week or two. The drinking water for all freshly caught birds should be placed inside the cage, so that they find it easily.

LINNET DOING BADLY (A. T.).—You appear to be unfortunate in your attempts at Linnet-keeping, and it is just possible you have this time got hold of an old bird that has almost run his course. Your feeding appears to be excellent, although just now I would advise you to give him a pot of soaked teazel and rape fresh daily, also try him with just a small cube of bread soaked in hot milk, and if he takes it, drop two drops of cod liver oil emulsion upon it. I would also advise a small teaspoonful of Chemical Food in the drinking water; boil the water first or it will not mix. Keep his cage perfectly clean, give nice sharp grit and a little grated cuttlefish bone. With this treatment you should be able to pull him round.

WHAT SEEDS? (H. Hall).—The sample of seed sent is not charlock, but appears to me to be very much like shepherd's purse; this grows abundantly in some fields, and is frequently collected with the growing crops. All the Finches are fond of it, particularly the Linnet. If you have a supply you can give it to your Canaries, using it in with your mixed seed or giving a little as it is about twice a week.

PRESERVING BIRD SKINS (A. T.).—If your Pheasant skin is in good condition it is not the fault of the preservative that has caused it to go dull. No preservative will keep the plumage so glossy as when the bird is alive; this is very noticeable in some species, and I have seen them lose their gloss shortly after death, so much so that the specimen has quite lost its value. If you are not quite satisfied with your present method, why not try arsenical soap, or one of the preservatives sold by animalists?

THE WHITE-LEGGED GOLDFINCH (Admirer).—As you probably know, a freshly caught Goldfinch has dark legs; this colour it retains until the moult, when, if the bird is moulted indoors, its legs lose their blackness and each succeeding moult become paler, until they are almost white. (2) You could hang your Finch outside on fine days, but not when it is very windy. Wherever you hang him put him in such a position that he is fairly comfortable; do not place him where you would not care to stay yourself.

LINNET WITH BARE PATCH (Eye Trouble).—If you can find no trace of insects upon the bird's plumage the cause of the trouble would be improper feeding. Unfortunately you do not tell me how you treat him. Give him an aperient first, just as much Glauber salts as will cover a sixpence, dissolved in his drinking water, for one day; repeat in two or three days later. Continue to bathe the eye if at all inflamed with half a spoonful of boracic powder dissolved in half a cup of warm water. Damp the powder and rub it into a paste before adding the water. Feed on canary 3 parts, teazel 2 parts, rape and linseed 1 part each. Get a packet of good wild seed mixture and give a spoonful twice a week. Let him have a good supply of wild food, chickweed, shepherd's purse, groundsel, sowthistle, and others which you can still collect in the open on waste ground and along the country roads. Keep the bird free from draughts and hang below the gas at night. If the bird has lost much of its plumage and looks unsightly, just smear a little Kerol ointment over the places for 4 or 5 days, but do not continue it; wait a fortnight and repeat if necessary.

TROUBLE WITH CUCKOO (W. Vickery).—The Cuckoo is one of the most difficult birds to keep in health for any length of time. It is not so much the difficulty of feeding them, for they will eat anything, but giving them the food to suit them. I fear yours has had too much meat, which has affected the liver, and consequently caused death, and I am afraid your other bird will follow him, if he has not already done so. When a bird like the Cuckoo commences to lose flesh there is practically no remedy. If you should have one another year, let his staple food be a high-class insectile mixture, occasionally mixing with it a little finely chopped hard-boiled egg; cut up some greenfood, lettuce, watercress, and occasionally a little scraped raw carrot, and mix it with it. For insect food, he should have mealworms, beetles, well-scoured gentles, and any caterpillars, etc., you could lay your hands on. Feeding these, just a little scraped or shredded lean meat—mutton, fowl, and rabbit are the best. Although Cuckoos are interesting, as novelties, it is doubtful if they are very desirable cage birds. Considering the time one must spend upon them, I think it is possible to get far more pleasure from some of the other species.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

TANAGERS (F. D. S.).—Necklace Tanager; this name is loosely applied to more than one species of Chlorophonia, but it is mostly the All Green that is so sold, and is most freely imported, and the majority of Necklace Tanagers I have seen have been Chlorophonia viridis. The Black-checked or Lesser Rufous-necked Tanager is Calliste caryana.

AMAZON PARROT (Von Kluck).—(1) I conclude you mean the hook of the beak is half-inch long; if so, this is a little too long. As regards the claws, you must let the way the bird moves about be your guide. If the claws hamper the bird's movement they must be shortened, but if you have never before this operation before, you had better get some fancier or veterinary to do it for you, as you must not cut back to the quick. By watching, you should be able to do this yourself afterwards. (2) Nothing in this, I think. (3) More or less natural, but for a month or six weeks it would be well to put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water once a week. (4) This query needs no answer, as the book you name should prove a safe guide. Treating the above queries as a whole, I should advise you to keep cuttlebone in the cage, also a small log of wood with the bark on, for the bird to exercise its beak upon. It should then require but little trimming down. Whenever there appears the least sign of constipation, give an aperient at once.

MADAGASCAR LOVEBIRDS (A. M. Cook).—This species requires rather a large nesting box, as they carry in a lot of rubbish for their nest, such as leaves, thin strips of bark, small twigs, millet spray stems, etc., all of which you must supply. If you wish them to have any chance of breeding, I do not consider the cage any too big for them without company, though Budgerigars would agree with them, and there is a possibility that both species would go to nest, but you must judge of space by fixing up two hanks at one end of your cage and a small barrel at the other end, then if the space in your cage is not too much used up, you make the attempt with both species. The Budgerigars would certainly breed. So long as they are not exposed to draught both species are hardy and need no special protection. Watch against constipation; at the least signs of this put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the water as often as required to keep the bowels properly regulated.

WEAVERS AND COCKATOOS (Appreciative Reader).—If with the exception of dark brown markings on wing and back it changes to a fiery scarlet, then it is a Madagascar Weaver, but the names of these are legion, and can only be defined by a full description of the males in colour. It is only during the breeding season that the cock wears his brilliant garment; during the off season he is very similar to the hen, who retains her "sparrow-like" garment all the year round. Here are a few of those more or less frequently on the market:—Orange, Crimson-crowned, Madagascar, Comora, Grenadier, Napoleon, Red-billed, etc.; some of these are often advertised with the affix Bishop instead of Weaver. As regards the Rose-breasted Cockatoo, I do not think there is much prospect of its breeding in such a cage as you could give it, but if you have a spare attic which you could give up to them, fixing up some good-sized branches for them to climb about on, anything, say, from six to one inch in diameter would meet the case, and also put up a hollow log or barrel, then you should have a good prospect of success, but you would have to protect with metal or wire netting all the exposed wood fittings of the room. If you have a moderately sized out-building, they are quite hardy and would do well in it, but it must be well lighted and strong, or they would soon cut their way out. It requires to be fitted up as above—a wooden building should be lined with half-inch mesh wire netting to prevent their escape.

GREEN CHINESE (S. W. Smith).—Treat the bird as already advised, but you will have to persevere with the treatment, as birds which get into this condition take some time to recover. Keep a watch on the excreta, and at the least sign of constipation give a mild aperient (one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water) once or twice till full relief is given. On the days you are not giving other medicines in the water, half a teaspoonful of syrup of hypophosphites in the drinking water will benefit the bird. Also I should give it a piece of sponge into which you have allowed four or five drops of cod liver oil emulsion to soak; give this twice a day for some little time, say, at least two months, then only once a day, and then gradually give less frequently as the bird's condition indicates less need for it, but ceasing only when the bird and its plumage is in good condition. You must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. Report progress in about two months' time.

KEEPING BIRDS OUTSIDE (Mowgli).—Under the conditions you name I think it would be better to house the Coron Bleus and Lavenders indoors during the winter months, keeping them in a roomy cage; the temperature of any ordinary living room will suffice. The other birds should do well outside. It will also be best to put a door to the opening you speak about, leaving in it three or four small holes for the birds to go in and out by. If you fix a small platform to each hole, both inside and out, the birds will soon get accustomed to using them. Cordon Bleus and Lavender Finches are kept out of doors and in the best of condition too, but this can only be done with birds that are in finest condition when the winter starts, and if they begin to show the least signs of "going soft" they must be brought in at once. If your aviary is very dry and the locality not a damp one, then I should say that the Cordons and Lavenders would winter it safely therein, but I should not attempt this this winter unless the birds have been in their present quarters practically the whole of the summer. From the above you should be able to deduce, according to your locality and other conditions, the best course to take.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

E. Hight.—Glad to get your cheerful letter and to hear that the sale was such a decided success.

Constant Reader.—The catching of Goldfinches is prohibited almost everywhere. They are protected all the year round in Glamorganshire.

A. S.—In the strict letter of the law we fancy the permission of the district surveyor to be necessary. But if the erection is of wood you are not in the least likely to experience official interference—the height, and, in fact, the dimensions over all, are so comparatively insignificant.

J. W.—We do not think highly of the wild seed sample. It is very dusty and is composed practically entirely of "wild rapes," with a little of knot grass and persicaria seeds. It requires thoroughly sifting and cleansing before being given to birds. To destroy any mites, spread on a tin and place in a moderately hot oven for ten to fifteen minutes.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutshell No. 14," from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2d. From agents (see list frequently published).

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutshell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once, 2d. post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-checked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased £5 from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. BUSINESS WITH ME is not a matter of bubble and squeak; there's no question of cutting down quality to price. My one aim is to supply thoroughly serviceable articles at prices consistent with highest quality; so that intending purchasers may assure themselves of this fact. I send everything I sell on approval on the understanding that if the article is in any way misrepresented by me, or that a better article may be purchased elsewhere at anything like the same money, my goods may be smashed up or destroyed in any manner, and I undertake to refund the whole of the purchase money. Clap nets, made from superline fin. mesh netting, 3 yards long, 5 1/2 feet deep, and 4 feet ply, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Clap net consists of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed of above measurement, and are fitted complete with pegs, poles, and lines, ready for immediate use. Loose netting, specially knitted for bird catching, same as used in above nets, 1in. mesh, 7 feet deep, 5d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Specially strong netting, for use on rough ground and making sparrow nets, 1in. mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 ins., 1/2; ditto, 18 by 14 ins., 11d. each, post free. Please note, my net traps have no old-fashioned board arrangement about them, they are by far the most effective traps on the market, can be baited for hard and softbills at same time, and call-bird may be used inside them if desired; single trap cages, 6d.; double ditto, 1/-; treble ditto, 1/3 each; the above trap cages all have separate compartment for call bird in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 23927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each; genuine Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to catch and hold any bird to Roak's size in every weather, 1lb. 6d., 1lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 3d.; all post free. Sparrow nets, on 19 feet bamboo poles, 6/6 complete; flirt pegs, 8d. each, post free; absolutely everything required by catchers always in stock; send stamp for complete list, which also gives hints on net making. Practically every professional bird catcher in the kingdom gets his living with articles supplied by me, and what they think of them the following letter will show: "Sutton Rookery, near Long Sutton, Wisbech, Sept. 9.—Sir,—Last season I caught 400 cock Linnets in 5 hours, and averaged 107 cocks per day right through the season, and every bird was caught in nets supplied by you. I have had other nets for 16 years, but they are useless compared with yours. I can catch more Linnets in one day in your nets than I can in any other I have (and I have several makes) in a month. Your nets do not frighten the birds like others do and I get my living during catching season with nets, so I require the best. Yours are the best that are made, and not only best but cheapest. I shall want another in about a week.—Yours, J. C. Ball." (Mr. Ball claims to be the largest catcher in a county noted for its catchers (Lincolnshire) so he certainly knows what he is talking about.—W. Gore.) The above letter may be inspected here at any time, and I offer £10 to anyone that can prove that this or any other testimonial I have ever published is not genuine and uncollected. (1828)

THE "CAGE BIRD'S" GIFT TO ITS READERS.

To keep the banner of business flying amid the storms of war, "Cage Birds" gives its readers the rare opportunity this week of possessing, practically as a gift, the £1 MODERN ENGLISH DICTIONARY, the latest and ripest product of modern scholarship. At all book-sellers this identical book—bound sumptuously in leather—cannot be had for less than £1 net. Special arrangements have been made for a certain limited quantity of these books to be distributed to "Cage Birds" readers for a sum of 5s. each, including postage. The distribution of this essential, this lovely book, as Mrs. Philip Snowden calls it, is not a sale, but really a present to readers of "Cage Birds." Wartime gifts

£1 for 5/- Post Free.

"Publishers in the past have done much to make the average person loathe and detest the sight of a dictionary, but the volume under notice is an excellent example of what a good dictionary should be. The editors and contributors bear names illustrious in literature and education. . . . It is handy in size, the type is large and legible, and the contents are reliable and trustworthy."—THE CLARION

they are in fact. In these times of deep and solemn patriotism every man is proud of our national language and literature, that golden bond of sweet English speech which makes the Empire one. This beautiful book is a worthy memorial and treasury of that language. It contains the latest words. It is indispensable to every man and woman.

SIR WILLIAM RAMSAY, K.C.B., D.Sc., etc., world-famed scholar and scientist, writes: "The handsome Dictionary. I have tested it in several ways and found it exact. I hope it may have the success it deserves."

BOUND IN GENUINE LIMP LEATHER. 1914 EDITION. SUPERBLY ILLUSTRATED.

A GUARANTEE from The Editor of "Cage Birds."

The Editor of "Cage Birds" positively guarantees to refund the amount paid by any reader who finds after receiving the Modern English Dictionary, that it is not entirely satisfactory and as represented; such money will be returned at once and in full.

Club Reports.

DARVEL C.B.S.

General meeting, Oct. 23, Town Hall, before a fair turnout. Final arrangements were made for Club Show, Nov. 14, schedule of 25 classes was drawn up, entries not later than Nov. 11, so members come away with your entries and make the show a huge success.—James Fairful, Sec.

GLASGOW (Bridgeton E. End) O.S.
Meeting, Vice-President, Mr. J. Muir, in chair. The first business was entries for annual show, Nov. 7. Judging from 10 to 1; doors open at 1. Prize drawing for gift class, which contains 7 valuable Canaries and cages given by members, will take place at 5; also presentation of cups, medals, and prizes to winners.—D. Burnett, Sec.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Special meeting Shields Cafe, Bigg Market, Oct. 29. Mr. M. C. Potts chair. Messrs. T. Robson, T. Dixon, and W. Reid were selected as judges for show, Nov. 14. Entrance, 1s. per cage; 6s., 4s., 3s., 2s. prize-money; if less than 15 entries any class, entry fees will be divided in the proportion of 6, 4, 3 and 2. Classes for judges decided on. Show closes 8.30.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

POPLAR C.B.S.

Meeting, Headquarters, All Hallows School Room, East India Dock Road, Oct. 29. After general business, including final arrangements for Annual Show, Nov. 7, in the School Rooms, doors open at one o'clock (Poplar is noted for quality, come and see them). Mr. J. Wyatt gave his lecture and exhibition on Canary washing, which was thoroughly enjoyed. The lecturer was then plied with questions for the benefit and interest of the members. Vote of thanks to Mr. Wyatt terminated the meeting.—F. H. Marhoff, Hon. Assist. Sec.

CRESTED CANARY CLUB.

The committee have accorded the L.C.B.A. the following support: 5s. for the best Crest; 5s. for best Crestbred; 10s. 6d. for best 1914 Crested wearing the club's closed ring; 10s. 6d. for best 1914 Crestbred ditto; 5s. for best yellow Crest; 5s. for best yellow Crestbred; 5s. for best Novice Crest; 5s. best Novice Crestbred. All members must add C.C.C. on entry form for inclusion in catalogue. There must not be less than 4 competing members for each and every special, and no member can win more than one cash special.—J. Tyson, Sec.

BIRTLEY, CHESTER-LE-STREET AND PELTON FELL (Amal.)

We are holding our 1st annual members' show in the Dun Cow Hotel, Chester-le-Street, Nov. 7, when we are looking forward to our members giving our judge (Mr. J. Riscborough, of Sunderland) plenty of work to do. As members have had a very fair breeding season, fanciers visiting the district will have an opportunity of seeing some good birds. If any member who has not received a schedule will bring his birds to the show by 10 a.m. he can get them entered. Specials and donations are coming in very well, so members rally up.—R. Ward, Sec.

ABERTILLERY C.B.S.

Meeting Oct. 28, Prince of Wales Hotel, Mr. Probert presiding. Mr. Broome, of Blenavon, sent a letter asking for a members' show to be held at Blenavon, and it was unanimously decided that we should hold same about the middle of January. Messrs. A. Hoskins and F. Taylor, of Newbridge, and E. Warr and W. Small, Abertillery, were elected as members. I understood that two or three more fanciers will be nominated at next meeting. A discussion took place re the Welsh National Show, and it was decided that sec. should represent the society at Cardiff next Saturday. The well-known Yorkshire fancier, Mr. Newell, was elected as assistant sec. The presentation of members' specials terminated a very pleasant evening. Now, members, rally up at next meeting, Nov. 14, at 7.30.—H. H. Mortimer, Hon. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held Oct. 26. Mr. P. Critchlow (Hanford) elected a member. Show delegate's report was considered satisfactory. Mr. F. W. Alcock was appointed as steward to assist at the Hanley Show. Secretary was instructed to forward list of financial members' names who are eligible to exhibit at the coming inter-club shows, to the show secretaries. Members who have paid no subscriptions will not be included in this list. Next meeting Monday, Nov. 9.—J. Plitchford, Sec.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE (East End)

Meeting Oct. 28, Leighton's School, Heaton Road. Mr. Hutchison presiding over a good attendance. Two new members were elected—Messrs. Farrar and Hyslop, Newcastle. Decided to add a gift class to schedule, the birds to be given to donors of specials. I hope members will do their best regarding this, and let me have a good account next meeting, Nov. 11. Classes being allotted to judges, and rules drawn up for show, the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chairman.—J. W. Coult, Sec.

REDHILL C.B.S.

The Southern Border Fancy Club has decided to give the patronage to Redhill Show Dec. 2. There is a good list of specials for members. I have been able to get the Y.M.C.A. Rooms, well lighted and perfectly free from draughts. I make an earnest appeal for all members to send us as many entries as possible. There need be no anxiety about the trains, as there are plenty run to Redhill, it being a junction, and I shall see that all trains are met so that birds will be in the hall all night, and not on the station.—A. W. Bacon, Hon. Sec.

ALTRINGHAM (Open) C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 21, Station Cafe, Mr. T. Harrison presiding over a splendid meeting. Mr. W. Robinson fully demonstrated and gave advice on how a bird should be handwashed. Six novice members made attempts at copying Mr. Robinson's methods with moderately good success. Mr. Robinson complimenting one novice for the way he handled his bird. The meeting was much indebted to the demonstrator for his good advice and splendid lesson, and passed a unanimous vote of thanks. Members' Show, Nov. 21, 1 to 8.30, Rigby Memorial Schools, Navigation-rd. Proceeds to be given in aid of the local Relief Fund. Great efforts are to be made to ensure a successful show, especially as one of our members, Mr. A. Jackson, is reported as missing from the 1st Cheshire Regt., now on active service.—Chas. Bailey, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Committee meeting at London and P.O.S. Show, Lambeth Baths, Oct. 28. Decided that owing to the usual patronage not being able to be taken up by shows according to the existing rules of the club, that at the forthcoming Show of the London C.B.A., the S.N.P.H. Club give six cash specials of 5s. each, for competition among its members exhibiting at the show, three to champion section and three to novice. Mr. J. W. Ramsden will give two silver cigarette cases to novice section, Mr. Crawford a lady's umbrella to champion section, and myself (Hon. Sec.), a box of Scotch shortbread, and a box of chocolate biscuits. The committee hope that members that have not paid yet will kindly do so without an official notice. In order to keep expenses in hand, there will be no rule book issued for 1914. The particulars of competition will be issued in the schedule of the London C.B.A., but subs. must be paid before date of show to our club. Any fancier joining now will be eligible to compete.—F. S. Matthes, Hon. Sec., 34, Rotherhithe New Road, S.E.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Societies accepting our patronage, and the dates of the shows are:—London C.B.A., Nov. 26, 27, and 28, judge Mr. D. Jenkins; Redhill, Dec. 2, judge not yet appointed; and Llanely, Jan. 12, judge Mr. H. Norman. The list of specials as published in the year book has been cancelled, and the following are the specials now offered for competition this season: Diploma for best Bord.; 2s. 6d. best champ. Bord.; 2s. 6d. best novice Bord.; 2s. 6d. best fourth prize Bord.; 5s. most points at each show; 10s. most points during the season, all birds to count; 10s. 6d. most points gained throughout the season in Greens and Canas., exhibitors' two highest birds at each show to count. Members will agree this is a very liberal list. I know you all hate to mutilate your CAGE BIRDS, but just cut this paragraph out, stick it in a prominent place in the bird-room, and make up your mind to win at least one of these specials. The committee hope that every member will do his utmost to support the patronage shows, indeed all catering for "We Gems."—Geo. Burton, Sec. (pro tem.).

The schedule of the Bradford National show will be advertised next week, writes Mr. S. Midgley, the Hon. Sec. I keep having enquiries for schedules, but we decided to advertise it through CAGE BIRDS, instead of sending out the same.

The Bangor C.B.S. intends to hold its annual show this year as usual, writes Mr. Sam Shannon, sec. The committee have decided to change the dates from Jan. 7 and 8, 1915, to Dec. 3 and 4, 1914. Judge, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, of Liverpool, has kindly consented to facilitate the committee in carrying out this arrangement.

All prize-money and money for birds claimed are paid, and on behalf of the Oxford show committee I should like to thank all exhibitors who supported us. We were especially pleased to see visitors from as far away as Wolverhampton, Emsworth, Northampton, Henley-on-Thames, and many other towns, and trust other committees will be as well supported as we were.—J. A. Lees, hon. treas. Oxford C.B.S.

ALL JUDGES AND SHOWS SHOULD USE OUR

JUDGING BOOK.

The advantage this book has over others is that it has 3 columns for awards, and is therefore a great help to, and a double check for judges, while there is always a slip free to be sent to the printers of the catalogue.

Maryhill and Dis. O.A. is unable to hold its annual show on Saturday, Nov. 7, owing to the Burgh Hall being required for military purposes, writes Mr. A. Jardine.

Mr. Jas. Stewart writes that the Yorkshire classes at Whitehaven Show are open to all, Mr. R. Tindale, Newcastle, will judge. The Linnet classes will be judged by Mr. J. B. Moore, Whitehaven.

I am sorry to have to advertise and part with my birds, writes Mr. M. Williams (Ashbourne), but am compelled, after my severe illness, as in all my spare time I am obliged to go out.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Robson (Carlisle).

Fanciers throughout the country will learn with regret that we have to announce the death of Mrs. Robson, of Carlisle, the mother of the widely-known judge, Mr. John Robson, and we are sure all will join us in an expression of sympathy with this popular fancier in his great affliction. Mrs. Robson passed away on Oct. 28, and was interred at Carlisle on Sunday last, Nov. 1.

All communications to the Newtongrange C.B.S. should be addressed to Mr. John Nelson, 85, Dean Park, the new hon. sec.

Mr. H. C. Clegg, hon. sec., writes that at the show of the Halifax O.S., Nov. 20-21, 12 open novice classes will be provided. Limit £5 5s.

Schedules for the show of the Glasgow C.B.A., Nov. 20, 21, have been posted to over 1,000 exhibitors. If any fancier has been overlooked, a postcard to W. Hutchison, 163, Hospital St., Glasgow, will get one.

The Members' Show of the Leith O.S., will be held Nov. 14. There are 10 classes in the Scotch Fancy section, 13 in the Norwich, 14 in Border section, and 17 in British and Mules, and the show will be well worth a visit from Leith fanciers.

Mr. A. P. Snook, Streatham, writes that the reason he is advertising his Borders and Norwich is that he has been called up to serve in France under the British Red Cross, and expects to be away for at least six months.

The City and Suburban A.C.B. again issues a fine schedule for its annual members' show on Nov. 13 and 14, there being a wonderful list of special prizes, no less than 129, which speaks well for the persuasive powers of the hon. sec., Mr. V. Wynn, in these difficult times. The quarterly balance-sheet of the society shows £22 4s. cash in hand.

We have received a postcard bearing the Treherbert postmark, and reading as follows; no name of society is given and no place of meeting:—"Will you kindly insert under Club notices that a meeting of members is called for Wednesday, Nov. 11, at 8; important business.—H. Watts, Sec., pro tem."

The recent London and P.O.S. show, at the Lambeth Baths was especially supported by specials, several of which were presented by well-known fanciers' providers. Besides 27 half-crown cash specials given by members of the society Mrs. Huggins gave a pair of silver-plated salt-cellars, Mrs. Askham a flask of Eau-de-Cologne, Mr. Parlett a silver medal, Mr. Ramsden three silver-mounted cigarette cases, Messrs. Baron one of their well-known and useful "Kosy Carriers," another of these being given anonymously, Messrs. Rudd and Co., Bishopsgate St., two specials of seeds, Messrs. Goodman and Co., six of their flip feeders, and Messrs. Hyde and Co., goods to the value of 5s.

Cages for our Hospital Scheme

Last week we explained that owing to the gratifying demand for Canaries under our scheme to supply a songster to convalescent homes and hospitals housing wounded soldiers and sailors, there was a likelihood of there being a shortage of cages to hold the birds, though promises by readers of the birds themselves were amply sufficient.

We have the pleasure this week of announcing a goodly response to our appeal for cages. We are still, however, open for more. We gladly acknowledge, too, sums of 20s., from R. W. Cooper, Esq. (all the way from Karachi, India), and 5s. from A. E. Brooks, Esq. (Cambridge) for the purpose of purchasing suitable cages. Readers who have no house-cages to spare may, of course, help in a similar way; or may send us a promise to purchase and forward a cage if called upon (i.e., if our supply should prove to run short).

Mr. E. M. Stanton, cagemaker, 33, Boothfield, Winton, Manchester, generously writes that he will supply a suitable house cage, size 18 by 17 by 10, listed at 5s., for 4s. 3d. (fully fitted) to readers desirous of presenting one or more to the war hospitals, providing the orders are sent through us. It seems an admirable offer, and no doubt will appeal to our readers.

Messrs. Capern (Ltd.), Bristol, have already promised to supply free all the necessary seeds; and Messrs. Trower and Co. (London) the bird-sand.

All promises (or enquiries) should be addressed to The Editor, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

Prize Money Paid.

We hear that prize-money has been paid in respect of the following shows. Any who may have been overlooked should apply to the respective secretaries: Wisbech, Forfar, and City of Bradford O.S.

THE HARVEST OF ENTRIES.

MORE RECORDS BROKEN.

The harvest of entries for plucky promoters of shows continues to be a record one—every show, in fact, seems to be doing better than ever it did before!

Leicester Show is being held this week-end, and just as we go to press we receive the following:

"PLEASED TO INFORM YOU THAT LEICESTER SHOW IS A RECORD. THE NORWICH AND BRITISH CLASSES ARE MARVELLOUS."—A. Freestone, Sec.

This is great business, and very cheering news indeed, coming, as it does, on top of the record at Manchester and the records at Forfar, and Haddington achieved last week.

Keep up the good work, fanciers.

Huddersfield's President

Answers the Call.

The members of the Huddersfield O.S. have lost for the present the services of their valued President, Mr. R. Rhodes, writes Mr. B. H. Clegg, the asst. sec. He has heard his country's call and joined the colours (R.F.A.). Mr. Rhodes' wide circle of friends in Yorkshire and throughout the Fancy will wish him good luck and a safe return to his wife and family when the war is over.

Support Old Shildon.

Exhibitors, and especially those in the Tyne-side and North Country districts, should not overlook the opportunity Old Shildon show (Nov. 13 and 14) provides them with. There is a good all-round classification, and a grand hall to hold the birds, while two good and popular judges, Messrs. J. Stanger and W. Reid, officiate. Entries close Monday, Nov. 9, to Mr. J. Ainsworth, sec., 15, Vaughan Street, Shildon, Durham; send them along, fanciers.

The Great Horticultural Hall Show.

The Open Norwich P.C. has granted its full support, we are informed; and particulars of the Crested C.C. patronage appear on page 215. Mr. R. L. Crisp has withdrawn from judging the champion Yorkshire section, and will officiate over the Novice birds, changing places with Mr. F. Easterling, who takes on the champion classes. The reason for this change is that Mr. Crisp has sold, we regret to hear, all his birds and cages, and there is a possibility that some may be exhibited by their new owner in the champion classes at this show.

CORRECTIONS IN SHOW REPORTS.

Mr. Steuart won the sp. best nov. and 4th in the Nov. Green Yorks. at Liverpool, not Stewart. The 2nd in unfig. yell. Nor. at Oxford (Mr. W. Collins) was not the Bristol winner, as stated; Oxford was its first time out. At the London and P.O.S. show, Lambeth Baths, the awards in the Yorks. clear or ticked buff class were: 1, sp., Kent; 2, Hall; 3, Fairman; vhc, Jones; hc, Salter; c, Buckingham; not as printed in our report.

SHOW DATES FIXED.

To secure insertion in this column, a guarantee that the show will be advertised in "C.B." to the extent of at least 25/- must be sent to our manager. Please note that we only insert those that guarantee, so our list is a bona-fide one.

It may happen that a proportion of the readers of CAGE BIRDS, scattered as they are throughout the country, are not yet aware that the London newspaper, "The Daily Telegraph," has instituted a shilling fund as a Christmas gift to the indomitable Soldier-King Albert of Belgium, for his people. This laudable effort is happily entitled "Our Debt of Honour to Brave Belgium," and we are sure that there is not a single bird-lover in our kingdom who would not be anxious to be associated with so noble an object. We therefore appeal with the utmost confidence to every one of our readers to help to swell the fund, which has already reached the magnificent total of well over a million shillings.

A shilling from a working man will express as much sympathy as a fat cheque from a richer person, and even those who cannot spare a shilling from their own pittance can gather the pence from their friends and send them along. Our Scottish readers know the application of the proverb "Mony a mickle mak' a muckle." It is in the power of the humblest to help to swell this magnificent fund until it represents indeed the Debt of Honour due by those who have mercifully been spared the actual horrors of war experienced by so many thousands of the poorest inhabitants of unhappy Belgium.

Contributions should not be sent to us, but forwarded direct to "The Editor, 'The Daily Telegraph,' Fleet Street, E.C." the envelopes being plainly endorsed "Belgian Fund." Cards for collecting will be forwarded to those willing to canvass their friends, none of whom should be able to resist the impulse to subscribe to so noble an object.

Well-known Welshman for the Front

Mr. R. E. Griffiths, the well-known Welsh fancier and judge, of Carnarvon, writes that he is now quartered at 71, Vernon Street, Northampton, serving his country with the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Private Griffiths will be glad to make the acquaintance of any of the fanciers of Northampton (write or call) and he also asks us to convey his heartfelt greetings to old friends in Wales. He regrets being unable to exhibit now, and that he will in a week or two have to advertise his birds (including all his winners) for sale. Mr. Griffiths' many friends will join us in wishing him the best of luck.

IS THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD THE MOST POPULAR CANARY?

With Hints on its Breeding. One of the "Ten Minute Lectures" recently delivered before the City and Suburban A.C.B.

By
W. E. COBB
(Dollis Hill, N.W.)

IN listening to my remarks I will ask you to bear in mind that the bird I shall speak about is to me the best of all birds. At the same time I do not desire to deal with the subject with a biased mind, but from the point of view of a true fancier, seeing the good points in all birds, though having a predominant partiality for one in particular.

My own favourite bird is the Norwich Plainhead. I want you to picture to yourself a bold bird, of jaunty carriage, standing as if just ready to hop to another perch, with a large head, broad skull (but no browng), short thick neck, deep chest and broad back, short well-carried wings, and short neatly folded tail standing out from the body in a direct line, with no suspicion of being carried up like that of the Robin, or of drooping as though it were too heavy for the bird.

The Canary of Canaries.

If such a bird has a fine, silky quality of feather, and is a yellow with plenty of colour (showing a depth which looks almost red, proving to the experienced eye that the bird has been carefully bred for colour as well as fed for colour), then I see my favourite bird. If this bird also has nice even markings on both eyes, together with even marked wings, and with the wings particularly well carried, then it is that I see not only my favourite, but a bird that gladdens the eye and the heart of its breeder—the Canary par excellence, the very essence of all that is good in the breeder's art. It marks the pinnacle of your ambition, for this bird must have all the several attributes of the exhibition clear yellow Norwich Plainhead, and in addition these clearly defined markings. Then it is indeed my favourite bird!

There are some fanciers who claim the clear yellow to be the height of perfection; and possibly they are correct. Further, there are people who hold the same claims for the clear buff bird. Certainly the buff, if carrying a beautiful meal (or "frosting") together with a deep undercolour, is a very beautiful bird. But neither of these, in my humble opinion, can compare with the four-pointed yellow bird, though I like the others very much.

Why It Is So Popular.

Now to consider some of the reasons why the Norwich Plainhead is so popular. In the first place I think it an ideal Englishman's bird. We picture our proverbial John Bull as a hale and hearty gentleman, of portly appearance, and who seems to greet you with a "Hail fellow, well met." It is just so with this variety of Canary. He is all John Bull in figure—has a fine outstanding chest which gives him the appearance of fearing nothing. This, I think, is one of the reasons that the bird first appealed to me—its commanding appearance, if I may so put it.

Then, too, I suppose the Norwich is the most popular Canary in existence. Some of you may not agree with me in this, of course; it is a very debatable point. At all events, it is usually easy to dispose of one's surplus birds, and a bird of outstanding merit will always bring a good price if the owner is disposed to part with it.

Then I suppose there is a greater demand for Norwich songsters than for those of any other variety. The bird is a lusty singer, and makes a very admirable pet. Again, this variety is hardy and prolific, and these two points should be, and in fact are, well considered by many when commencing in the fascinating hobby of bird-keeping.

I have no doubt that some of the breeders of the Yorkshire variety will contend that their bird is the best, the most popular, most prolific, and the hardiest; I can only say it would be hard to convince me that their contentions are correct. I have often been struck by remarks made to me about the Yorkshire Canary, of course by people knowing nothing about the show points of the bird. They have said: "How miserably thin"; "Ho looks half starved"; and so on. Mind, I don't say that I altogether agree with them. I merely point this out to show the average outsider's view.

Another point with the Yorkshire is that if the bird is a short one (and you are bound to get some short ones), then it looks puny and insignificant, and for this reason does not appeal to me.

I suppose the next in favour is the Border Fancy. I will dismiss this at once, for it is altogether too small a bird for my liking. I will remind you of the significant remark made in this room some time ago by one of our members: "It seems to me that when you have bred a house-full they are not worth a bag of seed the lot."

The other varieties of Canary are hardly to be considered from the "popular" point of view. The Crest is the rich man's bird, and in the hands of quite a few breeders, comparatively. Lizards and Lancashires have been declining for years, and unless fresh interest is aroused in them they may die out in time. The London Fancy has practically gone; and the Belgian and Scotch Fancy Canaries are varieties which do not seem to be able to catch on sufficiently to become what might be termed popular birds. These few comparisons bring us to two, or perhaps three, varieties, as being really unpopular birds, and of these my favourite, the Norwich Plainhead, will always hold its own.

Regarding the breeding of Norwich, I suppose I follow the lines generally adopted. I pair yellow to buff or buff to yellow, unless it may be necessary to double buff for any reason. I always keep a fair sprinkling of variegated or marked birds to pair up; by so doing you are breeding colour.

What the Novice Should Do.

In pairing I consider novices should spend a great deal more time in the weighing up of the good and bad points before deciding which two birds shall be mated. I have frequently had three different cocks in a showage alongside a hen which I thought a good deal of, before being able to decide which was the best bird to pair her with.

First consider your head properties. If one bird fails in any particular point, then be sure that the partner you choose excels in the point which the other fails in. The same method should be adopted over the whole body of the bird. This brings you to a careful balancing of points. If the faults are carefully countered then an improvement must follow. When pairing, always study the parents of the birds as well.

Don't forget to use the green bird, along with the variegated or marked bird, in reason, for to pair clear birds generation after generation is absolute folly, as you must always remember that the Norwich Plainhead is a bird of colour.

Quality and Its Reward.

Then, too, you must consider quality of feather. Most people visiting my room say: "What lovely quality of feather you have got." I think without doubt that excessive use of double buffs and the absence of green or variegated yellow birds are responsible for lack of quality. What little success I have achieved I put down to careful pairing, after, of course, getting a good start from our member, Mr. Curtis, several years back. In support of this I need only remind you that my birds have never been out of the cards at a pair show, and that on two distinct occasions they have had silver medals awarded them as pairs, and that at the last pair show they gained 1st, 2nd, and 3rd in a class of twenty-six pairs.

In conclusion, I would say to all novices like myself: Give more time to pairing your birds. Don't rely on inbreeding as a rock bottom foundation. Selection is the only reasonable and sensible course; but when selecting take into consideration the pedigree of the birds you are pairing. Without doubt you will then improve your stock and probably breed a winner, which is the ambition of each one of us.

Rochdale and District Affiliated Societies' Proposed Show.

SIR,—The above societies are holding a meeting on Sat., Nov. 21, 6.30 p.m., at Rochdale, when the question of holding an affiliated show will be brought forward. The idea is to get the societies together to see if we cannot get up a good show, seeing that there is none for miles around here this season. Our last one was a success, and I think we could make this one go even better. I hope that all societies affiliated will send a delegate, with their views on the question. We ought not to let these shows slide.

Do Scottish Bird Dealers Need Waking Up?

SIR,—In Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee, and Aberdeen, there are, it is true, many birdshops, but it is amazing to find how limited are the species they stock. My business takes me to the above towns occasionally, and as I have been in search of Nightingales, Blackcaps, Pekin Nightingales, and a few other fairly common species, I visited most of the birdshops, but not one of the above mentioned could be found. The Blackcap particularly, is a bird in great demand, as all those advertised in CAGE BIRDS for the past twelve months have been picked up, before my letter reached the advertiser. One advertiser informed me that he had over 70 applications for his Blackcap when advertised in your paper, and that 26 of these came from Scotland. Yet a Scotch birdshop can't be found daring enough to stock them. Why this lack of enterprise displayed by bird sellers in all these towns of Scotland? If you permit the matter to be mentioned in CAGE BIRDS it will, no doubt, have the effect of rousing our bird-dealers to the necessity of meeting public wants.

UP-TO-DATE.

The Bib of the Exhibition Siskin.

SIR,—At the recent show of the Manchester and N.C.O.S., Mr. Houlton, when he had finished judging the Siskin Redpoll, and Twite class, addressed a few remarks to his stewards re the four leading birds, which were as follows:—Twite 1st, Mealy Redpoll 2nd, Siskin 3rd, Twite 4. I did not hear all the remarks, but was in time to hear the following. Said Mr. Houlton, pointing to the Siskin: "A good Siskin, a grand bird; would have topped the class, but has no bib." I then said to Mr. Houlton: "The Siskin is mine, and that is the penalty I pay for showing my bird honestly." Mr. Houlton, in reply to me said: "Oh, you can moult a Siskin with a bib." As it was not the time for a discussion, I walked away and did not again have an opportunity of speaking to Mr. Houlton, as I had to leave the showroom to attend to my business.

The week previous to Manchester Show I exhibited this same Siskin under the same judge at Liverpool show, and Mr. Houlton placed it 2nd in a class of 36. It seems to me, from Mr. Houlton's remark, that I have lost both at Liverpool and Manchester because my Siskin has no bib. Well might the gods weep! I do not crave the indulgence of your columns, Sir, to vent a personal grievance alone, but to protest against Mr. Houlton's action on principle—a principle that affects all that tends to influence for good the British bird fancy. I consider Mr. Houlton has done my bird an injustice. If he was good enough to win, if he had a bib, he is good enough to win in October without a bib, and I will prove why. Yellow Siskins (mark, I write yellow) moulting at the right season do not show a well defined bib in October. If it is necessary, in order to win, to point, or trim a bib on my Siskin, then good-bye to the Fancy. I will have none of it. I will pass out, as many men have done, disgusted at the success of the fakers season after season, and the inability of our judges to trap them. If I leave the Fancy the usual taunt "disappointed exhibitor" cannot be thrown at me.

Mr. Houlton is a great authority, and a great judge. I have every respect for him, as the members of the Manchester and N.C.O.S. know. I am sorry, genuinely sorry, to have to write this, but I am out for a principle and where principle is concerned men do not matter much.

WILLIAM FAIRBURST.

The Bright Future of Our Hobby.

SIR,—I was pleased to see a letter under the above heading from our friend and well-tried show manager, Mr. Ramsden. I hope societies, where possible, will adopt the idea he brings forward in his letter, re societies holding shows not only for their members but for any fanciers living in the district, or for a certain radius. It will help keep the Fancy together, and encourage fanciers during these hard times. One difficulty, by what I can glean, in the holding of shows, seems to be in getting the railway companies to undertake to deliver the birds; that, of course, means fanciers must take and fetch their birds from the shows. I see the J. and P.O.S. decided, and wisely so, not to offer their cups this year, as some members lived so far from the show and could not bring their birds. I hope all other societies who have members living a good distance away will either do the same, or arrange to collect and send off by train any birds whose owners are unable to bring their birds to the show, so as to give all members a run for their money, and an equal chance in competing for cups, etc. I am pleased to see a good many societies are holding their shows as usual. I trust all who can will give them a good entry. I am pleased to see such good entries at some of the shows which have been held.

S. W.

Southern Fanciers and the Bradford National Show.

SIR,—I beg to draw the attention of fanciers of the South to the Bradford National Show, Nov. 21, and ask them all to try and enter a bird or two, especially in the Yorkshire section, and try and beat the Yorkshireman. Show a true friendly spirit in return for the way they send in numbers to our Palace Show each year. The birds will have every attention, for they are true fanciers. I can vouch for that, as I visited this grand show last year. I have been looking forward to going again this year, but shall be unable to do so. But if there were enough fanciers willing to go for the day trip, then probably we could get cheap tickets at 11 or 12 shillings return. I shall be pleased to write the Midland Railway and try. I shall be glad to have the views of fanciers. I hope all being well to send two or three entries to try my luck. I know that the profits of the show go to a good cause. The day at Bradford would be well spent, visiting the show and some of the fanciers' rooms; you get a real hearty Yorkshire reception.

C. R. BULLEN.

A Lark Food that Will Keep.

With Some Useful "Tips" on Feeding.

SIR,—In reply to W. Freeman in your issue of Oct. 3, re staple food for Skylarks, I feel sure if he sent to Messrs. W. A. Rudd for their Skylark food he would not try mixing his own. It is some years now since I tried mixing my own, and what a failure it was! I have one old Lark caged about six years, and for the past five years, or about that time, he has had nothing but the above Lark food as a staple. I mix it with hot water, but if I notice my Larks getting "slack," then I mix it with hot tea, which I find always puts them right. I also mix in chopped lettuce, or cabbages, or potatoes; and here I think a little explanation is required. I mix the food to what one may term a dry moisture with hot water, then take a good piece of floury potato and mix in with a fork. Then there is no trouble to get the birds to eat it. But if the food and potato be crushed up together, the result is a sticky mess, and the birds do not eat it unless driven to it by starvation. Clean water and a turf every day, or the turf on every second day, a few mealworms every day, any flies or smooth caterpillars one can get, and there is not the slightest trouble in keeping Larks in full song. Last year was the only year my old boy did not sing right through the moult. He has not stopped this year and he is clean through now and singing at "top notch." Keep the food in a tin in any dry place (I keep mine in the kitchen cupboard) and it will never turn sour.

A Successful Breeder of Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids.

Sir,—When at Forfar show I called to see Mr. James Mather, the well-known Hybrid breeder. It was Mr. Mather who bred the first Canary Bullfinch in Scotland. I might say that he has another record this year, having bred two of the same class out of one nest, and getting them reared by their own parents. They have not yet been on the show bench, but I believe they will make a name for themselves when they appear. G. MARLIN.

Warrington C.B.S. Seizes Its Opportunity.

Sir,—Would you kindly state in your valuable paper that, the military authorities having vacated our showroom, we have to-night unanimously decided to "keep the flag flying" and hold our open show on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 11 and 12, a month later than originally arranged. We are making an attractive schedule, enlarging the classification and offering plenty of specials, so we trust fanciers will rally round us and give us their heartiest support. We trust to see our show in the dates fixed column. G. M. NELSON.

The Hugh Moreland Testimonial Fund.

Sir,—Would those secretaries and others who succeeded in raising money for the above fund by the aid of subscription sheets which I sent them some time ago, kindly forward it on to me as soon as possible, as I would like to have this fund closed. I had intended waiting until the show season was well past, but owing to the war and so many shows being abandoned, I think it will be impossible to do anything farther in the matter now. Later on, Mr. Editor, I will send a list of names of all those who have been good enough to give Mr. Moreland birds or cages, or who have subscribed to the above fund. R. RENNIE, Sec.

Accrington Will Hold a One-Day Fixture.

Sir,—I am pleased to say the Accrington and Dis. C.B.S. has carefully considered the matter concerning open shows and the war crisis, and for the benefit of the Fancy we have decided to have a small open show on Nov. 14 (see advertisement) a one-day show, which will comprise 9 classes for Norwich (6 for champions and 3 for novices). We hope fanciers will rally round and give us a bumping entry, as we shall give liberal prize-money—10s., 6s., 4s., 2s., for a 1s. 6d. entry fee, and have a popular judge in Mr. E. Godley, of Rishton. Prize-money is guaranteed, and full prize-money over 9 entries. Fanciers can safely send their birds, as our society is composed of practical fanciers, such as Mr. A. Hirst, Mr. W. Crawshaw, Mr. W. Dormer, and many others well known in the Fancy. Birds will be dispatched to arrive home Saturday night. Accrington is very central (on all main lines). I hope for a bumping entry. We have received the patronage of the O.N.P.C. HERBERT WALSH.

The Cancelling of Wimbledon Show.

Sir,—Re the cancelling of the Wimbledon open show, I asked the secretary if he would be kind enough to let all members know (who are not in the know)—the reason the committee came to such a decision. I thought surely the secretary would be only too pleased to explain the difficulty. If he has not the time, or does not feel inclined to satisfy other members and myself, perhaps one of the committee who was at the meeting when the show was reluctantly cancelled could reply for him? Every member has a right to know why the committee came to such a drastic decision, and if the reason is simply explained (no doubt the committee think they had a good reason) members will no doubt be satisfied. But why keep things so dark? Have the committee exceeded their powers? I think they have. Other societies have cancelled their shows (which we all feel sorry about) but the members have been confided in. Why don't the Wimbledon committee do the same towards their fellow-members? A MEMBER.

Sir,—On Oct. 5 last I wrote to the Wimbledon C.B.S. resigning membership because they had abandoned their open show. This letter was said to be an "ill-mannered" one; but as regards that perhaps the sec. will—if he dare—send it to you and leave your readers to judge. At any rate after despatching that letter I naturally regarded my connection with the society to have ended, until I received on 9th ulto. a letter from its secretary, Mr. Griffiths, in which he informed me that the question of abandoning or not the open show was not finally settled, but was to be re-discussed at the next meeting at which he "would be pleased to see me," and that he would "hold my resignation up" till then. I duly presented myself at the meeting place yesterday (Nov. 2) in order—at the sec.'s invitation—to give my reasons why I considered it prudent, and even imperative, to hold an open show. But as I rose to do so, the chairman, Mr. Stoakley, after a few desultory remarks, read my letter and moved that my resignation be accepted. I do not for a moment doubt Mr. Griffiths' sincerity in inviting me to the meeting. But it seems certain that the chairman could not resist the pleasure—he confessed it was a pleasure—of subjecting me deliberately to the humiliation of a public expulsion because I had dared to give expression to the disgust which every decent fancier must feel at a society which is hoarding money to the tune of some £25, which should at this juncture be used in the interests of the Fancy. I, of course, sever my connection with the society with pleasure, for not only did the man who proposed an open show fail to even get a seconder, but even an offer to guarantee three hybrid classes was flung contemptuously aside without even a comment. Mr. Stoakley knew about the letter the secretary had written me, and I had a perfect right to expect him to receive me in the spirit conveyed by that letter. I certainly should not have attended the meeting if I had known it was only to be insulted by being publicly pilloried, and as my protest at the meeting was met by a threat to forcibly eject me from the room, I am compelled to adopt this, the only means which remains to me, to present my case to the members. A. R. COE.

The Shows.

EDINBURGH WESTERN.

Show, Artillery Hall, Grindlay Street, Oct. 31. Entries were in excess of last, despite the state of the country, and quality was of a high standard, especially in Norwich and Borders. Scotch Fancies were of average merit, and some very nice birds were shown. The winning yellow green cock belonging to Mr. P. McNiven was an outstanding specimen of the Bird of Circle, and was much admired. The winning Border yellow cock, Andrews, was a little gem all over. Norwich contained some real good stuff, and the society's sec. carried off premier honours with a buff varieg. cock which for type and quality it would be hard to beat. Judges were:—Scotch Fancy, Messrs. A. Paterson and R. Menzies (Edinburgh); Bord., J. Hamilton (Eskbank); Nor., J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh), in place of Mr. J. Holmes, who, we regret to hear, was laid aside with illness. The show was well patronised.

ALFRETON.

First Open Show, Oct. 31. The large clubroom at the Red Lion Hotel, in which the birds were staged is an ideal place for a show, and we were very pleased to see entries so good; the committee hope in future to have a still better show. A few catalogues would make it easier for the reporter and more interesting to visitors. Norwich were a splendid collection, and many good birds on view. Yorks. also were a grand lot. British and Foreign were a little disappointing, also Crests. Mr. A. Beardall is a most capable secretary and had things carried out in A1 style; he was well backed up by a hard working committee. Mr. A. Wilson judged, and gave general satisfaction.

NEW CROSS C.B.S.

Successful Show, Oct. 28, People's Palace, Deptford. Entries were slightly in advance of last year, and the exhibits generally were a wonderful improvement on previous efforts. This was particularly noticeable in Norwich and Yorks., both of which contained some excellent examples. Borders were exceptionally strong, and showed a high degree of merit all through; sp. for best bird in show going to Mr. Preece's charming buff hen, a real good one; spl. for second was won by Mr. A. J. Clark with a grand yell Yorks., and other special winners were Messrs. Burton Bros., Fuller, Joplin, Gunnell, Gardner, etc. There was a particularly fine class of Cinnamon and Green Borders, also some excellent Brit., in this section Mr. Preece's Bullie hen, put down in A1 condition, secured the honours for best Brit. The Show was ably managed by Mr. G. Burton, assisted by the Chairman, Mr. H. C. Humphries, and a good committee. We are glad to report that the society is going as strongly as ever. Mr. H. Norman judged.

Mr. Houlton's Classes. Selling classes were well up to the average, and winners had to be well worth their money to get in. Hybrids were numerous and very interesting, and birds of the highest merit were the order of the day. Several notable cracks held the leading positions. Brit. were represented by a fine entry of high-class birds, and condition played a great part in the winning selections. The foreign birds were grouped into one class, and made a very fine display. Mr. Houlton judged Selling, Hybrids, British and Foreign birds. SELL. 30s. (10): 1, Guy; 2, Mattinson; 3, Jones; 4, Thorpe; vhc, McTurk; he, Millward; c, Bailey. 20s. MUIRKIRK O.S.

Annual open show Oct. 31. The Temperance Hall is a splendid one, having good roof light. The birds were well and comfortably staged in the lesser hall. They were the attraction to the many visitors of this district who look on the bird show as the event of the season. Borders turned out in good numbers, under the fostering care of the president, Mr. T. Findlay, who was a host in himself. The sec., Mr. James Torbett, is the right man at the helm, and has little to learn in running a show successfully. The committee are all willing hands, each having his own place and carrying out his duties thoroughly. Entries were much the same as last year, although there were two British classes added which deserved more support. Mr. Watson's medal winner in Borders was a beauty for type, and was staged to win. Mr. A. Geddes, Dumfries, judged, and the awards were well received.

BORD. YELL. CK. (11): 1, Laidlaw, very typical, close in feather, rich even col.; 2, Kroezen, same type, very rich col., splendid carr.; 3, Dempster, nice weight and cond., fine jaunty carr., presses hard; 4, Mossie; he, Clark; c, Wilson. BUFF (9): 1, Watson, will be heard of again, one of the real type, staged in faultless order, wins Border Club's medal; 2, Mossie, not far behind, similar type, nice weight, grand carr.; 3, Kilpatrick, feathered like wax, pressing leaders hard; 4, Montgomery; he, Findlay. YELL. HEN (11): 1, Kirkhope, smart little lady, excels col., nice type, correct weight, in the pink; 2, Gibson, good and typical, fine back and wing carr., might perhaps have given way to 3, Dempster, as good in type and excels in condition of feather; 4, Alexander; he, Findlay; c, Millar. BUFF (10): 1, 2, Kirkhope, beauties, leader a perfect model, feathered like a Java, 2nd similar type, just fails feather; 3, Findlay, must have pressed hard, very typical, put down in usual A1 order; 4, Montgomery; he, Watson; c, Kilpatrick. VARIEG. CK. (6): 1, Mossie, nice yell. mkd., grand type and size, in the pink; 2, Millar, wee shade long, otherwise good; 3, Watson, grand three-pointed, splendid type, fine jaunty carr., very taking; 4, Findlay; he, Ferguson; c, Woods. HEN (8): 1, Gibson, very typical buff, good wing marks, fine cond. of feather; 2, Ferguson, nice cinn. marks, best of feather and carr., shows well; 3, Kroezen, buff, nice full type, grand head, carries wings well; 4, McCall; he, Watson; c, Dempster. EVEN MKD. (5): 1, McKean, grand yell., perfectly balanced marks, best of col., grand full head; 2, 4, Findlay, model for type and weight, grand feather and wings, worth his place; 3, Murray; he, Kirkhope. GR. OR CINN. (11): 1, 2, Wilson, a credit, leader a Gr. of great qual. and type, correct size, grand wings, very pure col., 2nd equally good Cinn., in splendid form; 3, Murray, tip-top Gr., purest of col., perfect head, wants time to make a stormer; 4, Rubie; he, McCall; c, Service. SELL. (5): 1, Findlay; 2, Montgomery; 3, Murray; 4, Kirkhope; he, no name. GOLDF. OR BULLF. (4): 1, Smart, Bullie, grand size, very early up in col., nice broad cap, pure bars; 2, Stobbes Bros., Goldie, rare Britisher, nice blaze, wants time; 3, Alexander, Bullie, fails to win in cap and bars, well up in size and cond.; 4, McCloy, most typical in class, grand bib and bars, lacks size. SISKIN, ETC. (3): 1, Smart, Twite; 2, Morgan, Redpoll, wild; 3, Stobbes Bros., Twite, A.O.V. (4): 1, McCloy, Hawfinch, perfect feather, fine deep face, nice jet bib, a model, except size; 2, Mitchell, another Hawf., fails col. to winner; 3, Murray, Bramble, shade wild; 4, Smart. CONFINED BORD. CK. (6): 1, Montgomery; 2, Millar; 3, Dempster; 4, T. Findlay; he, McKean; c, J. Findlay. HEN (5): 1, T. Findlay; 2, J. Findlay; 3, Montgomery; 4, McKean; he, Millar.

NORTH-WEST GLASGOW C.B.C.

Meeting, Blythwood Halls, Gt. Western Road, Oct. 22, Mr Gibb presiding over a good attendance. Sec. handed out schedules for annual show, Nov. 14, in above halls, where we hope to have a good entry seeing there are now six trophies to compete for, also medal for best bird, and quite a number of handsome specials. I hope members will take note of this and give us a large entry. Next meeting November 4, 8; final arrangements.—Wm. Loan, Sec.

FORFAR SECURES A RECORD ENTRY.

Fifth annual show of the Forfar C.B.S., Oct. 31, in the Masonic Hall, a very suitable place, being well lighted from the roof and free from draughts. Entries numbered 443—a record for Forfar. The secretary, Mr. D. Kerr, had everything carried through without a hitch, and was well backed up by a hard-working lot of officials:—President, J. Bowman; vice-president, C. EDINBURGH O.S.

Sixty-seventh annual show, Grindlay-street, Artillery Hall, Oct. 31. Entries were a shade down, but what was lacking in numbers was made up in quality. The "Coronation Cup" for best bird was won by Mr. G. C. T. Hope with a lovely yellow cock of grand size and substance, a beauty all over, which should do some winning for its owner at coming shows. The varieg section was poorly represented in the 10 classes provided, but several nice birds were staged. A new feature at this show was that no exhibitor could win more than three specials, and this seemed to work very satisfactorily. Judges were:—Scotch Fancy, Mr. J. A. Stewart, Glasgow, and Mr. Wm. Thorntor, Edinburgh; all others, Mr. R. Craig, Edinburgh.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

VARIOUS (Winter).—(1) This query is rather vague. If you mean which is the best breed for song it is undoubtedly the Toller. No other breed can approach it for song pure and simple; but it is by no means the most stylish or best-looking bird. (2) Sorry, but I cannot single out any dealer for mention here. It would be most unfair to all the rest. Watch our advertisement columns for a few weeks, and deal only with a firm with a reputation to maintain, or adopt the Deposit System in negotiating a deal. (3) If the lacquer gets worn off an all-brass cage, verdigris is practically certain to form on parts of it which get splashed with moisture, and then the bird is apt to pick it off, in which case it is not only injurious, but poisonous to a dangerous degree. (4) For details of general management you cannot do better than get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, or for details of the various breeds House's "Canary Manual," 1s. 2d. post free, both from our Manager.

DIETARY IN COLD ROOM (Perplexed).—Assuming the room is reasonably free from cold draughts and damp the following dietary will keep them in good hard and robust condition, and they will come into condition naturally at the proper time in the spring. As staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition make up a mixture of two parts each of hemp, millet and niger; one part each of black rape, teazle and broken groats; a quarter part each of gold of pleasure and maw; and an eighth part of linseed or chopped sunflower seed. All parts by measure. Give half a teaspoonful of this mixture per bird every third day, and on the intervening days give a similar quantity of egg food, or, as substitute, bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each); No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Finch," No. 24 "Green Canaries." on one day, and a morsel of sweet fruit, when green salad is out of season, on the next. When the weather is very severe you may give the seed mixture every second day, and the soft food on alternate days, and omit the fruit or green food for the time being. Offer the bath twice a week in fair weather early in the day.

NOT MOULTING (E. P.).—It is only reasonable to expect something to be more or less seriously wrong with any Canary which is given "plenty of linseed every day." If you are expert at the job, or could get a friend who is to do it for you, I should advise, as the first step, giving the bird a hand-wash, using the water a trifle warmer than is usual. Keep in a comfortable temperature, and follow the washing with two vapour baths, with an interval of three days between each. To give these put the bird in an open wire cage on a table, place a mug of nearly boiling water on the table near the cage, and cover all over with a shawl or woollen wrap. After fifteen minutes or so remove the mug of water, but leave the cage covered for half an hour or so. See that it is not exposed to chill afterwards. During this treatment give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, slightly dusted with flour of sulphur, and finally sprinkled with soft sugar every second day, and otherwise feed the same as advised to "Perplexed" this issue, and in the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, five of syrup of saffron, and as much chorazot of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece every second day. At the end of eight or ten days, if the bird has not started to moult, stop the drugs and move the bird into a decidedly colder room, but take care that it is free from direct cold draughts or damp, and let it remain there for a week, by which time it should have broken well into moult, when you may take it back to its usual place and allow the moult to follow its own course.

HAS IT MOULTED? (Anxious, Ashton).—If, as you say, the bird was only six weeks old when you bought it, and has never moulted since, it must still be in its nestling plumage, which I hardly think is likely to be the case. Probably it has moulted gradually, and the process escaped your attention. The moult it should have gone through this autumn may be deferred until the spring, and if you do not require the bird for breeding, this is not of sufficient moment to warrant any attempt to force a moult upon it, so as the bird keeps in such good health and song you would be best advised to leave well alone. Keep it under healthful conditions, and in a bright position where the air is always pure and fresh, but not draughty, and feed as you will frequently see advised in this column, and I do not think you need worry about its apparent failure to moult just at the proper time. If you really want to get it to moult now, you may treat it as you will see advised to "E.P." in this issue, but my advice is—don't.

AVIARY OR CAGE? (Snipe).—It's only by courtesy that a structure the size you name can be called an aviary. It is merely a fair sized cage. One cock and two hens is the limit you can expect to keep in it with the least chance of successful breeding. If you wish to use it for any greater number than this, you must put in one or two partitions, dividing the space into two or three equal parts, and then you may keep a hen in each space and run a cock with each hen in succession during the breeding season. One cock would do for either two or three hens under these circumstances, as you would only need to allow him to remain with each one until she had gone to nest, then remove him, and leave the hen to hatch out and rear the young by herself.

MOULTING AND CAGE (Miss Nicholson).—(1) If the bird seems to have made a fairly complete change of plumage, as it certainly has had time to do, treat as follows for a month, which should set matters right, but you must not expect the bird to sing until the effect of the moult has passed off. For staple diet, give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry, and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in 1/2, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Give a spray of water every or a morsel of sweet fruit three or four times a week. Dissolve half a drachm of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in an ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this mixture in the drinking water every second day, preferably on the days you do not give the prepared sponge cake. (2) Any cage of sufficiently large dimensions would answer the purpose of allowing a single Canary a fair amount of exercise with some pretence of using its wings. A so-called Crystal Palace aviary would be almost ideal for the purpose where a bird had to be caged. But if space is a consideration a box cage 16 or 18 ins. long, 10 ins. high, and 10 ins. from back to front, not overstocked with perches, would do very nicely, and may be readily accommodated practically anywhere.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by H. NORMAN.

SISKIN WITH INJURED EYE (F. W. Ware).—You should have taken your bird in hand some time ago; three months is a long time for a bird to be ill without giving it proper attention. If the sight of the eye is destroyed, I fear you can do nothing for it, but I would advise you to carefully examine it and find out if it can see or not; after that try with a strong glass and see if there is any injury. It may be that the bird has contracted a habit of rubbing the eye on the perch or wires of the cage, which causes a certain amount of inflammation. Dissolve half a teaspoonful of boracic powder in half a cupful of fairly warm water, and bathe the infected part daily. Make the powder into a thick paste before adding the bulk of the water. Give the bird an aperient of as much Glauber salts as will cover a sixpence, dissolved in two tablespoonfuls of water. Feed him on a fairly liberal supply of green food and wild berries, and a little soaked seeds occasionally. You had better cage him off separately for a time.

GOLDFINCHES AND LINNETS (Perplexed).—You do not give the sex of your bird, which makes a difference. If they are mixed you will no doubt have trouble, but three cock birds or three hens as a rule agree very well, although at all times the males indulge in a little sparring. In case of injury to one, or the others taking a dislike to him, you must remove him, but generally speaking you will find three birds agree together better than two. Your stock seed mixture should consist of teazle 4 parts, canary 3 parts, hemp 2 parts, linseed and summer rape 1/2 part each. Give a few grains of sunflower seed every day, and if you can procure a good brand of wild seed mixture, let them have a teaspoonful three times a week. A spray of green food should also be offered, and wild food collected when in season. (2) The same remarks respecting the keeping of three birds together apply to the should consult Howton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Habitats" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each); No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Tit," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Mould British Birds." Linnet, although as a rule they are not very quarrelsome. If you want them for song they would do better caged separately. The following is a good stock mixture: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, rape, charlock and linseed 1 part each. A teaspoonful of the wild seed mixture may be given twice a week. When the birds are a little bit down in condition a little lightly cracked hemp of good quality will soon bring them into song. They are fond of chickweed and shepherd's purse, both of which can still be collected. We publish a Nutshell Booklet on the Goldfinch, and one on the Linnet, both of which would be useful to you, price 2d. each, post free. Your Canary query should have been sent on a separate paper; it will be answered by Mr. St. John.

WHAT BIRDS? (Chief Engineer).—Taking into consideration the spot where your birds were caught and the description you send, there is every indication that they are Snow Buntings. The beak of a Bunting is very different to that of the Finch, the lower mandible shutting on to the upper at a sharp angle at the base, and inside the upper is a knob, which is absent in the Finch. Snow Buntings vary a good deal in plumage according to the season, so much so that they have frequently been mistaken for other species. They are Arctic birds, living in the extreme North, beyond the Northern Forests, but migrate during the autumn and are sometimes caught in England in the winter months. As a cage bird canary seed is their chief food; of this they never appear to tire, and they will get fat on it. They are rather sluggish birds and need a big cage to induce them to take exercise. They are not of very much value, although a good bird occasionally gets in the prize list at some of our best exhibitions.

THRUSH FOR SINGING (N. Wolf).—If you treat your birds well and keep them tame they should soon begin to warble and he in full song soon after Christmas. Of course, one cannot say definitely what a certain bird will do, as so much depends upon treatment and the inclination of the captive; some take to cage life from the first and quickly repay their attendant by some charming melody. (2) The sample of food sent is of excellent quality, and should keep your warblers in tip-top condition. Do not forget a little insect life for the Thrushes, and let them bathe as frequently as possible.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

GREY PARROT (Mrs. J. S.).—You give me no details, save just the one bare fact; you had better send 2d. to our manager for the "Grey Parrot" Nutshell, and diet and treat your bird generally according to the directions given therein. As to the present trouble, there is really no data in your query for me to make a diagnosis from, but put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking-water daily, till the bowels have been well opened, then give one dose per week for another two or three months. Also get some syrup of hypophosphites from your chemist and put half a teaspoonful in the drinking-water twice a week, but not on the same days as you are giving the magnesia—you had better continue this for several months. Report progress in three weeks with full details, please.

TO GO WITH BUDGERIGARS (W. Walters).—It all depends on the size of your aviary. When not too crowded Madagascar, Blue-winged and Black-checked Lovebirds usually agree well with Budgerigars. Very few of the Finch tribe are safe with Parakeets, whether large or small, however, both the Grey and the White Java Sparrow are quite able to hold their own, also Magpie Mannikins, but I have heard of occasional maiming of the latter. Pope and Crested Cardinals are quite able to look after themselves amid such company, but these would require a little fruit and one or two live insects (mealworms or beetles; etc.) per diem per bird; otherwise the diet usually supplied for Budgerigars would meet the need of all species named above.

AILING BLUE-FRONT (E. J. Col).—Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking-water daily till the bowels have been well moved, then give it twice a week for a month, afterwards give a dose as required to keep the bowels moving quite freely without undue looseness. Get your chemist to weigh you up some bromide of potassium in 3 grain lots, dissolve one of these in a little syrup, stir it into two tablespoonfuls of water and give no other drinking-water for the day till all this has been taken—say you give 3 doses as above on three successive days for three weeks and then report progress. If the bird is at all thin or weak then give the hoiled maize twice a week and prepare so: boil till soft, pour off all water, then put over the maize half a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion and allow this to soak in before supplying it to the bird. I should also give it a little honey and borax daily, direct to the mouth, from the end of a stick, this will help to keep its mouth and throat clear of slimy saliva—the stick should be cleaned each time before being inserted in the paste. Some fruit should be given daily.

GREY PARROT (H. R. McM.).—Such cases are by no means uncommon, and probably the bird bared its breast from maternal feeling, just before depositing the eggs; but, of course, there is a possibility that it is developing the vice of feather pulling, as some aged (also young) ones do. Get a bottle of Spratt's Pennacura and lightly anoint the bare place therewith. Give the bird one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia once a week, or oftener, if the droppings are at all stiff; the bowels should move quite freely without undue looseness. Continue the spraying, but once a week will be frequent enough now cold weather has set in. As a tonic, half a teaspoonful of syrup of hypophosphites in the drinking water twice a week is as good as any. In addition to seed, give fruit daily and the supply of grit and cuttlebone should be continuous. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever: but, ripe fruit, plain cake, biscuit, stale crusts and nuts can all be given to vary the diet. Of course a constant supply of mixed seed must be maintained. Report progress a few weeks hence.

BUSINESS WITH ME

is not a matter of bubble and squeak; there's no question of cutting down quality to price. My one aim is to supply thoroughly serviceable articles at prices consistent with highest quality; so that intending purchasers may assure themselves of this fact, I send everything I sell on approval on the understanding that if the article is in any way misrepresented by me, or that a better article may be purchased elsewhere at anything like the same money, my goods may be smashed up or destroyed in any manner, and I undertake to refund the whole of the purchase money. Clap nets, made from superfine 3in. mesh netting, 3 yards long, 5 1/2 feet deep, and 4 feet ply, 4/- pair; ditto, 4 yards, 5/-; 5 yards, 6/-; 6 yards, 7/-; 7 yards, 8/-; 8 yards, 9/-; 9 yards, 10/-; 10 yards, 11/- per pair. Clap nets consist of two nets to the pair, each net guaranteed of above measurement, and are fitted complete with pegs, poles, and lines, ready for immediate use. Loose netting, specially knitted for bird catching, same as used in above nets, 3in. mesh, 7 feet deep, 3d. yard; 9 feet deep, 4d. yard; 12 feet deep, 5d. yard. Specially strong netting, for use on rough ground and making Sparrow nets, 3in. mesh, 10 feet deep, 5d. yard, post free. Self-acting spring net traps, 24 by 18 ins., 1/2, ditto, 18 by 14 ins., 11d. each, post free. Please note, my net traps have no old-fashioned board arrangement about them, they are by far the most effective traps on the market, can be baited for hard and softbills at same time, and call-bird may be used inside them if desired; single trap cages, 6d.; double ditto, 1/-; treble ditto, 1 3 each; the above trap cages all have separate compartment for call bird in addition to traps stated. Patent self-setting and self-acting trap cages (reg. No. 28927), guaranteed to automatically reset immediately each bird is caught, 1/6 each; genuine Japanese bird lime, absolutely strongest lime made, guaranteed to catch and hold any bird to Rook size in every weather, 1lb. 6d., 3lb. 10d., 1lb. 1/6, sample 3d.; all post free. Sparrow nets, on 19 feet bamboo poles, 6 6 complete; first pegs, 8d. each, post free; absolutely everything required by catchers always in stock; send stamp for complete list, which also gives hints on net making. Practically every professional bird catcher in the kingdom gets his living with articles supplied by me, and what they think of them the following letter will show:—"Sutton Rookery, near Long Sutton, Wisbech, Sept. 9.—Sir,—Last season I caught 400 cock Linnets in 5 hours, and averaged 107 cocks per day right through the season, and every bird was caught in nets supplied by you. I have had other nets for 16 years, but they are useless compared with yours. I can catch more Linnets in one day in your nets than I can in any other I have (and I have several makes) in a month. Your nets do not frighten the birds like others do and I get my living during catching season with nets, so I require the best. Yours are the best that are made and not only best but cheapest. I shall want another in about a week.—Yours, J. C. Ball." (Mr. Ball claims to be the largest catcher in a county noted for its catchers (Lincolnshire), so he certainly knows what he is talking about.—W. Gore.) The above letter may be inspected here at any time, and I offer £10 to anyone that can prove that this or any other testimonial I have ever published is not genuine and unsolicited. (1828)

"Publishers in the past have done much to make the average person loathe and detest the sight of a dictionary, but the volume under notice is an excellent example of what a good dictionary should be. The editors and contributors bear names illustrious in literature and education. . . . It is handy in size, the type is large and legible, and the contents are reliable and trustworthy."—THE CLARION

they are in fact. In these times of deep and solemn patriotism every man is proud of our national language and literature, that golden bond of sweet English speech which makes the Empire one. This beautiful book is a worthy memorial and treasury of that language. It contains the latest words. It is indispensable to every man and woman.

GOLDFINCHES, BULLIES, LINNETS, ETC.
We are patronised, and have been for 40 years, by every leading Crystal Palace Judge and exhibitor, so our reputation stands 2nd to none. Editor of this journal has seen scores of original testimonials for birds we have supplied, which have bred hundreds of winning Mules. So if you intend buying British birds, buy from us, who have hundreds each week to pick from. We don't send out birds straight from the field; all are well on seed; guaranteed. Real English cock Goldfinches, 1/6, 2/- each, three 4/-, six 7/-; extra picked for mulling, 2/6, 3/- each, three 5/-, six 8/6; cock Bullfinches, 2/-; hens, 1/-; Lancashire cock Linnets, 8d., 10d., 1/- each, three 1/6, six 2/3; twelve 4/-; cock Larks, 8d., 10d.; caged off, singing, 1/-, 1/6, and 2/-; three 1/4, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; Redpolls, 6d.; picked, 9d. and 1/-, six 1/6, twelve 2/6; cock Chaffinches, 9d., 1/-, and 1/6 each; Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/3; cages, for any of above, from 6d., 3d., 1/-, 1/3, 1/6, and 2/-. Seed grinding mills, 1/6; send for catalogue of everything. Established 50 years; Sandiford, Bird Specialist and Judge, Preston, Lancs.; also 89, Scater-st., Shoreditch, London.

LET ME REMIND YOU THAT ALL BIRDS SOLD BY ME are guaranteed to be exactly as described, and are sent on approval at my risk on the distinct understanding that unless they realise your every expectation and give perfect satisfaction they have only to be returned, as per "Cage Birds" rules, and the whole of your money is promptly returned without question or comment. I have an exceptionally large stock of genuine Worcestershire cock Goldfinches in perfect health and condition, and thoroughly on hard seed, at 1/6 each, three 4/-, six 7/-, twelve 12/-, two dozen, 22/-; specially selected larger cocks, for shows or mulling, and guaranteed now in song, 2/- each, three 5/-, six 9/-, twelve 16/-; few extra special clean moulted cocks, in full colour and superb condition, 2/6, 3/-, and 4/- each; hen Goldfinches, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 4/-, twelve 7/-; grand lot of cock Bullfinches, in full colour, 1/6 and 2/- each; exhibition specimens, 3/-, 4/-, and 5/- each; hen Bullfinches, 1/- and 1/6 each; magnificent stock cock brown Linnets, all guaranteed clean moulted with nut brown backs and rose red breasts, 8d. each, three 1/6, six 2/6, twelve 4/-; specially picked larger cocks, for show, mulling, or contest singing, and warranted now in song, 1/- each, three 2/6, six 4/-, twelve 7/-. SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2/6, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

Club Reports.

RUNCORN B.B.A.

Meeting, headquarters, Nov. 10th. Mr. Guy chair, before a large attendance. Two new members were made. Messrs. Farrall and Helsby. Decided to have a meeting on Nov. 20th, to arrange for stewardship and other show business.—E. Rom, Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN C.B.S.

Meeting, Oct. 24, Mr. Cresswell chair. A good turn up of members got through a deal of business. Mr. T. Dixon, of Bedlington, will judge annual show, Dec. 12. Open Linné class, 1s. per cage. Prizes: 8s., 4s., 2s., 1s. Entries till day of show. Give us a good entry. W. Thompson.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Nov. 7, Lockhart's, 55, Brigat. Mr. Walton chair. Arrangements were made for member's show, Nov. 14, when members' challenge cup will be competed for. We have received a very good entry. Judges, Mr. Walton, Leeds, and Mr. Roebuck, Wakefield, being all that could be desired. We are looking for a successful time. Visitors and old friends heartily welcome; open at 6—11. Best, Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

The following societies have accepted our patronage: Accrington and Dis. C.B.S., Nov. 14; Halifax O.S., Nov. 20, 21; L.C.B.A., Nov. 26, 27, 28; City of Birmingham C.B.S., Dec. 2, 3; Huddersfield O.S., Dec. 12; Scottish National C.B.S., Dec. 31; January 1st; Doncaster C.B.S., January 9. I hope members will give their heartiest support to these shows. All club specials, cups, bowls, etc., are now in full competition. Subs. are now considerably overdue; please attend to this important item. T. Rhodes, Sec.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

Meeting, Spencer Hall, Oct. 26, Mr. W. Shakespeare chair. The programme for the evening was a washing demonstration by Mr. W. Knight, and a competition, several members competing for the medals given by the society. Mr. Knight awarded Mr. W. Shakespeare the champion medal, and Mr. P. Johnston the novice. Afterwards Mr. Knight gave a splendid demonstration, describing the best methods of procedure which proved most instructive and interesting. Votes of thanks to Mr. Knight for entertaining us and to Mr. Shakespeare for presiding were passed unanimously. J. Hyde, Hon. Sec.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING C.B.S.

Meeting Oct. 31, Davison's Temperance Hotel, with a fair number present. Business relating to annual show Nov. 28 at Queen's Head, Sunderland-street, was gone into. Mr. Wm. Reid, Pallion, will judge. We have changed our headquarters to the Queen's Head, this being unavoidable; in future meetings will be notified at the above. We have also decided to run our show on a reduced entry fee owing to the slack times caused through the war, and have the same classification as last year. So, members, rally up at next meeting, Nov. 21, with a bumper entry, and make our annual show a great success.—R. H. Dixon, Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting Nov. 7, Co-operative Hall, Low Weetwood, Mr. Geo. Barkes chair. Two new members were elected—Mr. Theo. Robinson and Mr. R. Campbell. We shall hold a meeting Nov. 21 (a week before annual show), when we shall expect all members to bring their entries. Members who cannot see their way clear to attend may send their entries, when we shall accept them up to Nov. 23; no entries will be taken after. Will members try and get as many specials as possible and bring same to next meeting? Trusting everyone will make as many entries as possible and try to make the show a success. Subs. must be paid in full before members allowed to compete.—Jameson and Johnson

BRIDLINGTON, DRIFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, Nov. 3, 20, Prospect Street, to make final arrangements for members' show, Nov. 19, in the "Mart." Owing to the great war cloud hanging over our land, we decided not to hold an open show, but to keep up the interest of the Fancy a members' show will be held this year, and each one desires to make this a great success, and of interest to the district, and will not spare time or birds in so doing. There will be five classes for Yorks., buff nlf., yell. nlf., ditto flighted, and hen any age, any col.; five classes Norwich, same as Yorks.; two Brit., and one Mule or Ilyb. This latter class has been guaranteed by F. E. Brown, Esq. The entrance fee is 6d., prize-money 3s., 2s., and 1s., on sliding scale if less than 12 entries in class. An extra class (songsters and cages) has been added, which will be of great interest to visitors. The exhibits in this class are given by the members, to be sold by auction at close of show, and all money realised will be given to the relief of the Belgium refugees now abiding in the district. There is no entrance fee, and the class will not be awarded any prize cards, so as to effect the sale in any way. Anyone wishing to give a songster or cage, please inform sec. Two new members are added, and one proposed. We have a few more vacant chairs.—J. Chadwick, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Special general meeting, Crown Hotel, Hill Street, November 4, to consider a proposal of the chairman and vice-chairman to rescind the resolution passed at the previous meeting, fixing open show prize-money on the sliding scale, and to offer fixed prize-money as last year. It was explained to the members that since the show season opened, those societies holding shows had grand support, and from information volunteered from other sources, it was thought we should be making a mistake if we adhered to the sliding scale. There was a large attendance, but the proposition was carried with only one dissentient. The Chairman asked for special prizes, and there was a hearty response. The committee will meet Nov. 11 to allot same. Secretary was instructed to ask Mr. J. H. Roe to judge, in addition to Mr. Robson. Agreed to accept the offer of the O.N.P.C.C. patronage at our show, the society accepting their ruling as to definition of an amateur, although not in accordance with our rule. Letters were read from gentlemen approached to judge Roller Canaries at the show on Dec. 10th, and Mr. Tomlinson was elected. A few good special prizes were promised, which we hope will shortly be increased. In response to a question regarding inter-club competition from one of the members, it was explained that the secretary wrote West Bromwich Society under a misapprehension, as it was understood Wolverhampton Society was not holding a show.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

General meeting, Nov. 2, Mr. Washer chair. The following were elected stewards at the forthcoming show: Messrs. A. G. Washer, S. White, G. J. Slade, and P. Snellgrove. Members requiring tickets for sale should apply to the secretary.—W. L. Page.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE C.B.S.

General meeting Nov. 5, Shields Cafe, Mr. Crawhall chair. Correspondence read from our old friend Jam. Craig, who is at the front, Cage Buns, and Messrs. J. Murton, Dixon and Reid. Mr. Hyslop was elected a member, and Mr. Laidlaw appointed show manager for show Nov. 14, Co-operative Hall. Decided to charge 3d. for catalogues not marked; if marked, 6d. Mr. Crawhall gave a washing exhibition, which was greatly appreciated. J. W. Reed, Sec.

RICHMOND (Surrey) C.B.S.

Meeting Nov. 2, St. John's Hall, Richmond, Mr. Phipps presiding over a good attendance. Two new members were elected—Messrs. E. Randall and E. Birch. We have had to abandon annual show owing to finances, but are arranging an evening show to take its place. Meeting for same to be held on Nov. 23, at headquarters. Many subs. are now due, and may be paid to the chairman or myself. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chair.—Geo. Birch.

ABERSYCHAN C.B.S.

Special meeting Queen's Hotel, Oct. 30, Mr. E. J. Parry chair. An address was given by W. T. Conch, for which members gave their best thanks. Decided to add three Border Fancy classes to our annual show schedule; the committee ask that Border fanciers will give us their best support. In order to help the relief fund members decided to give a number of birds to be sold by auction on the evening of show and give the full money to the Relief Fund. We have a 10s. cash special for best bird in show, also a number of other specials.—F. Sweeting.

ROSSENDALE ROLLER C.S.

Meeting, Nov. 3, final arrangements were made for annual singing contest, Nov. 20 and 21. Mr. Hesling, Wakefield, will judge champion young birds; Mr. J. Tomlinson, Newcastle, novice young birds, and Mr. G. Waring, Bury, amateurs any age and champion any age. Entries will be extended up to Nov. 16. We invite all Roller fanciers to send us some entries. Schedule: Champ. young birds, prizes 10/-, 6/-, 4/-, 2/-; also in novice young birds, open any age, and amateurs any age. Numerous specials in every class. H. Wantling, Hon. Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Special meeting Nov. 9, Mr. Allsopp presided. The meeting was called to discuss the Welsh National Society, also the advisability of altering our members' show to open radius show. After Mr. E. J. Banks had presented the case of the Welsh National C.B.S. it was unanimously agreed that the Cardiff Society become affiliated. A long discussion took place re our show, and it was finally agreed that we hold a radius show, with prize-money on the sliding scale. We shall not be holding another meeting this month; if any member can act as steward at the show please let me know.—E. Thomas, 48, Craddock-street, Cardiff.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Having had correspondence with the Sec. of Gateshead C.B.S. in regard to having two extra classes put on to suit our cup patronage, they have agreed to put them on for us, so our full cup patronage will be given to them; there will be three silver cups for competition best bird, best young Crest, and best young Crested, a gold medal to go with each cup, besides medal for best bird in each old class, and a silver medal for best young birds in the tickets after the winner. Gateshead C.B.S. show will be held Dec. 19, and we hope Crested fanciers will send a bumper entry.—Geo. Dobson, Sec.

NORTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting Oct. 28, Mr. W. Curry presided over a good company. Mr. C. Wake Walker elected a member. Decided that young bird challenge cup be competed for at Gateshead show Dec. 19, and to give two silver spoons—one champ., one novice—for most points three highest birds, also a 5s. special given by Mr. E. Hemmerson for best young bird bred by a novice. Table show was held, five classes each section, judge Mr. T. C. Crawhall.

ANY COL. CK.: 1, Laidlaw; 2, Hemmerson; 3, Wellsbury; vhc, c, Morrison; he, Holden. HEN: 1, 2, Holden; 3, Curry; vhc, Morrison. UNFLIG. YELL.: 1, 2, Wellsbury; 3, Holden; vhc, Morrison. BUFF: 1, 2, Holden; 3, Curry. UNFLIG. HEN: 1, 3, he, Morrison; 2, Richardson; vhc, Wellsbury; c, Laidlaw. NOV., ANY COL. CK.: 1, 2, Richardson; HEN: 1, 2, Wood; 3, Richardson. UNFLIG. BUFF CK.: 1, 2, Wood. Thanks were given Mr. Crawhall for coming to judge. Next meeting and another table show Nov. 18, judge Mr. A. Hermiston. Subs. now due.—F. W. Laidlaw, Sec.

NEWTONGRANGE C.B.S.

At the recent meeting, the Sec., Mr. Wm. Bryson, intimated his resignation, as he had enlisted in the 8th Royal Scots. The resignation was received with regret. The President and all the members spoke in laudatory terms of the good work Mr. Bryson had done, and trusted he would soon rejoin. Unanimously resolved to relinquish the services of Mr. John Nelson, 85, Dean Park, Newtongrange, as sec. It was the feeling of the committee that we should hold the annual show on Dec. 19, but before a definite decision could be arrived at it was agreed to ask the Sec. to write the Hon. President, John Callender, Esq., for a donation, as it was deemed inadvisable to approach the general public in the present crisis. Eight new members were placed on the working committee, and an honorary committee was drawn up, the President and Secretary being given powers to add to their number. Sec. was instructed to write fanciers for specials. Replies from judges were read accepting their positions. They are Messrs. James Calderwood (Kilnarnock), Norwich; James Mason (Peebles), British; and B. Douglas (Loanhead), Borders. Sec. was instructed to write Cage Birns about our advertisement, to ask the local printers for estimates for schedule and catalogue, and to engage the hall and make arrangements about staging. Decided to alter or make addition to the classification at next meeting. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the President.—A. M. Gardiner.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

The show of the Hamilton, Cadzow Oak U.B.S., arranged for November 14, has been postponed.

We have abandoned our show this year, writes Mr. W. A. Broadley, Hon. Sec. Warwick C.B.S.

In Broken-cap Silver Lizards at Manchester N.F.O.S., A. Bradley won 2nd, not Blamer as reported.

Allow me to congratulate Mr. T. H. Smyth, the sec. of Ulster O.A., on the quick dispatch of birds and prompt payment of prize-money, writes Mr. C. A. O'Reilly.

I am clearing all my stock, cages, etc., as I have not the time to look after them properly, although I am sorry to part with them, writes Mr. W. J. Baker (Norwich).

We have a total of over 370 entries at the annual show this week-end, which, personally, I think very good considering all things, writes Mr. V. Wynn, hon. sec. City and Suburban A.C.B.

OBITUARY.

MR. H. G. ATTRIDGE.

It is with great regret I have to chronicle the death of Mr. H. G. Attridge on Nov. 4, after four years' patient suffering, writes Mr. John Tyson. Personally I do not favour the usual practice of eulogising the labours of any man after he has gone; much better speak of him as his services deserve during his lifetime, so that he may at any rate pass away in the knowledge that his labours were appreciated. Here has passed one of the very first members of the L.C.B.A. (one with whom I worked for over 20 years), a member who expended considerable time in the interests of the Association in particular, and the Fancy in general. He was joint secretary of the L.C.B.A. when they held their first open show at the Royal Aquarium, and until the break down in his health attended assiduously to the staging and wants of the exhibits at every subsequent open show. One or two nights' rest were nothing for him to sacrifice for the comfort and well-being of the birds; yet he has gone without any tangible appreciation or recognition for the many services he rendered to the Fancy, especially in London. To his sorrowing widow and only son I tender my sincere sympathy, which will be shared by all with whom he came in contact. In view of my opinion, I have purposely avoided allusion to his many achievements; suffice it to say that he was a "jolly good fellow," a very hard worker, and one of "The Old Brigade."

Prize-money has been paid in respect of the following shows. Anyone overlooked should apply to the respective hon. secs.: Muirkirk, Ulster, East Lothian C.B.S., Manchester and N.C.O.S., Brechin.

Through a printer's error, writes Mr. A. Smith, the foreign bird class was omitted from the schedule of the Codnor Park and Eastwood C.B.S. It should read: "Class 47, any variety foreign." Schedules are now ready; anyone overlooked should apply to the secs., A. Smith, Lynn Croft, Eastwood, and G. Lees, Thompson Street, Langley Mill.

The Boscombe and Dis. F.A.'s third annual show (this year members only owing to war) is to be held in the Curzon Hall, Curzon Road, Bournemouth, writes Mr. E. T. Haines, the hon. sec., on Nov. 18th, 2 to 10 p.m., judge, Mr. W. Hayson (Southampton). We hope the fanciers in Boscombe will rally round and make 1914 our most successful season.

Our Halifax Show is being held on the dates (Nov. 20 and 21) originally arranged, writes Mr. H. Clegg, the sec., and it is no fault of the Halifax O.S. that the show clashes with the Bradford National Show on the Saturday. If you think fit to mention this, I shall be pleased, as it seems a pity for two big shows to clash, when so many dates are vacant owing to the war. Schedules of Halifax Show have been posted; will anyone overlooked kindly apply at once.

I heartily thank all the exhibitors for their support, writes Mr. J. Crabb, the sec. of Brechin Show.

The City and Suburban A.C.B. is one of the societies doing their little bit towards carrying on "Business as Usual," and their annual show held to-day and to-morrow (Friday and Saturday) at the Church Institute, 60, Paddington St., Marylebone (just round the corner from Baker St.) offers London fanciers a welcome opportunity of getting their minds off the war for a few hours. Such a chance of recreation should not be missed.—(Advt.)

A £6 10s. Hen.

I have sold my buff Norwich hen, first at Oxford show, for £6 10s., to a gentleman at Newcastle-on-Tyne, writes Mr. A. Lovegrove, Henley.

Good News on Tyneside.

Fanciers generally, and those on Tyneside and in the North in particular, will welcome the news that Gateshead C.B.S. is holding an open show on Dec. 19. The officials intend to do their very best to merit a record entry.

Patriotic Fanciers at Bute.

We have been informed that the Bute Fanciers' Association are going on with their annual show; all profits to go to the British Red Cross Society's Funds. They have engaged Mr. W. Connelly (Glasgow) to judge the cage birds, and he is handing over his fee to that fund.

Pontypridd Will Not Cancel.

Pontypridd fanciers have decided to hold their show on January 6th, and devote the profits, if any, to the Red Cross Fund. This will be good news to the Fancy in S. Wales, as Pontypridd had been announced amongst those which were to be missing this season. Mr. C. A. House will again judge.

Changes of Address.

Mr. J. H. Jones, hon. sec. City of Birmingham C.B.S., has removed from Church Lane to 211, Park Rd., Aston, B'ham. Mr. W. B. Watkins, hon. sec. Tredegar C.B.S., from Whitworth Terr. to 63, High St., Tredegar. Mr. W. Hutchison, sec. Glasgow C.B.A., from 163 to 167, Hospital St., Glasgow.

STILL THEY COME!

Record entries continue to cause the cup of happiness of show secretaries to brim right over.

Last week-end, as will be seen from our reports, practically every big fixture broke its own record—England, Scotland, and Ireland all being represented, namely, by the Leicester, Brechin, and Belfast exhibitions.

Further, we hear that at least two of the shows being held this week, Reading and Old Shildon, have surpassed previous bests.

The Reading secretary writes: Glad to report we have a record entry. Hope fanciers will "keep the pot boiling," and make it likewise for other societies.

The Old Shildon secretary writes: "Thanks to CAGE BIRDS we have a record entry, including birds from the best exhibitors."

Cardiff's Commendable Course.

It was unanimously decided at a special meeting of Cardiff C.B.S., writes Mr. E. J. Davies, that we hold a 50-mile rail distance show instead of a members' on November 28th. We have arranged with the railway companies to have all birds dispatched in time to reach their destinations same night. We trust all fanciers within the radius will give us full support.

A Correction.

By the misplacement of a comma, our printer gave a somewhat absurd meaning to one of the last week's advertisements of Mr. W. Rudd, the well-known bird specialist, of Norwich. His offer of songsters should have read: "Extra large hatched, and caged off singly" (not with the comma after large).

A Judge "Held Up."

After judging the Belfast Show last week-end, writes Mr. C. A. House, I wondered if I was getting back to England again at all. The naval powers held our boat up for nine hours; thus I had a twenty-four hours' journey. No one knew why we were held up, but there were all kinds of rumours—mines, Germans, etc.! 'Twas Saturday, and neither of the English or Scotch boats was allowed beyond the mouth of the harbour till Sunday morning.

Sale in Luck's Way.

I am pleased to inform you that Mr. W. Proctor-Pearson has given to the Sale Society a solid silver champagne cup, to be won outright, at our show on November 27 and 28, by the member showing the best bird, writes Mr. H. Whitney, the Ass't. Sec. Anyone by paying a subscription of 4s. by the next meeting night will be able to compete for this handsome trophy. Mr. C. A. House has been engaged to judge in the unavoidable absence of Mr. Bronskill. We hope exhibitors will rally round us and help to keep up the records of Liverpool and Manchester.

The Exhibitors Opportunity.

Wanted, a Wonderful Show.

Benefit the Red Cross Society;
Benefit Your Hobby; And Reward
Hard Work and Pluck.

THE London Cage Bird Association has done many excellent things in its long and honourable career to merit the goodwill and admiration of the Cage Bird Fancy, but we venture to think that fanciers will agree with us when we say that nothing attempted in the past excels the good work its members are undertaking this year—we refer, of course, to the Great Show due on the 26th, 27th, and 28th of the present month.

The difficulties and alarms into which the Cage Bird Fancy was plunged owing to the unfortunate outbreak of war, need not be dwelt on—bird-lovers know only too well how sorely their hobby, and its exhibition side in particular, has been hit. Not that bird-lovers have borne up other than with commendable pluck; they have done surprisingly well.

To go on with a fixture of the magnitude of the Horticultural Hall Show, involving a certain outlay, and possible loss, of some scores of pounds, required, however, in the early part of the season a faith far above the ordinary. All the greater credit, then, to the L.C.B.A. that they decided on "business as usual."

And in this credit the National British Bird and Mule Club and the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League equally share, for they have in the most sportsmanlike manner come to the aid of the L.C.B.A. by undertaking to divide the responsibilities. In this way it has been made possible for the Cage Bird Fancy to have its great Autumn Show in London—a show the loss of which would have been severely felt, for it has gained a great reputation as a practically ideal exhibition, while its educative influence on the general public is undoubtedly very considerable, a factor, this, of the greatest moment to the welfare of our hobby.

This Horticultural Hall Show, then, deserves well of the Fancy. And we strongly appeal to the Fancy to accord it record support this year. If further incentive be needed, then the fact that any profit made will go to the funds of the Red Cross Society should supply it.

The management is in the able hands of the "old war-horse," Mr. John Tyson, whose activities have done so much, and in so many directions, for the Fancy. Nothing that experience and foresight can suggest will be left undone to ensure the safe collection and dispatch of exhibits, while well-known experts cater for the different varieties while they remain in the hall, and the quality of the seeds and foods is guaranteed by the fact that Messrs. Trower and Co., supply them.

Further, every penny of the prize-money is fully guaranteed, in the Canary section by the L.C.B.A., in the Hybrid and British sections by the N.B.B. and M.C., and in the Foreign section by the F.B.E.L.

As to the merits of the classification, our review of the schedule given below will speak. It is excellent at all points; and special classes for novice exhibitors have not been forgotten. The list of special prizes, too, is very good. Copies of the schedule should be written for at once to Mr. Tyson, at 169, Sloane St., London, S.W., and the entry form therein should be filled and returned to him by Wednesday next, Nov. 18th, at latest.

Let it be a bumper entry, fanciers. The officials have had great difficulties to contend with, and neither of the three promoting societies can reap, nor wishes to, one penny of pecuniary benefit from the show—you can reward them by providing a record collection of birds for the public to see, so that the gate-money may produce a nice little sum to hand over to the Red Cross fund.

It is especially asked that owners of Foreign and British birds will help; the hall is ideal for housing them, and it is these sections that the general public find peculiarly attractive.

REVIEW OF THE SCHEDULE OF THE HORTICULTURAL SHOW.

The magnificent schedule, despite the altered circumstances, is much on the same generous lines as last year, and maintains the features which were then so noticeable. The prizes are very liberal, being 10/-, 6/-, 3/-, 2/6, 2/-, 1/6 and 1/- for a fee of 2/-, and all prize-money in every class is guaranteed, the L.C.B.A. being responsible for the Canary section, the National British Bird and M.C. for the British and Hybrids, while the Foreign section is under the auspices of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League.

Yorks. have 7 champ., 7 nov., 4 Greens and 1 limit (30/-) classes. Mr. F. Easterling judging the champions, and Mr. R. L. Crisp, the remainder. Lancashire 4, Crests 7 (1 Nov., 1 Limit £3), C.B. 7 (1 Nov., 1 Limit £2), Cinnamons 2, Lizards 7, A.O.V. 1, Mr. J. Robson judge. Borders 32 £2 Greens, 3 Nov.) judge Mr. D. Jenkins. Norwich Plainheads 8 champions, judge Mr. E. J. Rippon, 6 Novice, and 1 Limit (30/-), judge Mr. A. W. Curtis.

Open British have 22 classes. In Finches and Buntings Mr. C. Prior judges even numbers, and Mr. A. Silver the odd numbers, while of the insectivorous classes Mr. Silver takes the even numbers, and Mr. J. Robson the odd. There are 4 Novice British classes, judge Mr. A. J. Marley.

In Hybrids there are 10 classes, one being for pairs matched for breeding; judge Mr. J. Robson.

Continental birds have a class provided for them, after a lapse of some years. The Foreign section contains 31 classes, the same wonderful classification as last year, the prizes being 12/-, 6/-, 4/-, 3/-, 2/-, 1/6, and 1/- for a fee of 2/-. This section is organised, and the prizes guaranteed by the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League; judges are Messrs. D. Seth Smith, R. J. Watts, and H. D. Astley.

Two selling and 4 stock classes, judges Messrs. Mason, Davies, and Tyson, and numerous members' classes make up the grand total of 190 classes. Besides the liberal prize money, no less than 271 specials are offered, including a two guinea silver cup presented by Mrs. Warren Vernon, and to be won outright, for the best small non-fed insectivorous bird.

Entries close Nov. 16, and should be made to Mr. J. Tyson, show manager, 169, Sloane St., London, S.W.

LEEDS ORIGINAL LINNET & C.C.

Quality contest, Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York Road, Nov. 7. 18 birds faced the judges, and some splendid singing was heard. 1, the club veteran, Tom Stead; 2, A. Richardson; 3, Stamey. Judges, Naylor and Lacey. Nov. 8, 26 birds were hung to a full house. T. Johnson was again to the front with his famous "Jack Johnson," who has now won 27 firsts out of 29 hangs; 2, Stamey; 3, Tom Stead; 4, Sam Johnson. Judges, Barcastle, Naylor, and T. Chadwick.

The Canary Club opened in the evening with the first weekly sing to a crowded house. 14 very good birds were hung, and the old bird "nuts" were delighted. 1, Sam Barcastle; 2, Lipman; 3, divided by Lipman and Hodgson. Judges: Sissons, Naylor, and Clark. Don't forget the Roller contest every Sunday at 8.—W. Naylor, Sec. (Kindly write only on one side of each sheet of paper.—Ed.)—Advt.

LEEDS.

Quality singing contest, Old Bird House, Sannera' Arms, Buslingthorpe, Nov. 8, 19 birds sing. 1, Ward; 2, Binns; 3, shared by Hullen and Laycock. Judges, Sellars and Blackburn.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec. Linnet quality singing contests, Plasterer's Arms, Skinner Lane, Oct. 31. 1, T. Johnson; 2, Ward; 3, Laycock. 16 birds; judges, A. Lorrain and J. Maddon. Nov. 1, 20 birds; 1, 3, Bamfield; 2, Green. Judges, Lorrain and Maddon. Nov. 7, 18 birds. 1, T. Johnson; 2, 3, shared, Laycock and S. Johnson. Judges, 1, Maddon and Charles. Nov. 8, 19 birds. 1, 2, Bamfield; 3, Wigfield. Judges, Lorrain and Maddon.

T. Johnson won here two Saturdays in succession, and wishes it to be stated that he is a member of the Albion Club and our club. The changing of his bird's name (Musical Box to Jack Johnson) was done by some unauthorised person. Let us have fair play, and stick to the different clubs' titles as commenced with after the King's Head and the Prince Albert disbanded, namely, The Skimmers' Arms (the old bird house), The Albion Hotel Club, and Leeds Linnet, and C.C.—T. Johnson and Alf Lorrain.

Leeds Linnet and Canary Club hold high-class Roller contest at Plasterer's Arms, Skinner Lane, North Street, Nov. 15, commence at 7 p.m. All Roller Club members, old friends, and new, made welcome.—(Advt.)

'CAGE BIRDS,' 154, FLEET ST., LONDON, E.C.

How Our Scheme Has Been Received.

Hospital Authorities Delighted With the Offer of Singing Canaries.

It is a source of unbounded gratification to ourselves, in which our readers will surely join, to find that CAGE BIRDS' Scheme for presenting pet singing Canaries, cages, and food, to convalescent homes and hospitals housing wounded soldiers and sailors, has met with instant and widespread appreciation.

The extracts given this week from letters received concerning the scheme establish the latter beyond question, and the pleasure that the prospect of receiving a sweet-voiced Canary has given to so many hospital authorities will be shared by those bird-lovers who have so generously made it possible for us to carry through so happy an idea.

! Points to Observe.

We shall arrange for the despatching of the first consignments of birds, etc., next week. We would request readers whom we notify to forward either birds or cages to let us know at once, if for any reason they are not able to get away their parcels to the precise time we shall specify, it being important, of course, that birds should not be received at any hospitals before the cages have been delivered. Remember, too, that all cages should be sent fully fitted (i.e., with perches and seed, and water vessels ready for the birds to be popped into them. Pack them adequately, too, to obviate possibility of damage in transit.

We should, by the way, be glad to receive further promises of suitable singing cages. We have more birds than we have cages to put them in, and when our scheme becomes as widely known as we intend it to be, we anticipate many more applications for these pet birds. There must be many convalescent homes, for instance, with which we have not yet got into touch, where one will be received with delight.

What do Societies Say?

Will you not help kindly, reader, in this good cause? We have had several sums of money sent us with which to purchase cages. Maybe, if you have no cage available, you, too, would care to send a donation. We already have the birds, the food (by Messrs. Capern, Ltd.) and the sand (by Messrs. Trower and Co.).

It occurs to us that societies might wish to be identified with our scheme. If any club cares to donate any sum towards it (5s. will buy a first-rate cage) it will be gladly received. The names of all donors are neatly inscribed on a card sent with every gift. How nice it would be to see in, say, Cardiff (or other) hospital, a cage inscribed "Presented by the members of the Cardiff Cage Bird Society." Think it over, societies; but do it quickly, and write us at the earliest opportunity.

SOME APPRECIATIONS OF OUR OFFER OF CANARIES.

Dreadnought Hospital (Greenwich).—It is most kind of you to have thought of this charming way of pleasing the wounded; accept yourself and convey to your readers our grateful thanks. Our men will much appreciate your gift. It is well-known that soldiers and sailors collect pets wherever they go; and if they should recognise personal friends amongst the donors of the Canaries, no doubt this fact will give them additional pleasure.

Second London General Hospital (Chelsea).—We shall be most delighted to have the Canary. The patients will, I am sure, thoroughly appreciate it. We have 520 beds and the hospital is in two sections, so if you can at any time send us another Canary we shall be very pleased. [We shall be delighted to see that two birds are forwarded.—Editor "C.B."]

London Hospital (Whitechapel, E.C.).—Very glad to take advantage of your kind offer of presenting a Canary for the entertainment of the wounded and others in the hospital wards. A gift of this kind affords the greatest possible pleasure. We will see the bird is well looked after.

Third Northern General Hospital (Sheffield).—We shall be very pleased indeed to receive the Canary so kindly offered. You may be sure it will have a very good home, and be of great interest and pleasure to the soldiers. Thank you very much.

Fifth Northern General Hospital (Leicester).—Delighted to receive a Canary. It will be a source of great pleasure, and of interest, too, for our wounded soldiers and the sisters and nurses. Many thanks for your kind offer.

Third Western General Hospital (Cardiff).—We shall be delighted to have a Canary and cage, especially as there are no conditions attached to the gift. It would give great pleasure to the soldiers and sailors in our hospital. The difficulty will be how to divide a Canary into four sections. We are most grateful to you and to your readers who have helped to give us such a nice gift. [It has been a pleasure to promise 4 Canaries and cages.—Editor "C.B."]

Military Hospital (Fort Pitt, Chatham).—We would be glad to get three Canaries for the benefit of our wounded—we have over 600 here to date.

Royal Herbert Hospital (Woolwich).—Shall be glad to accept a Canary. You may be sure it will be well looked after.

Victoria Hospital for Children (Chelsea).—We offered 40 beds to the Red Cross Society, but they have not yet been accepted, and therefore the Institution is carrying on its work as much for the benefit of the sick children of the poor. Should you still care to present a Canary and cage for the amusement of the children we should be very pleased to accept it. [We have, of course, had the greatest of pleasure in allocating a Canary and cage to this most deserving hospital.—Editor "C.B."]

City of London (Victoria Park, E.C.).—Most pleased to accept the gift of a singing Canary and cage your readers so kindly offer.

Fifth Southern General Hospital (Fawcett Road, Southsea).—Delighted to have a bird for the hospital; it will be much appreciated and welcomed by the patients.

National Hospital (London, W.).—We shall be delighted to have the gift you mention of a singing Canary. We are quite sure it will be a source of great delight to our wounded soldiers and patients. It is very kind of your readers.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital (London, E.C.).—Only too pleased to avail ourselves of the kind offer. We are sure the gift will be greatly appreciated.

First London General Hospital (Camberwell).—We gratefully accept on the patients' behalf the offer you kindly make of a singing Canary in cage. This hospital of 520 beds is in two separate buildings, so that if it were possible to send two birds, one could go to each building. [We shall have the greatest of pleasure in forwarding two birds.—Editor "C.B."]

Second Western General Hospital (Manchester).—Very glad indeed to have a singing Canary for our men.

Fourth Scottish General Hospital (Stobhill, Glasgow).—Very glad to receive two birds with cages and seed.

Fourth Northern General Hospital (Lincoln).—Many thanks for your kind offer; the wounded men will be delighted with a pet bird.

First Scottish General Hospital (Aberdeen).—We are quite sure the gift will be much appreciated.

London Homeopathic Hospital (Bloomsbury).—Accept our very warm thanks for the gift.

Royal Victoria Hospital (Netley).—Your gift will be welcome.

Middlesex Hospital (London, W.).—We beg to accept with many thanks your kind offer of a Canary and cage, etc. It will be much appreciated.

Fourth Southern General Hospital (Plymouth).—Very pleased to receive the gift of a Canary.

Third Scottish General Hospital (Stobhill, Glasgow).—It is extremely kind of you to offer us a singing Canary, and we shall be very pleased to have it.

First Northern General Hospital (Newcastle-on-Tyne).—Very pleased to accept the kind gift of a singing bird and cage for the soldiers' wards; thank your readers very much for their kindness.

Glasgow, Queen's Park and Dis. C.B.S. to Hold Annual Show.

Sir,—At our monthly meeting the members arranged to give four open classes for Nor., and 9 classes for Yorks.; prize-money, 10s., 5s., and 2s. 6d. for 1s. 6d. entry fee. The show will be held in the Victoria Halls, 476, Victoria Road (adjoining Queen's Park Station), on 5th December. It is hoped that with the above prize-money and a good list of specials, exhibitors will do their best to send a few entries, and thereby help to make the venture a success. Schedules are now ready. ROBT. HEGGIE, Sec. 27, McLellan Street, Mount Florida.

Recipes for Making Birdlime.

Sir,—Having been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for over 16 years, I should be obliged if any fellow-reader would kindly give me a recipe how to make bird-lime, as I have lost mine. J. H. WRETTAKER.

Sir,—I would be glad if any reader of your valued CAGE BIRDS could tell me how bird-lime (Holly Bark) is made; or can I buy a book or get the recipe anywhere?

A CUMBERLAND READER.

(Our correspondents and other readers needing the same information can obtain it from CAGE BIRDS' 1914 ANNUAL, in which is an article giving full information on making and using bird-lime, both holly bark and other kinds. We have a few copies left, price 8d. post free, or 6d. from newsagents and railway bookstalls.—Editor "C.B.")

The Bib of the Exhibition Siskin.

Do Judges Place Too Much Value On It?

Sir,—I beg space to reply to Mr. Fairhurst on the subject of the bib of the exhibition Siskin, and I hope that he and all your other readers will understand that I desire to echo the note on which he concludes, viz., that it is a question of principle, and not of persons. Mr. Fairhurst's assertion that "yellow Siskins do not show a well-defined bib in October" is too sweeping. That the majority do not reproduce the bib during or immediately after the moult is undeniable. Some recover it more or less gradually as the season advances, and some appear to definitely lose it. But there are others—truly a few only—who come through with a distinct and decided bib; hence a judge is entitled to look for a bib, and to penalise the exhibit for its absence in accordance with the value he attaches to the point.

On the question of actual faking, I regret that I cannot be so positive, and if I venture to state my views for what they are worth, it is with much diffidence that I do so. There has always been a good deal of loose talk on the subject of faking British birds, and the evil has probably always been greatly overstated. It must be a very delicate operation to tamper with the plumage of a British bird, in order to "improve" any point, and yet to escape detection; and personally I confess that I am at present not convinced that it can be done. A faked bird is almost inevitably brought to book sooner or later, and likely enough the taker will prove to be an exhibitor who has been influenced by the "loose talk" into believing that faking is indispensable to winning, though I am quite prepared to hear from those who support the view that faking is rampant that he did it too clumsily.

Anyhow, it is not impossible for honest exhibitors to win with birds honestly shown, as Mr. Fairhurst himself and hundreds of others have proved. Moreover, men of principle are a powerful asset to the cage bird fancy, and it cannot be doubted that they dominate it. May I commend this end of the argument to Mr. Fairhurst?

C. PRIOR.

Sunderland Will Do Its Best for Fanciers.

Sir,—The Sunderland C.B.A. intend to go on with their open show, as previously arranged, for January 15 and 16, in the Miners' Hall, Monkwearmouth. The classification will be larger than last year, and will include 8 Nor., 8 Yorks., 4 Crest, and C.B., 9 Bord., 4 Liz., 3 Selling 1 Gift, 2 Mules, 8 Brit., 2 For., and 34 members, making a total of 85 as against 81 classes last year. Three prizes have been given for the open gift class by members, proceeds of the sale of the birds to be given to the local relief fund. The liberal classification has been made possible by some members guaranteeing the society against loss on certain classes. We hope fanciers will send along entries, and so save having to call upon the guarantors. Prize-money as in previous years (10s., 5s., 3s., 2s.), with diplomas, etc., for each section; in fact, everything will be as last year. We trust that exhibitors will help us to the best of their ability in making this show a success in our determination to "keep the flag flying" in the Fancy. We have the patronage of six specialist clubs (probably seven), together with gold and silver medals from the president and secretary of the N.C.C. for competition amongst their members. The judges will be Messrs. T. C. Crawhall (Norwich, etc.), J. Johnston (Borders), and G. Wilson (British).

Musselburgh Goes Ahead!

Sir,—I am pleased to say that Musselburgh annual show is to be held as usual. Half of our members have joined Kitchener's Army, but by the help of friends and fanciers we hope to have a successful show.

An Appeal to Members of the Yorks. and Lancs. B.B. and M.C.

Sir,—I beg to draw the attention of members of the Yorkshire and Lancashire B.B. and M.C. to the Bradford National Show, in Drummond Road School, on November 21st. It is to be regretted by everyone that it is not on as large a scale as before, owing to the war, but it is held for the same object, the benefit of the poor bairns. I hope our members will send as many birds as they can in the classes provided for them. The schedule is printed in CAGE BIRDS this week. There are two extra specials given for members of this club.

T. H. INMAN, Hon. Sec.

The Fancy in Western Canada.

"We Have Some Good Stock Here," Says Our Correspondent.

Sir,—Being an interested reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, I could not help reading and being interested in the letter signed by Mr. G. E. Nutty from Saskatchewan. Like Mr. Nutty, I have been a resident of Western Canada for some years now; in fact, it is about eleven years since I last saw my native land, so that I should be a little conversant with the manners and customs of my adopted land. However, it was birds I intended to talk about, so will proceed. Before going on I just wish to say that I regret that I do not know where Mr. Nutty is located; otherwise I would write direct to him.

In Winnipeg here a number of fanciers got together and formed a society known as the "Winnipeg and District Cage Bird Society." This was last February; since then we have held two shows, one a members' show on the 1st of April last, and the second during the Canadian Industrial Exhibition, July 13th to 16th. We had a fair entry on both occasions, and, what is much better, we had a lot of good birds out. We are looking for bigger things to happen, especially in November, when we hold our first open show. We have about thirty members, and hold a meeting every two weeks. The reason I am stating these facts is that I want to show that Western Canada is beginning to take an interest in the cage bird fancy. I am not exactly conversant with conditions in Saskatchewan, but I am with those in Manitoba, which, after all, is not so very far away, and I want to say that right here in Winnipeg there are a number of fanciers who have in their possession birds that no old-country fancier would be ashamed of. I would be only too willing to put Mr. Nutty in touch with any or all of these fanciers, and if he should happen to be in our city at any time, I should be glad to show him around, and convince him that he can get as good birds right here in Western Canada as he can get elsewhere.

With reference to the local Canaries he speaks of, I can quite understand that the best are not sold, there being a great many so-called "German Rollers" hawked around at prices which pay their vendors well. With this we have no complaint; people will always get what they want, and if they want good birds and demand them they can easily obtain them, but good birds cannot be bought in this country for 10 dols. to 12 dols. per pair. I question if 12.00 dols. would buy a good cock bird here, knowing as I do that good Yorkshire stock cost about 25.00 dols. to 40.00 dols. a pair.

I am more than glad to have been able to answer the letter of a brother fancier in Western Canada, as correspondence from this quarter of the globe has been rather scarce. I would ask brother Nutty to cheer up, and if he will only correspond with myself, I will put him touch with a number of fanciers that can supply him with a good stock of birds of any breed he may desire. What is more, we will be glad to have Mr. Nutty a member of our society, or if that does not suit him we will be glad to supply him with any information he may desire that could help him to form a society where he is living.

Tredegar Show Will Be Held.

Sir,—At a meeting of the Tredegar and Dis. C.B.S., held Saturday evening, it was unanimously decided to hold our open show on January 14 (as previously arranged), judge, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, Liverpool. I trust exhibitors will give us their whole-hearted support, without which we cannot hope to make it a success.

W. B. WATKINS, Hon. Sec.

Are Self-Greens Handicapped Against Clear Yorkshires?

Sir,—Will you, or one of our judges, kindly answer through CAGE BIRDS the following questions, viz:

- (1) "Is it fair competition for clear Yorkshires and self-green Yorkshires to compete in the same class at First Feather shows?"
- (2) Which has the advantage?

W. B. WATKINS.
Hon. Sec. Tredegar C.B.S.

(Speaking generally, we should say that any "advantage" would lie with the Clear Yorkshires; if this is so, then it can hardly, of course, be held to be "fair competition" for the self-greens.—Editor.)

Gorleston Show Held in a Good Cause.

Sir, The local fanciers have decided to hold a mixed show on November 26, open to Norfolk and Suffolk, and to give the whole profits to the widows and orphans of those Gorleston men who perished in the naval disasters (in two families alone there are 16 children; two born since the deaths of their fathers).

I have been asked to act as secretary, and we have been able to secure the Drill Hall—all other halls being in use for troops, etc. I will send further particulars and schedule within a day or two. I may add that lady friends have come forward and arranged to hold stalls (refreshments and general), the whole proceeds to go to above families.

Good News for Lizard Canary Fanciers.

Sir, The committee of Sunderland Show have decided to considerably augment the Lizard classes at their show to be held in January, 1915, and the following should ensure a good entry: 1, Gold Clear Cap; 2, Silver ditto; 3, Broken Cap, any Colour; 4, Hens any Colour. Mr. J. Riseborough will give 5s. for most points, and at time of writing Mr. Reid has offered 2s. 6d. also as a special, for which he will not compete. Whispers of one or two more specials have reached me, but full details will be found in the schedule. We look for a generous entry from all Lizard breeders, and hope this will tend to give the necessary fillip to the head way this variety is making in the North.

Will the Border Fancy Outstrip the Norwich?

Sir.—Referring to Mr. W. E. Cobb's remarks before the City and Suburban A.C.B. (see last week's CAGE BIRDS) re Border Fancy Canaries, I venture to write this protest with the object of defending a variety that will certainly be more popular than the Norwich in the near future. In his opening remarks Mr. Cobb supposes the Border Fancy is next in favour to Norwich and Yorkshires. He need not suppose at all. I should like to refer him to Mr. Norman's article in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL for 1914.

He then says he will dismiss it at once, because the bird is too small for him. What if it is? He finishes with a disparaging remark calculated to destroy the intention of any beginner to take up this variety. I should like to know if there were any Border Fancy men present on this occasion, and why he was not asked to withdraw such remarks? At all events, perhaps he will use more discretion in his next ten minute venture.
